McCarran-Walter Immigration Act Law at Midnight

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new United States immigration act, which has plowed a rough seas since its launching five years ago, becomes law at midnight tonight amid signs of fresh storms ahead in the new Congress.

Known as McCarran-Walter General Immigration Act, it was passed over President Truman's veto and roundly attacked by President-elect Eisenhower. Its sponsors are Senator Pat McCarran (Dem. Nev.) and Francis E. Walter (Dem. Pa.).

When Congress started working on it in 1949 the legislation was aimed at simplifying the laws which say how foreigners may enter the United States for a visit or to live. The ensuing controversy has turned up some pretty complex angles.

Full of Defects Claim

Attorney-General James P. McGranery has said it has been "full of" "...n bigulities and defects." McGranery, who supervises the immigration and naturalization service, forecast serious problems of administration and enforcement.

McGranery and other administration spokesmen already have started rewriting the law, as have Truman and Eisenhower and leaders of many church and professional groups. Some foreign countries, too, are expressing resentment.

Particularly assailed has been the section which retains the present system of allotting quotas based on the national origins of the U. S. people in 1920.

The immigration service last week published a 136,000-word revision of the statutes, making them conform to the new law. But its layers said amendments and revisions will be tested in lawsuits.

While keeping the national origins quota system, the new law removes all racial barriers to admission to citizenship, although with small quotas to some countries. Previously some Asiatics were barred.

Some of the other features:

The quota system is based on 1924 and admitting 155,000 aliens for permanent residence each year, also adds a priority setup. This gives first call on half of each country's quota to each month to persons with special skills needed by the United States.

The ban on admissions of Communists and other subversives is made more specific. But there is no prohibition against Nazis, Fascists, Falangists or Communist persons who otherwise meet admission requirements.

Alien seamen aboard ships must be carefully screened before going ashore in the U. S.

A master index of all border crossings, reported at 100,000,000 last year counting "repeats," will be kept in Washington.

Aliens convicted of two or more offenses, other than political, involving as much as five-year sentences, will be excluded.

Former King Likely to Lose His Nationality

CAIRO (Reuters)—Former King Farouk will lose his Egyptian nationality under a new law against corruption, it was learned authoritatively Monday night.

He will be stripped in absentia for "abuse of constitutional prerogatives" and "corruption of political life in Egypt."

The government law passed Sept. 16 also confiscates the property of Farouk, living in exile with his family in Italy, and removed from the throne by the army coup last July of Gen. Mohamed Naguib, now prime minister and commander-in-chief.

Revolver Identified As Death Weapon

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — A .38 calibre revolver recovered by divers from the Buffalo river was tentatively identified in court Monday as the death weapon in the holdup-slaying of a Buffalo jeweler Dec. 9.

William C. Fitzgibbons, chief of detectives, said the gun appeared to be the one that fired the shot that killed Joseph Mraz.

Ballistics tests are to be made on the pistol today.

Three Canadians have been arrested in connection with the holdup and Hurd's death.

Two of those are in custody in Hamilton, awaiting extradition proceedings. They are Maurice O'Dell, 27, and Walter F. Griffin, 36, both of Hamilton.

Police in 13 states and Ontario are seeking Ralph J. Grubasich, 32, of Windsor, Ont., the third man.

Daring Piece of Defensive Field Work Carried Out By Princess Pat Infantrymen

By BILL ROSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

IN KOREA (CP) — Canadian infantrymen have built hardened wire barricades within 75 yards of Chinese Communist outpost positions.

Probably the most daring piece of defensive field work yet carried out here was accomplished by the newly-arrived 3rd battalion Princess Patricia Canadian Light Infantry.

It was a job to be done by men who wouldn't think too much about the accompanying hazards—tailor-made for fresh troops.

The Patricias were holding a position that has taken almost as much punishment as Little Gibraltar. It is a curved ridge known as "The Hook."

It has been defended by United States marines, the Black Watch regiment and by Canadians. The Hook is about 150 feet high, but so shaped that the enemy can observe it both front and rear.

Regularly shelled and mortared, it takes persistent work to keep it defended in order.

Lay Minefields

Lt.-Col. Herb Wood of Toronto, Patricias commander, decided there must be minefields and barbed-wire barricades ahead of it. Any there before had been blown to bits by enemy shelling.

He assigned Lieut. Herb Pitts of Guelph, Ont., to organize the job. Pitts took his men down to the battalion's rear echelon and drilled them for four days in wiring techniques. Sgt. Maj. Winslow Collins Lake, B.C., was assisted by 32rd field squadron, RCE to teach them.

"Our teams were organized as 'blundering wiring crews,'" said Pitts. "Only a few go out under our own artillery and mortar and we also had a supplementary noise program arranged to divert the enemy's attention.

"We were allotted 1,000 artillery rounds, available on demand, each time we went out.

Standard engineer procedure calls for wiring-party teams to build 100 yards of triple concertina fence by day, in 30 minutes.

By the time Pitts considered his men ready, one crew could string 100 yards of wire—at night.

The other two could do it in 32 minutes. The team comprised 16 men and a corporal.

The area wired off the first night was 400 yards from the Chinese. The night was cold and moonlit. Pitts' men had to chop through frozen solid to a depth of one inch, and it was a bit of a problem to keep the noise down to what the men did it."

But he reports they at work than there was an explosion and Cpl. F. A. Mullin of Montreal was killed. Pte. J. Batesh of Swift Current, Sask., was wounded and died before he could be carried into the lines for treatment.

With experience of mind, Pitts knowing they were in an old minefield, said: "That was a mortar. Keep at it. We've got to finish the fence."

"Later I told them it was a mine," he said. "They weren't shocked. They accepted the fact that we had to take the risk to get the job done."

Tough Assignment

Having familiarized themselves with the "real thing," they were ready for their second assignment on tough. It was built below a hill on which the Chinese were known to keep an outpost.

But the men extended two fingers toward the Canadian position and the job was to barricade just below the fingers. There was snow, the ground was frozen and it was cold.

"It was just like wiring in the back end of a bath-tub," said Pitts.

The group was not bothered. It is assumed the Chinese either didn't man their outpost that night, or else were delivering harassing fire.

By the time they'd finished the

Nine Members Of Cabinet Will Be Out of Town

OTTAWA (CP)—Whether it's a sign of the political times or not, only nine of Prime Minister St. Laurent's 21-member cabinet will be absent from the capital during the Christmas holiday.

And like the prime minister himself, most of them won't be far away. Mr. and Mrs. St. Laurent plan to spend Christmas at their home in Quebec City.

All the opposition leaders are staying in Ottawa. M. J. Coldwell, CCF leader, and Solon Low, Social Credit chief, plan no holiday trips at all. But George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, and his family may visit Guelph after Dec. 25.

Defence Minister Claxton and Finance Minister Abbott will spend the holiday here.

Fisheries Minister Sinclair has left for a holiday at Vancouver and Solicitor General Campney leaves shortly, also for Vancouver.

Postmaster General Cote will holiday at his home at Three Rivers, Que., State Secretary Bradley in Newfoundland, Veterans Minister Lapointe in Quebec City.

Mines Minister Prudham will spend Christmas with his mother at Kilbride, Ont.

Health Minister Martin, just back from New York where he led Canada's United Nations delegation, has gone to Windsor, Ont., but will be back in Ottawa for Christmas.

Revenue Minister McCann will go home to Renfrew.

Given To Ferras

CALGARY (CP) — Paul Desmond Mannion of Eastwood, Ont., has been sentenced to two years in Prince Albert penitentiary for car theft. He pleaded guilty to the charge Monday.

Mannion, who has a long record of convictions for fraud, illegal wearing of uniforms and deceptions, false pretenses and escaping custody, told the court he had pleaded guilty "to get it over with" but that he would appeal.

He rented a car in Calgary, drove to Edmonton and sold it there to a used car dealer, evidence showed.

Patricias had barbed-wire barricades right close to the enemy's positions, and had built behind them the nucleus of others, which could be extended in either direction later on.

Holiday Delicacy

Suckling pigs are becoming an increasingly popular dish for the holiday season say Toronto butchers. It is a European dish introduced by new Canadians. Five-year-old Meredith Clarke helps to hold a 15-pound suckling pig — which sells for about $12 — in her father's store. — (CP Photo.)

Christmas Snarl Ends Happily When Santa Escapes Arrest

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Judge J. A. Legris issued a warrant for the arrest of Santa Claus today.

The judge didn't know it was Santa Claus he was ordering arrested. Santa for his part, didn't realize that a court subpoena was more important than a 1952 Amherstburg kids waiting for Santa.

After the Christmas snarl was untangled, Santa Claus had appeared his subpoena in fact later and the Amherstburg kids had seen their Santa parade (a bit later).

The dreadful spectacle of Santa Claus being hauled down from his moving throne in Amherstburg and carted off to the clink was avoided by a Christmas-time compromise which saw Santa appear in both courtroom and parade.

The fast-moving centre of the near tragedy was E. T. Laframboise, Amherstburg garage owner who was to play Santa in the annual Christmas parade in the town.

Mr. Laframboise was also wanted as a witness in an accident case before Judge Legris in the court house.

The parade was due to begin at noon. The trial opened at 10 a.m. When it came time to call Mr. Laframboise to the witness box, he didn't answer.

Lawyer John Wheelon explained that Mr. Laframboise had been served with a subpoena Friday. Deputy Sheriff Milton Rocheleau confirmed the fact.

Several telephone calls later, it appeared that the witness never intend to come. He was too busy this morning, the court was told. There was no reason why he couldn't keep him, however. An assistant whom he had sent in his place didn't know much about the case.

At Mr. Wheelon's request, Judge Legris issued a bench warrant for Mr. Laframboise.

Parade Is Delayed

At exactly noon, Mr. Laframboise rushed up the courthouse steps and into the courtroom, explaining as he ran that the parade had been postponed until 1 p.m. to wait for him.

His evidence took only a few minutes. He was free at last, and sped back to Amherstburg, where helpers were waiting to transform him into the jovial character who was to be the central figure in the parade.

In the courtroom, the trial went on. Judge Legris issued a bench warrant forgotten, and the evidence of E. T. Laframboise safely written into the records.

In Amherstburg, the parade went on, the kids satisfied, the trial forgotten, and Santa Claus safely riding on his throne.

Latvians Urged To Return Home By Red Agent

BRISTOL, England (AP)—Latvians living here are reported to have been secretly urged to return from the Soviet embassy in London telling them it is their patriotic duty to the Russian "fatherland." The small Baltic republic of Latvia was taken over by the Russians in 1940.

Rev. Ringolds Muzikis, pastor of the 36-strong Latvian colony here, said a letter he received promised free passage home and free medical attention. He added that 14 of his compatriots had returned home. Other Latvians in the United States, however, that so one had taken up the offer.

Latvian and Estonian refugees working in the north England wool centre at Bradford reported last October that two Russians from the Soviet embassy in London had been around quizzing them. The refugees said the men praised conditions in the pre-former Baltic countries and asked why they did not return home.

Clause in Will Of Herbert Cox Declared Invalid

OTTAWA (CP)—The Supreme Court of Canada Monday declared invalid a clause in the will of Herbert Cox, city of Toronto, establishing a charitable foundation for employees of the Canada Life Assurance Company.

The court ordered the master of the Ontario supreme court to determine who should receive the money that would have been available to the charitable foundation.

The amount involved was not mentioned in the judgment, but Mr. Cox, long associated with the assurance company, is known to have left a multi-million dollar estate.

In his will, Mr. Cox ordered that the income of the residue of his estate be aid in perpetuity for charitable purposes. The persons to benefit would be employees of the Canada Life Assurance Company.

Hard Acres

by

Harry Meldrum Moore

"For me, it was the turning point," he would recall, "there I was with a four-hundred acre property that was valueless as a farm; a huge bush that was equally as valueless since there was no demand for timber; a business that was paying its way but would never be anything unless the Depot started to grow—and there were no signs that it would ever grow. And, then, almost without warning, things began to happen so quickly that I was hard put to it to keep up with them."

On Curly's request, Editor Halder informed his readers how important it was that they be present at the February council meeting that year of 1902. And with good result. After council got some routine business out of the way, Curly was on his feet.

He announced that the county council had decided to designate the Bellevue-Depot road and the road through the village from Greenwood to Milltown Settlement, as county roads, and that in the spring the county road gang would set up quarters in the Depot. A county road superintendent and road superintendent, would arrive as guests of the township. He asked his audience to help prepare a welcome for the visitors.

"Now, folks, if you don't know what all this means, permit me to tell you," he said. "It means that from now on, all main roads in this area will become county roads—to be rebuilt and maintained by the county at no additional cost to us, the people of these northern townships. It means, further, that any money your council would have had to spend on the main roads, can now be diverted to opening up and improving side roads, putting in new culverts, cutting down grades and opening new roads that will link our county with nearby counties. And, in addition, it means that there will be no change in the tax rate.

"Your council has decided to abolish statute labor and to advertise for a township road foreman. Such an appointment will be made at the March meeting.

"In regard to the Depot—its walks and drainage: The village fathers have raised sufficient money for the walks, but this council will see that this money is returned to them. After all, the Depot as a part of the township is entitled to its fair share of the taxes. The draining of the main street will be looked after by the county when work starts on the street."

After the meeting Editor Halder took Curly to task for "holding out on his newspaper. Why hadn't Curly taken him into the confidence in regard to what the county council had planned to do for the north?

Curly explained, although he knew he was being a lame excuse at best, that he was not fully cognizant of what council was prepared to do until he read the clerk's letter. The letter had arrived Saturday night.

"I might have told you at church on Sunday morning, but you're such a stiff stickler—one could never hope to see you at a Methodist service, it strikes me that we'll have to build a church some day for you and Percy Wren—he's another Anglican y'know."

"So—that's it," Jack Halder chuckled, "one could tell by looking at Percy, that he's more intelligent than the run of people around here, but as to that other matter—well, don't it happen again!"

At the March meeting the township council appointed Peter Gilchrist, who farmed south of the Depot, as its first roads foreman. Gilchrist had had considerable road-building experience and he was used to handling men. The township hall was placed at his disposal for office space, and as a storage place for his tools. Until conditions were favorable to start road work, he was told to turn in his time to Hugh Mallory in the building of the jail.

Peter was getting along well in the Echo office. One day Halder told Curly that Peter had the making of "a swift" in him. "A swift," he explained as Curly's brows arched, "is an unusually fast type-setter."

Out at Hard Acres, Hazel and her little daughter Heather Ann were enjoying the best of health. At all times her cheerful buoyant self, Hazel was proud of Curly's progress, being always ready and willing to help him work out his problems, and to have his gallers, papers, favorite chair in front of the fireplace where he might sit and read and relax after a trying day. The guest in his house, for Hazel had long since forgotten that Percy Wren was in reality a boarder, never gave her a care. He kept his room neat and tidy, he as he was always ready to pitch in and help her with the dishes and see that she had wood and water, or Heather Ann off her hands so that she could turn to something else.

As a teacher, Percy Wren brought the eyes of the trustees from that morning when they first met him and turned the school over to him. As time passed, the trustees were wont to boast of how lucky they had been. This man was not only an excellent teacher, but a shepherd as well. And as a shepherd he not only cared for his flock but went out in search of them if they failed to show up. The ailing, the sick, the injured, were Percy Wren's special care. At recess he played with his pupils and taught them new games. In class he was strict. He would use the strap, but then he would go at once to the punished child, explain that he was sorry, but that he must be obeyed.

Lige Barrier was talking to Curly one day. "Percy Wren puts me in mind of that perpetual motion machine that old Paul Jones worked on for years at the Depot," he said, "all but this difference—Paul's machine never ran very long at a time, while Percy Wren is on the run all the time. I don't know how he stands it. Has he been telling you what he's been doing lately? He's been fixing up that old box stove in the school so that the children will have hot lunches during the winter months. And he's asking us for milk, lots of milk—says it's good for the children's teeth and general health. Of course, he'll get his milk. He'll get anything he asks for, even to a new stove with oven—although we may pretend we won't give him anything. Just for the fun of it. Now I ask you, what can you make of a man like that? Offering to do things that he's not paid to do?"

"My humble estimation, Lige," Curly said, "Percy Wren is one in a million." I said him the other day he be ever gets tired and he gave me that silly grin of his and said, "yes, reverly, do — when I take a holiday." Around the house he can be up to all the time, and now that Peter and I are away most of the day, he does all the chores, even cleans the stable. He has made a sleigh and he now takes Heather Ann for a ride in the fresh air. I really don't know what we'd do without him."

As spring approached, it was no surprise to Curly when Percy announced that he was going to improve the appearance of Bellevue Depot. He would put in hedges, plant trees, shrubs—a row of sugar maples across the north of the buildings would add much to the beauty of the place—he thought.

"Trees — and — shrubs — and — flowers," Hazel said, "I'm all for them. But, Percy, since Curly and Peter are away so much, I'm afraid they can't turn in to help you—"

"But, Mrs. Brown," Percy said, "I don't need any help. I can do this work alone. Besides I must have something to do. What do you say, Reeve?" he turned to Curly who was looking out the window.

"Percy Wren," Curly said soberly, "you're such a bear for punishment, and we'll say no more about that. Of course, this place must be prettied. It certainly needs it. And since you insist on doing it, here's what we will do. One of these days you will go with Pat Gilroy who is coming to run my bush for me. Pat knows every tree that grows. He'll show you the stuff you seek. I'm sorry I can't help you, but just now I'm a busy man. I must place stone and gravel along the streets for the new walks. I have to see that Belanger's race track and buildings are completed and ready for Dominion Day."

"You mean that Belanger is going ahead with that—now?" Percy asked. Curly had told him of Belanger's plans sometime before.

"Indeed he is, Says he doesn't fear a depression and hard times. Said that the Depot has been down before, but it has always got back on its feet again."

"But—the mill! Do you think it will run again?"

"That's the big question in the Depot these days, Percy. Some people think it will, others think it won't. Only the banker knows and he hasn't said anything yet."

Spring came. The new logs raced down Paterson Creek to the mill-pond. The drivers were paid off, and while waiting until it was decided if, or when, the mill would start, Curly advised them to dig post holes and put up fences at the race track. Men and teams came in from the country in answer to Belange's advertising and Curly put them to work on the race track proper. Other men were engaged to put up the stands and the buildings. The work was well in hand, when out of the blue sky came word that Curly must report at the bank.

"Sit down, Curly," the banker said offering him a chair. "I suppose you're wondering why I sent for you—but the fact is, I want you to do something for me that no other man in the Depot is so fully qualified as you are to do."

Curly waited. His eyes watched the bespectacled banker behind the broad shiny desk.

"Curly," he said, "I want you to take complete charge of the sawmill business for me and get the mill going at once."

"Who—me?" Curly was on his feet.

"And why not you?" Northcott asked, "a man who has been elected by vote as the proper man to look after the affairs of the township is surely the man who can take over a sawmill and lumber business and make it pay. Besides, you worked down there for years; you know the business from the ground up."

Rejuvenating Serum for Dogs Tested by Vienna Veterinarian

VIENNA (Reuters) — Dr. Freidrich Kubasta, a veterinary surgeon, claims he has found a "fountain of life" for dogs.

Kubasta said Sunday he had developed his rejuvenating serum working on the basis of the "long life" serum ACS (antireticular cytotoxic serum) for humans, discovered by the late Russian scientist Alexander Bormenkelz.

He used it on several breeds of dogs, ridding them of all signs of old age. All the dogs had been carefully watched and months after the cure there was no sign of old age returning.

In one case a 13-year-old dog, suffering from failing sight, lack of energy and bad temper, recovered after seven weeks' treatment with the serum. It regained its sight, was lively and good tempered and lost the grey hairs around its muzzle.

Kubasta, who is in his late 30s, carried out his research work in his own dispensary or in the laboratory of a friend who has more apparatus.

The serum has been created especially for dogs. It does not matter what breed they are so long as they are dogs. The principles of which the serum is made, Kubasta said, could be applied equally well to any special race of animals. When he has perfected his work on canines he hopes to experiment on serums for other animals.

Kubasta said his treatment restored the elasticity of tissues which bind the muscles and helped the functioning of the glands. The treatment was not merely a temporary stimulation of the animals' functions, he added. He declined to give other details.

Eleven Kikuyu Tribesmen to Die

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuters) — Eleven Kikuyu tribesmen were sentenced to death by hanging here today for the Mau Mau murder of a European farmer.

The farmer, Eric Bowyer, was slashed to death in his bath last October. The gang killed his two native servants with pangas (long knives) and then broke in on Bowyer.

The anti-white Mau Mau terrorists are pledged to drive the white man out of this East Africa colony. They strike also at Africans and Indians who side with the whites.

Christians Turn From Cares, Woes To Honor Christ

Millions of Faithful Lift Hearts, Prayers in Churches

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Christians turned from the cares and sorrows of a troubled, strife-wracked world today to begin the happy yet solemn ceremonies commemorating the birth of Him who preached the gifts of peace and love to all mankind.

As the last-minute rush for presents and festive goodies died away, millions of faithful lifted their hearts in Christmas Eve prayers of thanks and hope, and their voices in carols of joy.

Churches through Christendom threw open their doors to welcome all to traditional Christmas Eve ceremonies. In celebration, typical Roman Catholic midnight mass beginning in the chapel of St. Catherine will end in the grotto of the Nativity, on the spot designated by his followers as the birthplace of Christ nearly 2,000 years ago.

Use Traditional Spot

At the same time a Protestant service will be held on nearby terraced slopes that mark the traditional spot where angels announced the birth of Christ to shepherds watching their flocks by night.

Hundreds of pilgrims have arrived in the Holy Land to worship at the shrines connected with the birth of Jesus. In past Christmas times, the heavy border guards between Jordan and Israel —still technically at war—will step aside to permit passage to the holy places.

Pope Pius, in his 14th annual Christmas broadcast, appealed again for peace and for help to the world's "poor and oppressed." He attacked Communism for a condemnation of the Christian faith, a condemnation he said had led to the torture of men. He recommended that capitalism do more to solve the world's unemployment problem, including government price controls where private enterprise is inadequate.

It was the Pope's first of two broadcasts today. The Vatican radio also will air his celebration of the Christmas Eve mass, beginning at 5:40 p.m. EST.

Chiefs of state and rulers prepared special messages. The Queen will broadcast here—last time in Britain's reigning monarch—to the Commonwealth at 10:03 a.m. EST tomorrow.

As North Americans at home basked their last moments of peace for the season, their thoughts went out to the thousands of fighting men spending Christmas in troubled spots around the world.

All these, however, will have their celebrations, too. There will be packages from home and special Christmas dinners.

In a Christmas message to his Eighth Army troops in Korea, Gen. James Van Fleet said the Christmas star really "is a beacon lead in us: pursuit of peace on earth and goodwill toward men."

Van Fleet's words were echoed by his commander, Gen. Mark W. Clark, whose message to the United Nations' troops said the faith expressed in the Christmas spirit "will bring us to our goal."

"Although the world has passed through many dark and critical times these last 2,000 years, it is man's belief, however dark the hour may seem, that eventually the light of fellowship will show the way of peace on earth," Clark said.

Not too much is known about Christmas plans in Communist countries. Christmas Day is celebrated . . . the West's Jan. 7 because the Russians use a different calendar.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO, (CP) — Synopsis: Dull gray described dawn over all of Ontario today before Christmas. Occasional light falls of snow were confined to the eastern counties and northern Ontario, while early morning temperatures in southwestern sections were above the freezing point.

Air from the central plains effectively screened out all weakening storm zeroth of the Soo will bring additional snow to the tail of Ontario Thursday, but there is no snow forecast over southern regions for Christmas.

Sandringham Door Opened To Carollers

SANDRINGHAM, England (AP)—Carol singers were cheerfully merrily outside Sandringham House—the royal family's holiday home—Tuesday night when a tall, handsome man stepped out into the cold air.

"Wouldn't you like to come in?" asked the Duke of Edinburgh. "It must be cold outside."

The 20 villagers from nearby Dersingham accepted and continued their caroling in the candlelit room, 12 feet from the nurserygman Leslie Tuck on his fiddle.

The listeners included the Queen and her husband, Queen Mother Elizabeth, Princess Margaret, the Duchess of Kent, and the latter's daughter, Princess Alexandra.

Twins' Condition Still Critical

CHICAGO (AP) — The Brodie Illinese twins, their condition still critical, began their seventh day of separate existence today.

A week ago today the 7-month-old boys, who were born joined at the top of the head, were separated in a 12-hour and 40-minute operation.

Bulletins from the University of Illinois hospital last night reported no change for better or worse for the twins. Roger Lee, weaker of the boys, remained in a deep coma, his condition "very precarious." Douglas Lee, the stronger twin, still remained in critical condition. He regained consciousness about 17 hours after the operation. Both boys are in oxygen tents at the Illinois neuro-psychiatric institute.

Three-Minute Delay In Queen's Address

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth's Christmas radio address, her first as monarch, will be aired tomorrow three minutes later than usual—at 10:03 a.m. EST, 3 p.m. EST), it will be the first delay in the royal broadcasts started 20 years ago.

The Queen approved the change so that 1,000 precast radio stations, which will carry the address, can pick up the broadcast.

RARE CAUSE OF DEATH

STRATFORD (CP)—Terry Knott, two-week-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Knott of nearby St. Paul's, died Monday of pneumonia complicated his death to a rare cause. They said it was caused by a membranous film which formed over the inside of his lungs before his birth.

Surviving on Food from Ocean, Makes Lone Voyage Over Atlantic

BRIDGETOWN, Barbados, B-W-I, (Reuters) — Alain-Louis Bombard, 29-year-old French scientist who set out on a lone Atlantic crossing 64 days ago to prove man can survive, if provided by the ocean, reached the Barbados Tuesday. His trip on the open Atlantic began when he left the Canary Islands Oct. 20 on the 3,000-mile voyage.

Bombard began his voyage from Nice, France, May 23, travelling in a 15-foot rubber dinghy equipped with two paddles, a six-foot mast and a sail. He left Las Palmas in the Canaries Oct. 20.

The small rubber ship picked up the scientist 13 days ago about 500 miles from Barbados.

Bombard went aboard the ship to send wireless messages and then continued on to complete his journey.

Backbone of Bombard's diet was fish—nine-minute plants floating in the ocean. He caught them with his bare hands. He ate them raw. He also ate raw fish and some birds.

Bombard's theory is that human beings can take up to one pint of water a day without ill effects. Fish and plankton contain fresh water and these sources of supply together should prevent death at sea by hunger and thirst, he concluded.

Bombard's raft, named the Heretique, sailed through the eastern end of the Mediterranean to Tangier, then along the coast of northwest Africa to Las Palmas.

NEW STRATEGIC PLAN FOR KOREAN WAR REPORTED

Times Says Program Already Worked Out

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Times reports today the Eisenhower administration has a new strategic plan for the Korean war and believes it "will exert so much pressure on the Communist forces that the Soviet Union will agree to an armistice."

The Times says in a story by Thomas J. Hamilton, that the new plan was worked out by the high command in the new administration of President-elect Eisenhower. Hamilton says the decision reasons no details can be made public, but the basic premises on which the plan is based are enumerated are:

"The Kremlin will have to be convinced by deeds and words that under the new administration the United States will not pull out of Korea and that neither will it give way on the issue of the repatriation of prisoners of war.

"The new plan will permit greatly increased pressure to be applied without involving a prohibitive cost in the lives of American South Koreas.

"The new plans will not involve any considerable risk of converting the war into a general Asian war.

"There will be a considerable increase in the participation of South Koreans in the war and the increase in the number of United Nations forces is visualized."

Hamilton said that someone who made the information available "were silent on the question of the new contribution to the new plans" by Gen. MacArthur.

MacArthur, ousted Far East commander, talked with Eisenhower last week-end about Korean war and world peace problems.

The two are understood to have turned from Korea and after MacArthur said he was confident there is "a clear and definite solution" to the Korean war.

"In my view," Hamilton writes, "The details of the new plans remain to be formulated by the state and defence departments before the inauguration on Jan. 20.

"The aims at this has been done, representatives of the nations most directly involved with which would of course include the 15 others with forces in Korea — will be informed, and a final decision will be reached after their views are submitted."

The story says a non-American source at the UN said he had been given to understand that the Eisenhower administration would ask some of the UN contingents to make relatively small increases in the size of their contingents" in order to build up self-contained units and reduce supply and tactical problems.

Prisoners Ask Warden To Stay for Christmas

READING, Pa. (AP) — Warden Lewis S. Siltzel of Berks county prison reported Tuesday that two of his prisoners pleaded with him not to release them for Christmas.

"After we've served this long and we've come this far we want to miss the roast duck dinner the prison serves on Christmas," the warden quotes for prisoners charged with minor offences to be released for Christmas.

The Christmas Story

I LOVE to hear the story of that first glad Christmas night
When the shepherds on Bethlehem's plains received the wondrous sight,
When the radiance of God's glory round the hills in myriad glow,
And the watching shepherds wondered on their night so long ago.

I can hear the angels speaking to the shepherds on the hills:
"Fear ye not, I bring a message," with what joy my spirit thrills!
And I listen to the story of a Saviour sent to men,
O! the Christ-child in the manger o'er the hills of Bethlehem.

Then I hear the angelic choir on that night so calm and still,
Filling all the air with music, "Peace on earth, good will to men";
"Glory be to God the Highest," how the gladsome notes prolong!
As I listen with the shepherds to the angels' Christmas song.

And I follow with the shepherds o'er the hills so far away,
And with them I hasten onward where the town of Bethlehem lay,
Where we find the little Christ-child in a manger rude and cold,
Oh! how thrilling is the story though it's been so often told!

Then we see the wise men coming following a shining star,
As its bright rays gleamed and beckoned leading from the East afar,
Frankincense and gold and myrrh, rich the gifts the wise men bring
To the Christ-child in the manger, to their Saviour and their King.

Oh it is the old, old story but to me it's ever dear,
Bringing in the Christmas spirit, Christmas chimes and Christmas cheer;
And the world will grow the brighter, better still the souls of men
If we take to heart the story of the Babe of Bethlehem.

Pope Criticizes Communism For Attacks on Christian Faith, Capitalism in Message

ROME (AP)—Pope Pius addressed his 14th annual Christmas broadcast today to the world's "poor and oppressed" and criticized communism for its attack on the Christian faith and capitalism because it has not done enough to improve mankind's economic lot.

Replying to the Christmas greetings of the College of Cardinals, the Roman Catholic Pontiff's message to the Christian world was broadcast (at 5 a.m. EST) in Italian over the Vatican radio. The radio planned to broadcast the speech at 45-minute intervals in translations into 23 other languages.

Face Two Problems

The modern world, said the Pope, faces two grave difficulties—a difficulty of economics and a difficulty of conscience.

The difficulty of conscience, he said, is caused by a condemnation of the Christian faith, which has led to the torture of men. This was interpreted as a clear reference to communism and the persecution of the church in the countries behind the Iron Curtain.

Turning to economic, the Pontiff said much has been done to try to solve the world's unemployment problem, but more must be done. There must be a recommencement.

Superfluous luxury expenditures should be cut and capitalists should put their money into use to aid suffering people rather than holding it in idle riches, he said. When private enterprise is inadequate, governments must take self-contained units and reduce supply and tactical problems.

To Stay for Christmas

READING, Pa. (AP) — Warden Lewis S. Siltzel of Berks county prison reported Tuesday that two of his prisoners pleaded with him not to release them for Christmas.

"After we've served this long and we've come this far we want to miss the roast duck dinner the prison serves on Christmas," the warden quotes for prisoners charged with minor offences to be released for Christmas.

In the world scene, Queen Elizabeth II finished second to the president-elect. Others were Farouk of Egypt, Winston Churchill, Dr. Kurt Carlsen, Mossadegh of Iran, Malan of South Africa, Nagib of Egypt and Winston Churchill.

Govt. Decides To Renew Egg Price-Support

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government has decided to renew its egg price-support program, it was the agriculture department announced today. But the price won't be changed.

Support will continue at the present price of 36 cents a dozen for grade A large at storage points in Montreal and Toronto, department said.

Decision has been some agitation by poultrymen in recent months for a higher price.

At the same time, the department reiterated that the hog support price will be reduced by 10 cents a pound on Jan. 1 — down from the current level of 26 cents. Hog producers appealed unsuccessfully for continuance of the current price until the United States market is reopened March 1 next.

Pattern of the egg price-support program for 1953 will be on the same basis as 1952, the department said. It will be to the owner of production compared with that for fluid milk or lumber plants. Britain's current cuts in defence spending

THOUSANDS FLOCK TO BETHLEHEM FOR CEREMONIES

Border Guards Relax Frontier Regulations

By WILTON WYNN

BETHLEHEM (AP) —By the thousands, the faithful came to Bethlehem today and once more, as it was on the first Christmas nearly 2,000 years ago, there was no room at the inn.

Arab and Israeli border guards relaxed their frontier regulations to let the pilgrims approach the holy places of Christianity. The thousands of pilgrims filled every room and every bed in the hotels, hostels and pensions of the Arab section of Jerusalem, Bethlehem, Jericho and Ramallah.

All 6 a. m. today the Mandelbaum Gate into the Israeli part of Jerusalem opened to admit 1,200 Arab Christians who live in Israel. They had special permission to visit relatives on the Arab side of the frontier dividing the Holy City and to attend Christmas services tonight. They must be back in Israel by Christmas night.

Hundreds of foreign pilgrims also came through Israel and the Mandelbaum Gate. They will not be allowed to return home through the Jewish state, however.

At 11:30 p.m. local men of long ago, the pilgrims today pressed together in the Church of the Nativity — brightly - gleaming star atop the Church of the Nativity will lead them—at another star led the magi—to the birthplace of the holy child.

Christmas Eve was a day of ceremony and worship, climaxing tonight in the midnight services beneath the Church of Christ.

Roman Catholic patriarch Alberto Gori was to lead the procession to Bethlehem. Attended by four mounted constables, his party bridged the country estate and United Nations officials from both sides of the frontier that has split the Holy City since the Palestine war of 1948.

The official party from the Israeli side of the frontier travelled the traditional road from Jerusalem. Normally held by Israel and closed to the Arab side, the road was opened especially for the procession.

The route lay past the tomb of Rachel to the Church of the Nativity, which marks what Christians believe is the birthplace of Christ. Representatives of the Orthodox Armenian, Coptic, Abyssinian and Syrian churches will precede the patriarch at the church services. Bedouin Arab guards, wearing white robes and red headdresses, will be stationed at the doors to keep order.

The climax of the ceremony will be the traditional midnight mass, beginning in the chapel of St. Catherine and concluding in the grotto of the Nativity, where tradition says Mary and Joseph finally found shelter and where the baby was born.

The Protestant service was arranged for a similarly hallowed spot—on the terraced slopes outside Bethlehem where the angels announced the birth to the shepherds watching their flocks by night. Today, however, the pastoral shepherd's meal of coarse bread and meat was abandoned.

The visitors from the Israeli-Jerusalem travelled a new road opened only four days ago.

Britain Expected to Unveil Many New Weapons in The Coming Year

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain is expected to unveil new remote-controlled weapons — rockets, pilotless planes and guided missiles — next year.

Brewing new reports here and in Australia say the new weapons will be tested at the Woomera rocket range in Western Australia early in the new year.

A government spokesman said: "For security reasons we cannot announce the nature of the weapon now being tested.

"But there may be some surprises in the new year."

Production of guided weapons will be boosted in 1953.

Main reason for increasing production of guided weapons is that there is to be fewer men of production compared with that for fighter or bomber planes. Britain's current cuts in defence spending convinced defence planners that remote-controlled weapons are the all-aiming and destroying. They conducted here is divided into work on defensive and offensive weapons.

Defensive rockets and guided missiles are intended mainly to destroy enemy planes. They are anti-aiming and destroying. They "human error element" and errors of judgment by fighter pilots.

Offensive "probes" are mostly rockets, capable of carrying atomic bombs.

The government recently disclosed tests with a radio-controlled rocket with a 1,000-mile range and a spee dof 2,000 miles an hour.

Freight Carriers Collide Head-On In Muskoka Area

100 Men Search Wreckage As CNR Main Line Blocked

SOUTHWOOD (CP) — Rescue crews hunted for signs of life today in the twisted wreckage of two freight trains after a head-on collision that left five men missing and believed dead. Four others were injured and two escaped unhurt.

The Canadian National Railways trains crashed shortly after noon Tuesday and a Christmas card landscape of snow- rocks, lakes and trees at Hydro Glen in the Muskoka district about 100 miles north of Toronto and 15 miles north of Washago.

One witness said the two diesel engines from the train and the steam locomotive from another train in a tunnel near the right-of-way in the lonely stretch of wilderness pierced by the lines of steel. Smashed freight cars piled high in the air in a fantastic tangle of steel, wood and twisted iron flame.

About 100 men worked today to clear the tracks.

Falls in Warning

George Heaney, veteran tele graph operator at Torrance, lost a desperate battle to warn the crew the collision after he realized message ordering the diesel to pull into a siding and wait for another had not been delivered. A culvert washout kept him from driving his automobile to Southwood station, eight miles away, in time to give the warning.

A spokesman said a complete investigation is under way.

Missing Men

The missing men are: F. A. Bumstead of Long Branch, Ont., engineer of the northbound freight; Y. B. Lane of Capreol, Ont., headend brakeman of the northbound freight; F. Hall of Barrie, Ont., engineer of the diesel; M. L. Pearson of Toronto, fireman; A. J. B. Prevost of Long Branch, head-end brakeman of the southbound train. Railway officials said Tuesday night the main line to Parry Sound and the West will be blocked for as long as 48 hours. All trans-continental trains, as well as local trains are re-routed.

The crash occurred near Hoggard Rapids, three miles south of here and 100 miles north of Toronto. The northbound train plowed into two diesel locomotives, piling up engines and boxcars into a smoldering, twisted heap. Some places as high as 20 or 30 feet.

50 Cars Wrecked

Half the cars of both trains, about 50 altogether, were derailed and debris was scattered along the tracks. Residents of a mile away at Hydro Glen, 15 miles south of Washago, heard the crash.

The southbound was the southbound freight pulling 45 cars, nearly all empty, left Washago at 11:40 a. m. while a train with two diesel engines and 62 freight cars, all but one of them loaded, left Southwood for Torrance about 12:05 p. m., heading south. The collision at 12:20 p. m.

One man, believed to be the fireman on the northbound freight, jumped clear before the impact and suffered an arm injury.

Four other crew members were taken to hospital in Orillia. They were: Lloyd Hodgson, 24, engineer; hill, conductor, arm injury; William Dunn, 24, Mimico, fireman, head injuries; and Lloyd Knorr, 24, M. Vallely, road diesel foreman of engines from Toronto, dislocated left shoulder and fractured right ankle, and James Cox, 33, Alderwood, injured when he was thrown on the back of his neck and chest.

Two men escaped injury. They were W. E. Clark of Etobicoke, conductor, and H. W. Keough of Toronto, brakeman, both members of the diesel train crew.

Trenton Families Feel Impact Of Sour Luck

TRENTON (Special) — At least two Trenton families are convinced that bad luck comes in bunches.

A few days ago Mrs. Charlie Silverthorne fractured her right collarbone in a car accident. She went to hospital and while she was there her husband, a millwright at the Trenton Dye and Finishing, had a finger severed by a machine he was fixing. Both, however, are feeling better now and have Christmas plans to fulfill.

Mrs. William Wilson was in the hospital under care of her physician, Her husband, Bill manager for Joseph Gould, went to visit her the same day. On his way home walking down the hospital stairs when he fell and wrenched his back. Both are in hospital now but Mr. Wilson, with a cast around his midsection, hopes to be out for Christmas.

Recent promotion list from RCAF headquarters held good news for a favorite Trenton officer—former acting officer commanding Station Trenton, Wing Commander D. S. McKenna, D.F.C., now a group captain. During the spring months after Group Captain G. P. Dunlop had been given a top important post in Sweden, Group Captain McKenna, then a wing commander, served as commandant at the Trenton base. Group Captain J. B. Millward became the new permanent commander in the summer. The new group captain and his charming wife are well known in social circles in both Trenton and Belleville.

Christmas talk has replaced election talk in this bustling town formerly the winter with its mas exuberance.

But failing a catastrophe the polls will be open at 8.00 a.m. Friday morning, January 2.

Six candidates are three seats. The other three councillors gained their seats by acclamation when only four nominees qualified for six openings. The new mayor Roy Whitley, defeated two former councilmen in the election for mayoralty honors.

In the forthcoming council election Miss Laura Cummings has entered the field against five men.

Heralded by a thunderous welcome from the voices of 1,500 cheering children and a siren, Claus came down a huge chimney, stepped out from a magistrate's place into the large sports hangar of this Air Force station.

His arrival was preceded by six merry elves and a jolly clown, brought to a climax the eagerly awaited return of this welcome annual visitor to Trenton. The event long established by tradition in the Air Force brought out children of all ages, who together with their parents assembled in the only building on the station capable of accommodating the estimated 2,500 persons present. There helped by the Commanding Officer, Group Captain J. B. Millward, DFC., give a warm and seasonable welcome to one and all.

He was escorted to a revolving dias placed in the centre of a gaily decorated arc. From this place he supervised the work of his busy elves, who in less time than it takes to tell, had begun the delightful job of handing out the hundreds of presents Santa had brought with him. Every little boy and girl 10 years and under received a present. The older children were not forgotten either for they all received tickets to a very special showing or a Walt Disney picture which will take place in the Eraign Theatre.

Every child, regardless of age, received a bag of candy, nuts and apples and cookies all by tradition the sports hangar.

Christmas music during the arrival of the guests was provided by Cpl. Findlay and Flight Sergt. Thomas. Later in the program selections by the Station Trumpet Band and vocals by the pupils of the A/C/M Breadner School formed an appropriate musical background for the big happy party.

Glen Roys Score Another Shutout, Turkey, Goose Blanked at Banquet

By GEO. H. CARVER
Sports Editor

If the Glen Roy senior "B" hockey club doesn't win group honors and go on down the tough playdown trail, it won't be because of lack of team spirit, harmony and co-operation.

Manager Don McNevin and playing coach "Red" Doran have worked to this end since the start of the season, and such endeavor has obviously at apparent than what happened last night.

The boys forked blue-lines, body checks, income tax, the war and wives, for the moment when they gathered around the festive board in the home of their manager.

It was a grand show. Turkey, goose and all the trimmin's laid out in a buffet dinner by Manager Don McNevin and Mrs. McNevin saw the boys forget training temporarily.

Mere Teamwork

The passing plays were perfect. Not a man missed his turn at least once and even Tony Parisi, minus slick harpings, and gloves, didn't let a thing go past him. The boy stopped everything in sight.

Red Wetmore's goose was a dilly. They did not belittle nor praise other teams in the group. It was mere teamwork that they took the fullest advantage of it.

Other players themselves until their gizzards were overflowing.

And when Don Donald, Glen Roy was the host. He placed himself at a table with the gang and once again proved he is "one of the boys."

Forever, Donald Jr., and Mrs. McNevin, with her assistants, saw to it that the crew lacked nothing "Warpy" O'Brien was the mailer de hotel. "Warp" hovered in the background, give orders and saw to it that everybody was satisfied. He was even better than when he Heath Day had full with the Glen Roy junior "A" softball champions. And you couldn't beat the job he did there. Except last night.

But the feature of the evening, both surprises, came with a couple of presentations.

The boys paid lasting tribute to "the best guy in the world" when they presented Mr. McNevin with a handsome leather-case safety razor. "Red" Doran did the honors. And the boys did not forget their hostess. They presented Mrs. McNevin with a beautiful potleg flower.

And just to show their appreciation did not follow a single track the gang took "Red" Doran nearly all of his feet when team captain Vern Goyer presented him with a leather brief case and a set of leather goods including a wallet, document folder, etc.

"This gift goes to one of the best-liked guys in Belleville," said solemn-faced "Jumbo."

"Red" in a brief address of appreciation noted the fact the team's success to date was attributable mainly to team harmony, fighting spirit and co-operation.

"Keep this up, fellows" he urged, "and we won't be too far off those playdowns."

The rest of the evening was spent in cards and those things hockey players do when they are in the best of company, talk hockey.

Police Pass Out Courtesy Cards Instead of Tickets

City and district motorists who overstay their paid time at parking meters in the business section of the city have been receiving courtesy cards instead of parking tickets since the beginning of the week.

Starting Monday city patrol officers have been handing out the courtesy cards to motorists parking overtime. The cards extend season's greetings from the police department and also ask for co-operation in assisting the police department to prevent accidents.

The cards ask the motorists to watch carefully for pedestrians, especially children who may be crossing streets; to observe red "stop" signs and traffic signals; to park properly near the curb, avoid double parking, and to drive carefully at reduced speed.

RCAF Expansion Faster Than Any Other Service Under Three-Year $5,000,000,000 Defence Program

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's emphasis on air power is pointed up in the 1953 growth and activity of the RCAF as a modern, jet-equipped air arm with operations already stretching from the Far East to the continent of Europe.

Under the $5,000,000,000 three-year defence program, RCAF expansion is faster than any other service. It now is well on the way with new squadrons coming into being, new training stations opened, strength being built up and a radar network being established.

There have been some hitches. For instance deliveries of some of the jets have been behind schedule. The RCAF got its first Canadian designed and Canadian-built all-weather fighter, the CF100, behind schedule this year and has yet to form its first CF100 squadron.

But more and more of its other first-line operational plane—the F86 Sabre fighter—are being delivered along with the T33 jet trainer. The Sabres and the CF100's are being built in Canada and 75 Sabres will be produced in this country later.

Big Program

The RCAF plan calls for a 41-squadron air force to supplement observes and the 12 fighter squadrons Canada is committed to base in Europe for the North Atlantic Treaty defence force by the spring of 1954. Three are based in Britain and three others are based in England.

The Air Force now has about 39 squadrons all told.

The present target is 50,000. In 1952 strength grew from 29,500 to an estimated 38,500, including 3,000 women now being recruited into the regular force. Some of them will go overseas.

The RCAF still has its No. 426 squadron on the Korean airlift. In its two years the squadron has logged more than 25,000 flying hours, carried 5,000,000 pounds of freight from the Pacific coast to Tokyo and back and moved 10,000 passengers, many of them wounded from Korea.

Canadian fighter pilots are getting operational experience with United States Air Force units in Korea. By the end of this year 13 RCAF pilots will have seen service there for six months each. Flying Sabres, they have been credited with a total of eight kills of enemy planes in aerial combat.

Atlantic Hops

Perhaps the RCAF's most spectacular job in the year was the mass flight of jets across the Atlantic—the first time a whole Canadian squadron for the North Luffenham base in England flew over without mishap early in the year. Later three more Sabre squadrons flew over to be based at Grostenquin, France, near Metz—the first RCAF planes based on the continent since 1945.

The Grostenquin base is the first of four on the continent which will form Canada's 12-squadron air division NATO contribution. Construction work now is under way at two other bases and negotiations are proceeding in connection with a fourth site.

Continental reinforcements now is at Paris but will later move to Metz under Air Vice Marshal Hugh L. Campbell, Salisbury, N.B., who will command the air division.

These operations in England and on the continent resulted in a flow of air force men overseas almost reminiscent of wartime. Some 2,500

What is a Catholic?

Why are Catholics certain their faith is the "only" religion? Why are they forbidden to read or see certain books, plays, movies? How does the Church explain its stand on divorce? Why must it oppose artificial birth control?

Passengers Jittery But Little Panic Says Eyewitness

By L. S. CHAKALES

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—"The people on the beach, we saw them. We understood they were trying to help us. But no help came."

But help did come, said the wife of the Canadian doctor who survived the ordeal of the Champollion. She is Mrs. Aimee Romeo Boucher, wife of Doctor Boucher, of St. Luc Hospital, Montreal.

Rev. Lucien Duiong of the Fathers of St. Viateur, Montreal, "kept our courage up with prayers," she said. Yet the same time pitiful cries of children could be heard. They were confused, hungry and thirsty."

A bare 500 yards separated the ship from the safety of the beach, but it was 500 yards of turbulent sea lashing against a hidden shoal. Several persons were battered to death on this shoal.

Mrs. Boucher was one of the last to leave the ship in the rescue launch. "I went down on a rope ladder and it was wonderful to see the courage of the Lebanese sailors who saved us."

"There was no food except for the children," she recounted. "Two members of the crew went down to get oranges but it was impossible. The water was so wavey. But the helicopter managed to make a line and hit with a bag of ice cubes which was what we needed because we were thirsty."

passengers were jittery, she said, but there was little panic.

RCAF personnel now are overseas and other drafts continue to go.

Home Expansion

At home the Air Force announced formation of four new regular force squadrons during the year. Three were Sabre squadrons and the other was a Lancaster squadron. Another Sabre squadron, A fifth Sabre squadron was added to come into being early in January.

Training continued to increase, including that of airmen from Britain, Norway, Denmark, Belgium, France, Italy and Holland. Canada is training these aircrew as part of her NATO aid.

Maritime aircraft were kept busy during the year. They took part in a number of NATO exercises at home and overseas, flew ice reconnaissance for the northland ice patrol and used supply missions to arctic weather stations.

The search and rescue air arm carried out many life-saving duties during the year. The arm now includes "para pets"—nurses trained as parachutists to jump to bring aid wherever needed.

Air and ground personnel were in England taking familiarization training, readying themselves for delivery of two jet Comet aircraft. These aircraft will be delivered next year and the Canadian crews will fly them to Canada where they will be used for training purposes.

The Navy force will get a new deal early in 1953. Air Vice Marshal C. Roy Slemon, who now heads training command at Trenton, succeed Air Marshal W. A. Curtis as chief of the air staff when Curtis retires at the end of January.

The best wish of all is for your Merry Christmas.

CLEANERS & DYERS

27 Persons Known To Have Died In Ship Wreck

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Lebanon's director of internal security said today that 27 persons were known to have died in the wreck of the French liner Champollion and about 100 were injured in reaching the shore from the reefground of, split-in-two ship.

Skilful Levantine boatmen brought the last of the 328 passengers and crew through still-raging surf and jagged reefs Tuesday, about 40 hours after the liner was blown on a reef early Monday and split amidships some 500 yrds offshore.

The latest estimate of the dead was only tentative, and it was feared the casualty toll would rise. Some of the passengers jumped overboard—how many exactly was not known—and though 30 or so persons swam to shore, thousands of watchers crowded there saw a number of people battered to death on the rocks just out of reach.

A lifeboat also capsized during the rescue efforts Tuesday, plunging many persons to death.

Fifteen of the injured were Lebanese, the security director, Col. Nuredin Rafahi, said.

16 Bodies Recovered

Officials last night said 16 bodies had been recovered. Observers on the beach estimated 30 were killed —10 from the overturned lifeboat and 20 of the swimmers.

Bound from Marseille and Alexandria to Beirut, the 12,546-ton Champollion carried a crew of 228 and 108 passengers, many of them Christian pilgrims to the Holy Land.

An informed source Tuesday night said that of the 16 bodies then recovered, 14 were crew members.

Two Canadians, a Roman Catholic priest and a woman, were aboard. They are Rev. Lucien Duiong of the Fathers of St. Viateur of Montreal, studying at the Sorbonne in Paris and en route to the Holy Land for their novitiate, and Mrs. Romeo Boucher, wife of Dr. Romeo Boucher, medical director of St. Luc hospital in Montreal.

Mrs. Boucher said Father Duiong "kept our courage up with prayers."

Captain Not Hurt

The ship's master, Capt. Bourde, apparently was not hurt. The French consulate made reservations for him for the St. George hotel.

Two theories were offered to explain the shipwreck. One set of experts speculated that the ship's officers had mistaken a newly-installed airport beacon for the entrance light to Beirut harbor, four miles north of the wreck scene. Others speculated that the ship's captain had planned to stay outside the harbor until the gale subsided but that the ship turned too close inshore and was blown on the reef.

CHRISTMAS TOYS

Oh! the din and discord
And the blatant noise,
Another is distracted—
Will bedtime never come?

Oh! then the house is silent,
The toys are put in place,
And slumber spreads a magic calm
Over each childish face;
Oh soon, too soon, the children
Will put their toys aside,
And naught but Christmas memories
Will in the heart abide.

Relations Between Canada, U.S. Run Smooth Course During Year With Some Frank Talking Done

By JOHN TRACY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (CP)—Relations between Canada and the United States in 1952 proceeded smoothly, as between any two good neighbors, but there was considerable frank talk on both sides of the border.

Frustated in a joint effort to build the St. Lawrence Seaway, the two countries went ahead with plans to develop its giant power phase. There was co-operation in defence with Canada granting rights to U.S. military forces or use of certain Canadian bases.

An agreement was signed designed to facilitate placing of more and bigger U.S. arms orders in Canada. Canada got together with Britain during the year to ease the Americans' supply pinch by diverting to the U.S. Canadian aluminum bound for Britain.

Canada received some of her laws to help the U.S. block shipments of strategic materials to Communist countries. She co-operated, signed a pact to permit prosecution of Canadians for their fraudulent securities in the U.S.

Greater Effort

But there was some stock-taking by statesmen on both side of the international line. In the U.S., two senators criticized the state department for a greater effort in Korea, making a plea for more backbone. Senator Richard B. Russell, of Georgia, and Senator Theodore Paul Douglas, a party colleague from Illinois, said Canada should send more troops to Korea.

Russell said he does not think Canada's participation "on the basis of wealth and population," is as great as that of the U.S.

An Associated Press survey of opinion in Washington indicated that officials do not consider Canada can make a bigger effort without conscription.

The only reply from the Canadian side was Defence Minister Brooke Claxton's remark: "We think we are pulling our weight."

On the other side, Canada's external affairs minister, L.B. Pearson, made a plea that people of New York last March in which he told Americans that Canadians are not anti-American. Their intentions to go ahead with the seaway despite U.S. reluctance to make it a joint effort.

He had a short reply for an American magazine which expressed amazement that another country should undertake a project without prospect of U.S. help. The minister said the Canadians should know are developing our country without financial aid from any other government.

Closer Relations

Late in the year, the government leader in the Canadian Senate, Wishart S. Robertson, forecast a move to encourage closer relations among members of the British commonwealth of nations by "exchanging parties' national legislatures. He said he planned, on his own individual, to seek occasional exchange visits for members of Parliament and Congress.

An incident earlier in the year indicated some need for greater understanding. Timothy Sheehan, a Republican congressman from Illinois, proposed that the U.S. consider paying Britain's debts in return for the right to annex Canada.

Sheehan's proposal was not taken too seriously in Canada. But Pearson remarked in a Halifax speech that such "loose talk" on the American displayed about relations between Canada and Britain is "always a shaky foundation for mutual respect and understanding."

The U.S. election in November which turned out the Democratic regime after 20 years in power was not expected to affect relations between the two countries. Canadians consider President-designate Eisenhower a friend. Ottawa officials said they saw no reason why close international co-operation could not continue with a U.S. Republican government.

Christmas Sidelights World Over

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It has not been the best of years in many ways, this 1952. But North Americans around the world are intent on giving it the happiest possible ending with the merriest possible Christmas.

What are they doing? The record speaks:

MONTREAL — An RCAF North Star was ferrying 17 wounded Canadian veterans of Korea from the West coast so they can spend Christmas at home.

NEW YORK — The U. S. Air Force had its own "Operation Santa Claus" — flying home 56 wounded soldiers.

TOKYO — Throughout Korea and Japan, servicemen are giving Christmas parties and gifts to orphans. Some show business people gave up their holidays to entertain troops.

SAN DIEGO — Two surgeons donated the skill of their hands as Christmas presents to a brother and sister, blind since birth with cataracts. If the operations are successful, the children may have 80 per cent of normal vision.

ITTA BENA, Miss. — After while 'teen-age vandals wrecked a justice court at Mississippi's only Negro college, hundreds of white citizens pitched in with Negro citizens to restore it for Christmas.

CHICAGO—A 27-year-old woman polio victim, confined to an iron lung, left the institution for home with her six-year-old son. The neighborhood came to her aid. Thus far $1,300 has been raised.

NEW YORK — At least 100,000 children will be entertained at parties by charitable organizations.

FRANKFURT — Several thousand German orphans were assured of Christmas gifts — and U. S. Air Force officials are delighted-faced. The truck bearing 18,000 presents for the orphans was reported missing, and the air force offered a $1,000 reward for its recovery. It was in a parking lot all the time.

WHEELING, W. Va. — Radio station WWVA gave a special Christmas present to about 7,000 Eskimos who live in the Hudson Bay area. The Eskimos love mountain music and are always tuning in sets in remote trading posts to the station's powerful beam.

Two Suffer Minor Injuries In 3-Car Crash

Two persons suffered minor injuries and three vehicles were damaged to the extent of about $1,000 in a three-car collision which occurred east of Trenton on No. 2 highway Tuesday evening.

Injured are Mrs. Evelyn Bush of Consecon who suffered a fractured nose and A. C. Benoit Sinotte, RCAF, Trenton, who received a cut on the forehead. Neither went to hospital.

Douglas Smith of Consecon with his wife as passenger was eastbound driving a second car driven by Wilfred Ferguson of Brighton. Ground Observer Corps station was westbound when his car was in collision with the Bush car. The Pretille car then bounced off the Bush car and struck the Ferguson vehicle.

Provincial Police Constable McNutt of Belleville investigated.

Extra Operators Added to Take Care of Calls

A festive holiday for most citizens, Christmas Day this year will see a record number of long distance operators at work in Bell Telephone's Bridge street long distance centre.

To meet the heavy volume of Christmas long distance calling, more than 100 operators and other company traffic personnel will be on duty over the Yuletide period. Around noon-hour on Christmas Day—the busiest time of all—about 85 long distance operators will be handling outgoing and incoming calls for Belleville and vicinity customers.

Bell Telephone officials estimate that subscribers of Belleville and vicinity will place some 3,600 calls to relatives and friends in out-of-town centres on Christmas Day. Last year, the number of outgoing calls totalled 3,450.

Make Calls Early

Even though all facilities will be in full operation every operator will be working at top speed, telephone officials have called days in handling the abnormal Christmas telephone traffic inevitable. But they supplied a couple of timely tips today to help accommodate all who want to telephone their Christmas greetings. If at all convenient, make your holiday long distance calls before Christmas Eve or after Christmas Day. Calls made in these less-congested "before and after" periods have a much better chance of being completed quickly.

2. If you know the number of the person you are calling, be sure to give it to the operator. Calls placed in this way can be connected considerably faster because it eliminates the necessity of the operator having to ask an information operator at the distant centre for the number.

G. W. Proctor the company's Belleville manager, emphasized that these points are particularly important on calls to places outside the company's Quebec-Ontario territory. Because the number of long distance lines which can be established to the Maritimes, Western Canada and distant United States centres is more limited.

Special Christmas Programs Planned for County Home

Residents of the Hastings county home on the Trent Road, 5 west of the city, are going to fare well on Christmas Day, according to Matron Mrs. Kenneth Yorke.

A bang-up Christmas menu, which would do credit to a high-class hotel or restaurant has been planned for the noon hour. In addition the elderly folks at the home will receive Christmas greetings on behalf of the city from Mayor A. M. Haig, while Warden Lee Grills, Sidney township reeve, will extend greetings from the county.

Christmas menu at the home will include roast turkey with dressing and cranberry sauce, jelly salads, lettuce, tomatoes, mashed potatoes and home grown green peas. Topping off the menu will be hot mince pie and plum pudding. The tables will be appropriately decorated for the occasion and each of the residents will find at his or her plate a small bag of candy and other titbits.

Road Fork at Jail

At the county jail where Jail Governor Robert Scott says there is the smallest number of inmates in years, the Christmas fare will be the traditional roast pork with potatoes and hot mince pie.

To make Christmas a more happy occasion the Salvation Army Band visited the county home where Yuletide music was played and sunshine bags were presented to the residents. Sunshine bags were also presented by the Salvation Army to inmates at the county jail.

Patients at the Belleville General Hospital were entertained by the Salvation Army, where Sally Anns visited and distributed gifts an da copy of the Christmas War Cry. Also the Salvation Army Band played Christmas carols around the four sides of the hospital.so that all could hear.

It's the 'KNOW HOW' that Counts!

HANDBALL: THE WRIST-SNAP STROKE

1 Body stands erect for this stroke. Power and control depend mainly on the snap of the wrist. Full stroke is a circular movement, beginning with "cocked" arm at top of swing as illustrated.

2 Ball is hit at a height ranging between waist and hip. On stroke, forearm passes close to body. Wrist snap and short ball travel give ball speed and hop. This stroke needs much practice for good control.

3 Circular movement of stroke is completed as follow-through brings arm across in front of the waist. Proper body positioning and control of arm movement is essential in this stroke.

Yes, it's "know-how" that counts in handball as in every sport — "know-how" that sets one performer above another. Learn the correct form — the "know-how" — then practise until you have mastered it and you'll get more fun and enjoyment out of your sports and game.

'Glory to God in the Highest, And on Earth Peace....'

For unto us a child is born, unto us a' son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace.

Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even for ever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this.

ISAIAH 9:6-7

And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed.

And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem; (because he was of the house and lineage of David:)

To be taxed with Mary his espoused wife, being great with child.

And so it was, that, while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered.

And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

And, lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid.

And the angel said unto them, Fear not: for, behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people.

For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you; ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying,

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.

And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

And they came with haste, and found Mary, and Joseph, and the babe lying in the manger.

And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this child.

And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

ST. LUKE 2:1, 3-18

'Let's Keep Christmas'

The familiar words of the Christmas Story, repeated down through the ages, are being recounted, again, this week throughout Christendom, re-affirming mankind's innate aspirations for peace in a sorely troubled world.

We can do no better in summing up the meaning of Christmas today than to use an extract from a Christmas message given a few years ago by the late Rev. Peter Marshall, Presbyterian Chaplain of the United States Senate from 1947 until his death in 1949. The message: "Let's Keep Christmas", is reprinted in part from Look Magazine:

"The promise that the angels sang is the most wonderful music the world has ever heard: 'On earth peace, good will toward men.' It was not a pronouncement upon the state of the world then; nor is it a reading of the international picture of the present time . . . But it has a promise — God's promise—of what one day will come to pass. The years that are gone are graveyards in which all the perishable stuff of human life is buried. But human history has any voice, it is to say that all these ways of men lead nowhere. There remains one way — The Way —unpriced, undiscounted, unfailing fully . . . the way of Him Who was born a Babe in Bethlehem.

"In a world that seems not only to be changing, but even to be reversing, there are some scores of millions of us who want Christmas to be the same . . . with the same old greeting 'Merry Christmas' and no other. We long for the abiding love among men of good will which the season brings . . . believing in this ancient miracle of Christmas with its softening sweetening influence to tug at our heart strings once again. We want to hold on to the old customs and traditions because they strengthen our loyalties, bind us to our friends, make us one with all mankind for whom the Child was born, and bring us back again to the God Who gave His only begotten Son, that 'whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have eternal life.' So we need not 'spend' Christmas . . . not 'observe' Christmas — we put it as it is . . . in all the loveliness of its ancient traditions. May we keep it in our hearts, that we may be kept in its hope."

INCIDENT AT BETHELEHEM

The inn was crowded. Rooms were let
All occupied.
And so, as landlords oft must do,
The keeper, though their need he knew,
Turned them aside.

He looked at Mary, pale and grim,
And sent them to the stable dim
Where they could rest.
How strangely worked God's wonders are!
Yet, something must have stirred in him,
Deep in his breast.

A child was born! To worship, far
The shepherds came.

WHEN CHRISTMAS?

We are not certain at just what date December 25 came to be considered as the birthday of our Lord. The year is certain—it was about the year 400, declared that this date was known in the Church from the beginning. The earliest record was have is from a writing dated about A.D. 180 which quotes the Gaul as saying that they celebrated the birth of the Lord on December 25 and indicates that this was a long-observed practice.

We can assume with considerable degree of certainty that the date we now observe as the birthday of our Lord has the backing of such ancient tradition and that it certainly must represent a conviction which, as Chrysostom declared, came down from the earliest days. The Puritans rejected any celebration of Christmas, but today every branch of the Christian Church celebrates this festival and celebrates it with joy.

As the carols begin to ring out from Church choir lofts, along the streets, over radio and TV, a new lift to the human spirit seems to take place. This is one time when enmities are forgotten.

"Joy to the world, the Lord is come Let earth receive her King."

Interesting Origins of Carols

(By Walter Maufried in the Milwaukee Journal)

"In the year 1644 the unfortunate people of England had to keep Christmas as a fast, because it happened to fall on the last Wednesday in the month that day which the Long Parliament had ordered to be kept as a fast, in which the Puritan influence had abolished Christmas." So we are reminded in the "Oxford Book of Carols."

Under such restrictions the Yuletide Folk tunes and carols been flourishing for several centuries, took a considerable beating. They went under ground, and when they were permitted to emerge, they were not the same. Some were forgotten, some were altered, and some garbled into meaninglessness. Even the word "carol" was wrongly knocked down to mean any song connected with Christmas. Actually, a carol, while having a religious theme, is popular, simple and jolly, suggesting in the very word from which it is derived—"chorus-lea, (choral dance). The "First Nowell" some 300 years old, is a favorite example of true English carol. Its origin is probably originated in France. The Yule song with its strong solemn impact is, of course, a hymn.

Since the Puritan revolution, we have had to grow a new crop of Christmas songs, and we have had likewise to import liberally from continental Europe. Our present stock is extensive, varied, and essentially singable. It takes a cold, unmusical heart to resist their spontaneity and appeal.

The songs are relatively modern, "Adeste Fideles" ("O come all ye Faithful") was written in Latin, but it probably goes back no farther than the time of the Caesars than 1700. The tune may have been Portuguese, or possibly it was composed by the English organist of a Portuguese chapel in London, at the time of the duke of Leeds, a music lover, heard it, liked it, and presently noted it as "The Portuguese Hymn." The Latin text has been translated into 30 or 40 tongues.

"Hark, the Herald Angels Sing" was written by Charles Wesley, genius. However, he didn't write the words, a special song must be composed for the 1st birthday of the Lord, and were altered for political campaigns. In Dickens' "Christmas Carol" (which is not a carol at all), the singing of "a tune makes a colorful episode. Another carol—"I saw three ships come a-lling in, come sailing in"—stem from the same British period and Christmas, although it is gaining. The traditional "Wassail" has a genuine following also.

Nahum Tate, who flourished around 1700, was an English poet laureate, but not the greatest, however the librettist for the operable operas "Dido and Aeneas," he worked Shakespeare's plays and he wrote "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks." This Christmas hymn, for which there are several tunes, is likely to outlast the rest of the Tate products.

The United States has contributed several of the world's finest Christmas songs. "O Little Town of Bethlehem" was written, by a poem, by the brilliant young Philadelphia pastor, Phillips Brooks, after he visited the Palestine hills by night. His organist, Lewis Redner, decided to put it to music as a processional for the Sunday school children. The idea for the tune came to Redner only the night before the class meeting. He called it "a gift from the skies."

A Massachusetts Unitarian pastor, Edmund H. Sears, wrote a poem in 1850 to the Christian Register. The editors printed the verses: "It came upon the midnight clear, that glorious song of old." A Boston musician, Richard Storrs Willis, liked the poem so much he gave it the music that almost everyone now knows.

In 1863, when the Civil war was a gloomy phase Henry Wadsworth Longfellow penned his "song of peace on earth, good will to men." The fifth verse, "I heard the Bells on Christmas Day." Longfellow wrote with the deepest of sincerity: "For I had been badly wounded. Several members of my family were dead at 1st, J. B. Calkin, provided the musical setting.

John H. Hopkins Jr., an Episcopalian rector of Williamsport, Pa., wrote "We three kings of Orient are;" the gifts we present "The unusual pageant—it is often staged—was received so enthusiastically and it spread so far and so rapidly that many hearers took it for a current traditional production. It happens to be 95 years old this month. It certainly must be ranking with the better Christmas musical productions not only of America but of the world.

Two Schools Of Thought

(Brantford Expositor)

According to one outmoded and discredited school of thought, giving a child guns, toy soldiers or even model aircraft to play with is to encourage the youngster to be a violent militarist! Could anything be more absurd, based on the evidence of centuries of common sense?

A sounder theory is that this very "playing at soldiers", like the reading of blood-and-thunder stories about cowboys, Indians, highwaymen, pirates, and other assorted villains, is a good escape mechanism.

The youngster who thus goes adventuring via the printed page, or perhaps the movies, or radio (which, alas, nowadays is less likely (so some seemingly sound experts say) to go out knifing the neighborhood kids than if he did not have this form of release and enjoyment.

Smart Foxhounds

(Sudbury Star)

The National Geographic Society has come to the rescue of politicians who talk glibly of "red herrings" but are completely at a loss to find the origin of the term's expression.

The solution is explained in the following words by the society: "Dragging a smelly lining of dead fish across the trail of old England chose to end a chase for any reason they would sing a red herring across the trail. The hounds would follow the herring, lose the fox, and the chase would be called in."

Politicians are not wrong when they speak of "red herrings" as devices to mislead the people. We doubt that the English foxhounds were misled by the red herring dragged across the scent left by the fox.

More like the hounds were smarter than their masters and figured it was foolish to chase an opponents fox dinner when there was a fish dinner much closer to home.

Fish Not So Smart

(Fort William Times-Journal)

A fisher has sent along what he calls a good fish story. It goes as follows:

A naturalist divided an aquarium with a clear glass partition. In the one section he put a minnow and minnows in the other. The minnow would dart over and a minnow approaching the glass partition. After three days of this treatment the minnow would swim only within only bruises he ceased his feed and subsisted on the food that was dropped in.

Then the naturalist removed the glass partition. The minnows swam all around the bass, but they would not bite at a single one. He was thoroughly sold on the idea that business was bad.-

The Moral: Take another shot at the glass partition. Maybe it isn't there any more.

It Will Happen

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

Probably the most embarrassing case of a switched picture happening is a Texas daily. As told by Bill Sweeney in his "most interesting People" the newspaper publishing on the same day as the picture of a bare lass, one of an old ice house which had been burned down and of the mayor's wife who had died. Sweeney says the mayor's sorrowful wife when the paper came off the press was the caption "Old eyesore removed at last."

Misleading Civilism

(Saskatoon Star-Phoenix)

The unemployment insurance fund itself is neither a savings bank nor a relief agency and is misleading to criticize it because it does not fulfill the functions of those institutions.

Rich Get Richer

(Edmonton Journal)

"All Canadians can be rich in 25 years," says a prophet. Since some will be richer than others, however, little will have been done to allay popular discontent.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

DOROTHY WANTS TO BE A DOCTOR

I want to be a doctor, writes Dorothy — Some say it's not for a girl to be a doctor. Please tell me what you think about it. I am 15 years old and a sophomore in high school. (Signed).

I don't know, Dorothy. Such a question of individuality in my view—if it were possible today to become a doctor, as it was when I was your age, by completing four years of high school and then four years of medical school and then passing the legitimate graters' "test" — the so-called state medical board's examination for a license to practice medicine, I'd say only make the degree, Doctor of Medicine, seem absurd—'cd say by all means become a doctor.

But conditions are different today. You can't become a doctor so easily now. When you leave high school you must dawdle for four years in the environs of higher learning — in college, that is — where you learn many things which do not make you a better man or woman, before you can enter medical school, if you can find a medical school which will accept you as a student.

Even by this time more than half of us spend another year or two as interns in hospital after we had received the M.D. degree and passed the state medical board's examination for a license to practise. So probably we old timers devoted an average of five years to training after high school, whereas the present requirement is not less than ten years—far too much of one's useful life to pay for the privilege of practising medicine, I think.

But, as I say, I'm prejudiced against the highfalutin monkeyshines of modern medical education. Put this down as ignorance on my part, if you like. I'm sure it because I have never observed any difference between the professional ways of doctors with only a high school premedical education and those with a college premedical education.

Somewhere in the maddening conglomeration of books around here is one by a woman who decided she wanted to be a doctor. The book was made into a movie. I can't remember the title or the doctor's name, but no doubt the librarian at the public library will know—ask for it and read it.

I hope I have not discouraged you, Dorothy, or any other girl who may have the calling to become a doctor. I felt it my duty to answer your question honestly.

Certainly there is need for, and room for, women in medicine. Day by day women are achieving more and more distinction not only in scientific experimental medicine but also in the practice of medicine and in medicine and surgery.

If you have the call, Dorothy, answer it with all your heart and spirit, and God bless you.

From Doc Brady.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ON TAKING BITTER MEDICINE

Many of us wince at taking bitter medicine. We used to do so in childhood when we realized the significance. Usually it was that bitter medicine that made us jingled and the shut-in → that challenge the courage and faith of us all. So-called bitter medicine is bitter and we never wrote in life, tragic as the term is.

The joy at the event of the birth of Christ was balanced by the suffering upon the Cross. With completeness the example of that life has influenced mankind as no other has.

Defeats and failure are both bitter medicines to take, but their only finality lies in a loss of will and faith. We can make a start over again. Life new may always begin with the morning light In it is the smile of hope, the curative medicine of God's love.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Merry Christmas

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

Mrs. Sothern was desperately in need of money, and so when she came across the Currier and Ives print she thought right off that it might be possible to sell the picture to a collector for a considerable sum. The painting was dusty and fly-specked and encased in a heavy, antiqued gold frame, but she carried it down to the kitchen and cleaned it as best she could, and then called in Burt.

"It's been in the attic for years," she explained. "Mother had it a long time ago. And you know some Currier and Ives prints are worth fortunes."

Burt scratched his chin and scrutinized the barely distinguishable signature. He nodded slowly. "You might get something for it at that," he said. "It's a Currier and Ives all right, and it's sure enough old."

"Oh, Burt, wouldn't it be wonderful if we could! Why, it would just solve everything!"

Burt grinned. "Well, there's no harm in trying. More I look at it the more I think it might bring a price. Tell you what I'll do: I'll call Moe Avery. He's a collector and he'll buy it if it's worth anything."

So Burt went to the phone and called Moe Avery. "He'll be here in an hour's time," he told his wife a moment later. "We'd better not get too optimistic though. Probably turn out to be worthless."

"Oh, Burt, you don't think it will, Why!— why I'd be satisfied if it brought $50!"

"Ought to bring that," said Burt. "Ought to bring more! However, no use in getting optimistic."

Mrs. Sothern sighed. "Fifty dollars!" she said. "Think of it. Just think of all the things we could do. But there. As you say, I mustn't get optimistic."

"That's best," Burt agreed. "Even $25 is a lot of money to us."

They talked about the prospects and possibilities, both pro and con, undergoing various sensations of hope and fear and optimism and misgivings, until finally the door bell rang and Burt admitted Moe Avery.

Mrs. Southern held her breath while he bent to study the painting.

Moe was a brisk and efficient little man. He greeted them briefly, and then produced his glasses.

"How long?" he asked, "has this print been in your family?"

"Oh, ever so long," said Mrs. Sothern. "I—I've rather lost track."

"Hum," said Moe. "You've been saving it?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Sothern, "we've been saving it."

The collector removed his glasses, carefully returned them to his case and puff the case into his pocket. His face wore a doleful expression. He sighed heavily. "I'm afraid," he said, "that I can't offer you enough to make it worth your while to sell. I'm sorry."

She said, striving to keep her voice under control: "Just a minute, Mr. Avery. We do need the money, and I've gone to the bother of carrying it way down stairs—"

Mr. Avery hesitated. "No," he said presently. "I can't do it. It would be robbery. Tell you what: I'll call a collector friend of mine and send him out."

Mrs. Sothern felt a little panicky. What if the collector friend couldn't pay them anything? After all, Mr. Avery knew them and was bound to be sympathetic. The collector friend might be merely an excuse.

Mr. Avery looked from one to the other of them. "Well, all right, since you insist. But don't feel insulted at my low figure. I realize what you have here, all right. Don't mistake that. But ready cash is scarce, and it's the best I can do."

Mrs. Sothern had visions of $3, even $2. The suspense was making her nervous. She said: "Well what is your offer, Mr. Avery?"

The collector took a deep breath. "O. K. Now, remember and don't throw me out. It's a rare print — we all know that —but the best I can offer right now is $1300."

"Thirteen hun—", Burt tried to catch his wife before she hit the floor. But he missed. She was conscious again when the doctor arrived.

"She'll be all right," the doc said, "in a few minutes. Must have got a slight shock . . . Well, I'll be running along, Merry Christmas."

"Thanks," said Burt. "Yeah, Merry Christmas! Yeah, Merry Christmas . . . Yow! MERRY CHRISTMAS! You bet!"

If Santa Misses, Reindeer Supply Will Be at Fault

If Santa Claus misses some youngsters this year, it could be offered plausibly that he was not able to round up enough reindeer for his yearly trip around the globe.

The reindeer shortage has become, in recent years, much too acute. It has been estimated that wolves have destroyed 500,000 of Santa's helpers within the last decade or so, leaving an approximate 50,000.

The difficulty of keeping the animals alive in a temperate climate makes it unlikely that any of the few remaining will be transported from their native regions to other lands for the holiday season, as has been done in the past.

American boys and girls will have to be satisfied with standins. The few department store deer featuring Santa's complete outfit this year will be using native deer as fambitutes for Dasher, Prancer, and company.

'Christkindli' Is Swiss Counterpart of Santa

Santa Claus plays a very insignificant part in the Swiss celebration of Christmas, observed mostly on December 24. It is Christkindli, the Christ Child, who makes the rounds of Swiss homes on Christmas Eve.

This radiant angel is said to have come from the north, traveling on a fairy-like sleigh pulled by reindeer, much in the fashion of our Santa. Christkindli brings good Swiss children a beautiful tree, and many gifts. Like Santa, he stresses obedience and admonishes the naughty youngsters.

Nurses' Choir Presents Program of Christmas Carols

The nurses-in-training at the Belleville General Hospital will carol on Christmas Day through the wards of the hospital singing carols for the benefit of the patients who are spending Christmas there, pose beneath the evergreen decorated archway in the main hall of the hospital. The nurses' choir is a portion of the Christmas program planned for the patients tomorrow.

Student Nurses' Choir Will Entertain Hospital Patients With Carols on Christmas

In the midst of the hustle and bustle of Christmas preparations, many people are inclined to forget there are a few who will not be home for Christmas. They may not be too far away, yet they might as well be one hundred miles distant as be where they are. These are the people who will spend Christmas in hospital. However, the administration of Belleville General Hospital has inlected an element of Christmas spirit within the white walls.

Through the foresight and understanding of the hospital administrator, Kenneth E. Box, under the guiding hand of Miss Margaret Peart, nursing supervisor, along with the decorative work of the hospital purchasing agent, L. F. Burfoot, and the cooperation of the entire nursing and medical staff, patients in the Belleville General Hospital are going to have a real Christmas.

A program which has been in the planning stage for over a month will have its consummation during these last few days of the Christmas season. There are approximately 36 Christmas trees spread out within the hospital walls. On Monday, Santa Claus visited the children's wards distributing gifts supplied by various local organizations. Tomorrow's Christmas dinner is going to be a hearty one. For those who have designed the menu, here it is: Tomato juice with biscuits; roast turkey, dressing, cranberry sauce; mashed potatoes and green peas. For dessert a choice of either hot mince pie or an ice cream sundae; coffee or milk.

During the morning, that is, tomorrow morning, a group of the student nurses under the direction of Alf Evans, will move through all the wards, singing Christmas carols as they go.

The following is a list of names of the girls in the choir: — Elinor Boyce, Shirley Johnston, Muriel Mc Gregor, Doris Carey, Lorna Fraser, Norene Goodwin, Norma Davis, Jean Bryson, Nancy Allen, Barbara Snale, June Meyers, Isobel Robeson, Shirley Hetherick, Joan Hall, Marjorie Miller, Betty Redden, Ruth Storms, Gladys Workman, Margaret Cooper, Helen Walsh, Doreen Durland, Ann Chubbuck, Eleanor Herbert, Catharine Brown, Cala Ireland, Mary Mills, Barbara Pratt, Shirley McKeown, Gwen Hart, Dorothy Dudgeon, Evelyn Hopping, Shirley Soale, Clara Randall and Mrs. Nicholls.

The girls whose names are listed above are all student nurses, registered or graduate from the first year to the last. For a solid half hour these young girls will move throughout the hospital keeping a continuous round of carols going.

A Sunday night the choir visited the Hastings County Home and sang for the old people. Tomorrow at the recorded messages of good cheer will be sent to the girls from the patients at the hospital, by radio station CFRQ, the choir will be there to with their carols. The time of the program is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. and should last for a half-hour.

The hospital staff has gone all out to make Christmas in the hospital as pleasant as possible for those who will spend the holiday in bed. Mr. Box is well aware that Christmas in hospital can never compare with Christmas at home, however, through their efforts Christmas 1952 at the Belleville General Hospital, will not be a dreary event.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1952

Those Important Last Thoughts

Miraculously on Christmas morning when I wake up and peek into the living-room everything is so beautiful and peaceful order. The tree is shining and seems to twinkle and beckon us to "hurry, hurry—we have for you here" . . . the piles of parcels wrapped so tidily are all there.

How did it happen? Did I manage it again?

It can't be. For every year I know "this time I won't make it" before the Christmas deadline. But Santa's little elves in my bodice are overgrown now instead of pulling my covers off before the crack of dawn on Christmas morning so that we can—all see what Santa brought they push me off to bed on Christmas eve, so that they can surprise me on Christmas morning.

Have your young people taken over like that? Isn't it fun?

This is the day that Barb's family drive in from the country to have Christmas Eve lunch with us and to open our gifts to one another. After that I'm all but leisurely old me has to do is to keep a hair appointment. It is wonderful to be a lady of leisure for even a few hours.

The chameleon has nothing on me for adapting his colors to his location. For there are some readers who query me about using cooking wine or brandy, etc., and ask why I give them so rarely. On the other hand there are readers who write distressing letters if I give the barest mention of any alcoholic ingredients in their cooking.

The recipe I am featuring today may be made with either almond flavoring or rum to give it a potent tang and will please everybody.

It is a fruit sauce for ice cream. Do you remember the old-time tutti-frutti? This is a modern and fresh tasting version of that, and is a posh recipe for epicures. Ideal, too, for those who do not want or cannot have plum pudding or mince pie for dessert.

TUTTI-FRUITTI SAUCE

(An elegant topping for ice cream)

Two 20-oz. cans of apricots, 3-4 cup sugar, juice of 1 orange (or juice of half orange and other half chopped with skin left on —use Sunkist oranges) juice of half lemon, grated rind of one orange and 1-2 lemon, 1-2 cup chopped maraschino cherries, 1-2 cup blanched almonds, 1 tablespoon almond flavoring-or 3 or 3 tablespoons rum. (To this may be added a can of crushed pineapple if you want to increase the quantity.) Drain apricots well. Reduce juice by boiling it with the sugar until it makes a good syrup—reduced by about half. If you use the diced orange add it when the boiling down begins. If you use the orange juice only add it when sauce is reduced with the lemon juice. When syrup is ready cut up the apricots and add to juice; add cherries and almonds. Finally add flavoring and keep in jar in refrigerator. This keeps for weeks. If pineapple is added add the pineapple juice to the apricot juice and boil them down together and add the drained pineapple when you add the chopped apricots. The fruit should never be cooked in the syrup as it spoils the fresh flavor.

Did you include dill in your grocery buying? If so do you remember how attractive they look when stuffed with cheese?

STUFFED DILL SLICES

Carefully remove the core, so you would core an apple, from the entire length of dills. Fill the centre with soft orange cream cheese. Chill. When ready to serve slice these in 1-3-inch slices and include them on your relish tray.

For Christmas Breakfast why don't you serve Eggs Benedict? You know how to do it don't you? You split and toast English muffins (or use toasted rounds of bread). Fry circular pieces of ham (you can use cooked ham) in any place these over the toasted muffin halves. Arrange on each a perfectly poached egg, and baptize it with the smoothest hot Hollandaise sauce you can make. Um-m.

Wouldn't it be wonderful if we woke up on Christmas morning to the pure white quiet of newly fallen snow?

Good-bye friends. I hope you are not too tired. Merry Christmas, peaceful happy Christmas, full of glad tidings.

TREE WITH A STING

BRANTFORD (CP)—A Brantford housewife bought a Christmas tree this year and got stung—by a bee. The stinging came when she and her husband were decorating. A bee, outraged at being disturbed, flew from the branches and stung the woman on the arm.

UNITED CHURCH M.S.

The Mission Band of Frankford United Church held its annual Christmas party in the church hall on Monday afternoon with a fine attendance. Beth Bonisteel was chairman for the program.

The Christmas hymn, "O Little Town of Bethlehem", was sung with Mrs. Walter Morrow pianist. M. Plevak, H. Plevak, N. MacDonald, Donna Joan Chase read the Scripture passage taken from Luke 2, 8-20, the Christmas Story. Mrs. Poland told the children a story. Mite boxes were received.

The program was as follows—a recitation by Judy Carlisle; an acrostic, put on by Sandra Patrick, Sheila Cox, Helen Hall, Lois Williams, Bonnie Rowe, Mary MacEachern, Geneva Bonisteel, Margaret McInnis, Nancy Bailey, Williams and Judy Whitmore, a Zachern, K. Bonisteel; piano solo by Helen Plevak; recitation by Bonnie Rowe; piano duet by Betty Lou and Donna Tower; a reading, "The Crippled Dolly", by Eleanor Beach; a chorus by the Juniors, "Away in a Manger", a drill featuring Vitata Rabel, Colleen Chase, Sandra Morrow, Jean Caldwell, Kathleen Bonisteel, Carolyn Carlisle, Lillian solo by Margaret Sine.

Treats were provided for each one by the ladies of the Women's Missionary Society.

The Mission Band has had a most successful year with an average attendance of close to 40 per meeting. This has been possible only through the fine leadership of Mrs. Poland, and Mrs. Walter Morrow in the music department. These two ladies, as well as others, who have given valuable assistance, deserve a hearty 'thank-you' from the members of the United Church, for a splendid contribution in the service of the Master.

A Child's Life of Jesus

"He is standing right there in the garden. He has risen from the grave."

A CHILDS LIFE OF XTC

A Child's Life of Jesus is one of the last books written by the late Fulton Oursler, noted author of such volumes as The Greatest Story Ever Told, The Greatest Book Ever Written, etc. This presentation of Mr. Oursler's book has been specially illustrated for newspaper publication by the well-known artist, Neil O'Keeffe.

CHAPTER XII

Jesus, looking down from the cross, prayed for all of them, even for the men who killed Him:

"Forgive them Father, for they know not what they do."

Mary, His mother, loved Him more than ever for those wonderful words. Yes, poor Mary, the mother of Jesus, stood at the foot of the cross, and never took her eyes off her beloved Son. She saw Him die.

Now all who loved Jesus were crying. They wrapped His body in a sheet and laid it in a little stone house called a tomb. And they rolled a big stone against the door to keep His body safe from the wolves.

All Friday night and all day Saturday the stone lay fast against the door of the tomb. On Sunday morning, some of His friends came to the tomb to pray. But look! How can this be? Something wonderful, something unbelievable has happened.

The stone is rolled away from the door of the tomb.

The tomb is empty.

The body is gone from the grave.

Where, then, is Jesus?

He is standing right there in the garden. Not dead, but living!

He has arisen from the grave.

This Sunday when Jesus rose from the dead, was the first Easter. That was when he proved what He had told the people: That if we love God and our neighbors, there is no death but life forever ed by Franklin Watts, Inc.

in Heaven with God and Jesus and the Holy Spirit.

For forty more days Jesus stayed on earth. Many times He visited with His friends. He told them He must go back to His Father in Heaven but that no one who loved Him would ever be alone again.

"For I am with you always, even to the end of the world."

That is what He promised them the day He left the world and rose to be with His Father in Heaven. And His promise of life forever is for you and me and for everybody. That is the secret of the wonderful story of Jesus.

The wonderful boy who was born in a stable came to earth to help people to be happy—not just the people who lived 2,000 years ago when He was born but all people since then. The people today—you and I and the Queen and the candy store man and the ice cream man and all the aunts and uncles and fathers and mothers and boys and girls who will live tomorrow and always and always.

That is why the story is not finished yet. You and I can be a part of it if we know the secret, which is to let Jesus live in our hearts. The story is not finished for us because we have a soul to save and bring to God.

Each of us can help or hurt each other. Jesus wants us to help each other. Let us all try to live as Jesus taught.

Were everyone to love Jesus with the whole heart, how wonderful this world would be. No more greed or hate. No more war.

Only peace—the peace that Jesus brings us from our Father in Heaven.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

This is the shortest column of the year.

To those whom we have disappointed at times.

To those whom we, in our humble capacity, have tried to help.

To those to whom our criticism has appeared constructive, and to those who deemed it otherwise.

To those whose fine spirit of co-operation has eased what seemed to be a rather arduous task at times.

To those whose fine spirit of sportsmanship, has done much to further recreation in the city.

To those who disagree that clean wholesome sport is a must for every community, thus proving that "every knock is a boost".

To Mr. and Mrs. John Fan without whom, no phase of recreation would be possible.

To the rinkside referees, the armchair quarterbacks, the bleachers umpires.

To those heroes of ice-lane, diamond, gridiron and basketball court, the officials.

To sponsors, coaches, managers, to the players from pack-chasing peewees to divot-digging dads and grand-dads.

To sportdom, fandom, friends and otherwise . . .

This simple heartfelt wish,

A Merry Christmas

Bluebloods of Britain's Racetracks Romp Home With 1952 Sport Honors

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Bluebloods of the British turf romped home with top laurels in the United Kingdom's 1952 sports parade.

Collectively, the thoroughbreds gained a comparatively easy triumph in an otherwise back-lustre year of competition. It was a photo-finish, however, for individual honors.

The final verdict went to one of the greatest horses to show in years, the Aga Khan's three-year-old Tulyar, winner of seven successive races this season, including the Derby, the King George VI Stakes and the St. Leger.

Fortune in Purses

In purses, the wonder colt has already amassed a fortune of nearly $250,000 for its wealthy owner, establishing an all-time record for a British-bred runner. The figure also surpasses by some $60,000 the mark set by Isinglass in 1893 and barring misfortune, Tulyar still has a long racing career before him.

Nudging Tulyar for top place among the team of three jumpers, Foxhunter, Nicefella and Aberlow, winners of the Grand Prix des Nations at Helsinki last summer. Their victory gave Britain her only Olympic Games gold medal, to add to a long list of prizes won in international competition, including Toronto and New York.

In boxing, dusky Randolph Turpin still held the limelight. After his short-lived reign as world's middleweight champion ended in the return bout with Sugar Ray Robinson late in 1951, Turpin returned home from America to win the British light-heavyweight title with an 11th-round technical knockout over Don Cockell.

Early in March the British and Empire heavyweight titles also changed hands when the Welshman, Johnny Williams, gained a close decision over defending champion Jack Gardiner.

Walker Cup to U. S.

America's amateur golfers once again walked off with a convincing victory in the annual Walker Cup matches, while the British amateur title went to 26-year-old Harvie Ward of Richmond, B.C.

South Africa's wizard shotsmith, Bobby Locke, took the open crown and later went on to annex the French open title.

British women, however, made amends by defeating the United States team in the Curtis Cup matches, for their first victory in the history of the competition. A Glasgow lass, Moira Paterson, also brought the women's amateur championship to Scotland for the first time in 14 years.

Canadians in Picture

Canadians also figured prominently in the year's sports picture. An all-star team of Canadians, chosen from clubs in the English National League, won the Winston Churchill hockey trophy by defeating Olympic champions Edmonton Mercurys 6-4 in the final.

Several Canadian fighters toured the United Kingdom circuit and a representative team of Canadian lawn bowlers mixed sport with a round of festivities in an extended goodwill tour of the country.

In one of the biggest upsets of the year, Oxford University beat Cambridge by a margin of five feet over a blizzard-swept course on the Thames in the annual Varsity boat race. In the winning shell, rowing No. 3 oar, was Christopher Milling of St. John's, Nfld.

Marcus Marsh was the year's top trainer, largely because of Tulyar's string of successes. Marsh saddled Indian Hemp, first Canadian-owned horse to compete in the Derby.

Out of Running

Indian Hemp, purchased last summer by Max Bell, Calgary newspaper publisher, was an also-ran and later was shipped to the United States to campaign under Bell's colors.

Previously Toronto stock broker Charles Burns acquired an interest in the steeplechaser Tantivy and entered him in the Grand National. Tantivy was running fourth when he came a cropper at the seventh fence on the first trip around the Aintree course. The race was won by the Irish-bred Teal at odds of 100-7.

Both Ancient Enemies Need Win to Strengthen Positions; Rangers Put Record on Line

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal and Toronto, the National Hockey League's injury-ridden teams, clash tonight in the only Christmas Eve game.

Both clubs, antagonists of old, badly need a win—Montreal to grasp a firmer hold on second place and Toronto, now in fifth spot, to start a climb up the ladder. A Maple Leaf victory would send Boston and Toronto into a tie for fourth with six points behind the front-running Detroit Red Wings.

The Canadiens arrived in Toronto Tuesday minus several regulars. Elmer Lach, Dickie Moore and Billy Reay are missing from the forward ranks and Dollard St. Laurent is absent from the active defence roster.

Reay, who suffered a fractured cheek bone in Boston Sunday night has operated on in Montreal Monday night and will be out for three or four weeks.

As a reinforcement, the Canadiens called up Gerry Desaulniers of Montreal Royals of the American Hockey League, who has scored nine goals and 16 assists for 25 points so far this season. He was up for three games on a lend-lease arrangement last season.

Toronto has called up two players, has two definitely out and another pair whose effectiveness will be impaired if they play.

Eric Nesterenko, up from Toronto Marlboros, a lead farm in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, and Phil Maloney, up from Pembroke of the American Hockey League, will help fill the breach.

Toronto is short the services of veteran centre Max Bentley, out with a back ailment, and George Armstrong, out for two or three weeks with a twisted knee. Sid Smith will be nursing a slightly sprained ankle and Howie Meeker a twisted knee.

Christmas night tail-end New York is at Boston and third-place Chicago at Detroit.

New York will be putting one of the club's most unprepossessing records on the line Christmas night. In 30 Christmas games, the Rangers have won 16, lost three and tied one.

There was one stretch from 1930 through 1949 when they played without defeat. The unbeaten streak was broken in Detroit in 1950, Detroit also won last year's game with New York in Detroit 2-1. This year it will be the third Christmas Eve game between Boston and New York. The Rangers won in 1935 and 1938.

Gendron Hits For Hat Trick

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was all according to the book in the Quebec Junior Amateur Hockey Association Tuesday night. The first-place Montreal Canadiens edged second-place Quebec Citadelles 3-1 and the third-place Three Rivers Reds downed the fourth-place Montreal Royals 5-3.

There were no junior games in the Ontario circuit.

Event of the night was a three-goal burst by Canadiens Guy Gendron of Three Rivers. He notched his markers in the second frame. His first goal broke a tie and the Reds were never headed thereafter.

In the Canadien-Citadelles game, Canadiens went ahead on goals by Les Lilley and Denis Boucher, Roland Leclerc saving the Quebecers from a shutout.

E. C. Giesbrecht, Hockey Stars' Father Dies

PEMBROKE (CP) — Eugene (Charlie) Giesebrecht, a native of Germany who fathered enough hockey stars to ice a crack family team, died in hospital here Tuesday after a long illness.

He sent one son to the National Hockey League and one of his daughters married another NHL star, Giesebrecht, father of six sons—all good hockey players—and six daughters, came to Canada at an early age and had lived in the nearby village of Petawawa for 44 years.

He ran a prosperous grocery business.

His sons were among the many outstanding hockey players turned out by the Ottawa valley. They include Roy, once with Detroit Red Wings; Bert, now with Shawinigan Falls Cataracts in the Quebec Senior League; Jack, with Ottawa Senators in the same league; Fred, Bruce and Dick.

Then two of his six daughters married notable puckstars, too, and became Mrs. Cully Simon and Mrs. Thain Simon. Cully Simon was once a star defenceman with Chicago Black Hawks.

The Giesebrechts themselves, with the Simons in the fold, could ice a formidable team all by themselves and occasionally, for exhibition purposes, they did. There have been Giesebrechts with Pembroke Lumber Kings for years.

Boxing Judge May Retire; 'What's The Use?'

NEW YORK (AP)—Joe Agnello, veteran boxing judge who had his score card changed by the commission in the controversial Billy Graham-Joey Giardello fight Friday, is thinking of retiring from the game.

"If I can't call them as I see them, what's the good of it?" said Agnello, 53-year-old former boxer and a ring judge for more than 25 years.

Agnello's card of the televised fight was changed by chairman Bob Christenberry and commissioner Dr. C. B. Powell of the state athletic commission after he had voted 6-4 in rounds for Giardello. That gave the Philadelphian a split decision victory in the Garden main event. After studying the cards of the three officials, the two commissioners changed two rounds on Agnello's card, making his final score 5-5 in rounds and 7-6 in points for Graham. That gave Graham the verdict.

Hard Acres

Harry Meldrum Moore

"But—Caswell? Don Caswell? Why couldn't he take charge?"

"Caswell?" Northcott asked knowingly, "Caswell is a good office man, but it takes more than a good office man to make a success of a business—my business."

"But—but—" Curly protested, "I have my own work to look after. I'm all tied up as it is."

"If I'm not too bold, Curly, I'll tell you what to do. Put Simon Foster in charge—of your cartins—"

"Harry is already working for me. But I promised Belanger that I would see that his race track was properly built. I can't back out now."

Banker Northcott laughed, "I'm not going to let you dodge the issue like that, Curly Brown," he said, "you can still supervise the construction of Belanger's track and buildings. I had that all fixed up with Belanger before I went for you. Belanger is just as anxious as I am to see the mill going again. And, look, Curly, I have a tip for you."

"A tip?" Curly questioned, as the banker leaned forward.

"Yes, a tip on the Lookout. has been found marketable. The country body is so extensive that the mine will be running for years. A company has been formed and is now seeking a site for the mill. The mines by railway to new docks at Bellevue where the ore will be reloaded for lake vessels and taken across the lakes to the steel mills in the States. The railway's surveyors are expected to go out this fall; the railway should reach the mines by the end of the summer of 1904 or 1905."

"Then the Lookout does not enter into the picture at all?" Curly observed.

"At the present, I would say 'no.' The company's plan is to build steel rails and ore more. But I've an idea that they'll have to do better than that."

"What makes you say that?"

"Well, the way I figure it, as heavy oil and unfinished timbering you'll have something to say about that."

"I most certainly will have," he emphasized, "Curly said firmly, "I'll do everything I can to show the company that it should continue the line to the Depot. But I'm going to need help, in fact, every man of influence in these townships. I must have the solid backing of Jack Hazel and Peter Bowerman, Sr."

"All of which is quite obvious, Curly," Northcott said, "and you can count on me, too. And now, about that job I offer you. I'll pay you two hundred dollars a month, with bonus at the end of the year if I feel you have earned one. You'll be your own boss and in complete charge. You'll choose your men and pay them. You'll attend county council with no time taken off your pay. We must get the mill going at once, Curly, and we must build up a stock pile in that railway contract through, and I believe it will come through eventually, we must be prepared to meet increased demands for building materials for the big boom that must follow its coming here. Meanwhile we shall keep Caswell on the books. Now, what is your answer to my offer?"

"Mr. Northcott," Curly said, preparing to leave, "I'll have to give your fine offer considerable thought. I'll talk with Hazel this evening, and what she says will have some bearing on what I decide to do. I'll be in tomorrow to tell you."

At half past five that afternoon Curly unexpectedly arrived at Hard Acres, bringing Peter who had been let off early to accompany his father home. Supper over, Peter and Percy decided to go to the village and would remain in the mill.

Left to themselves, Curly and Hazel discussed briefly the day's problems and then Curly broke the news that the banker had asked him to take charge of the sawmill business.

"You mean as—as boss?" Hazel asked.

"Yes, and with no strings attached. Two hundred a month plus bonus, with no deduction for time lost attending county council and superintending Belanger's contract. Told him I'd let him know tomorrow."

Hazel considered the banker's offer thoughtfully for some time before speaking.

"Curly," she said at last, "you must accept Mr. Northcott's offer. Everything is going well with us now, but we cannot tell when it may not go so well. And the more money we have in the bank, the better it will be."

Hazel's faith in Curly said, "you are quite right. But there's more to that job. There's another angle to it that you should know about. The ore at the Lookout has passed the rigid test and the railway will be built from Bellevue to the mines within two years. Anticipating a boom at this end of the line, should the railway come this far, Northcott would build up a huge stock pile. Now as never before, Northcott will be able to get more to me than just running a sawmill and lumber business. He will give me contact with the railway company at all times. It might even be an opportunity to show the railway company that it is going to make a serious mistake if it does not build its line through to the Depot. And if that is what you think what it will mean to us!"

"I see—sort—"

"Yes, Hazel, to us. No railway can be built without ties, bridge timbers, fence posts and telegraph poles, can it? And where is there a better place to get such stuff than right here at Hard Acres? Within a few days, Curly, we shall have for the cutting thousands of dollars worth of the very things that a railway demands for its line to the amazement of, the entire family, he enumerated them.

"I saw the banker and told him I would take the job at the mill to start next Monday morning. I tipped off Jack Halder to drop in to the bank and ask Northcott if he had any news for the press. He turned my business over to Harry Foster to manage. I bought a black mare from Matt Goodyin—met him on the street—to match Barney—"

"Don't tell us you have sold Dandy?" Hazel chimed in.

"No, I haven't sold Dandy. I wouldn't do that. Beginning Monday, Dandy and Barney will go back and forth from work, to my dinners at home. Then after a while I will retire him. I'll use Barney for a sire, and—colts—"

"Keep going, Curly," Hazel laughed, "his gets more interesting the further he goes."

"Foster Brothers will start at once to get out logs and timber in the centre of the field near the elm. There will be a good paddock that will run from the barn to the road. And some day soon, I hope, I'll get Foster to bring for the Eastern States to buy several Morgan mares and after a while people riding by this place will be watching a big sign, a sign that will inform them that this is Hard Acres, the Home of the Morgans, the best horses in the world. And that's all. Curly concluded.

And Peter said loudly: "holy gee, dad! You've got it. Curly's built out, haven't you?"

And Hazel observed: "Our plowman has, for certain, his eyes on the stars."

"The reeve of the townships of Clure, Low and Angor," Percy observed, "has bought a through ticket to the Land Where Dreams Come True."

By the time the cement walks were laid at the Depot, it was nearing the end of May. And by that time Harry Foster, in complete charge of Curly Brown's business, was reporting he had plenty to go. Curly meanwhile, riding between Hard Acres, the mill office and the sports field, was rounding out days of great activity. At the sawmill, everything was running smoothly under the foremanship of George Olmsted, while Don Caswell was showing that he was worthy of his hire as office-manager during those times when Curly was elsewhere.

On May 31st, the Boer War ended. Lord Roberts had marched into Johannesburg at the head of his army and peace had been declared. The Canadian soldiers were getting ready to return home. It was a time for great jubilation, for fire-raising and for a holiday. But since May 31st fell on a Saturday and the news that war had ended did not reach the Depot until Monday evening, the villagers could do no better than to close school and business for the afternoon of Tuesday. But Jules Belanger told them not to mind—they could make up for that, at the big celebration as well as a picnic field on Dominion Day.

On Wednesday evening, June 3rd, county council, headed by Warden Strong, accompanied by the engineer and road superintendent, arrived in the Depot and sat down as honored guests to a banquet given on their behalf by the united townships and the Depot business men at the Hawkins Hotel. Reeve Curly Brown welcomed the visitors and told them the village was theirs. Next day he accompanied the warden, his fellow councillors and officials on a tour of inspection, and then was told what they were planning. The warden said that the county roads and bridge machines and equipment would follow for a few days and since the roads were in such terrible condition, and there was so much to be done to make them safe for traffic, Curly must advertise for extra men and extra horses to help with the work. The visitors were given a second dinner at the hotel and the following morning they departed for home.

A few days later, the county gang arrived, took over the town-Lines hall as headquarters, found rooms and board at the hotel, and the task of making good stretches of bad started in real earnest.

By now the fence around Belanger's Pace track had been completed, stands and buildings were under way, and the track was gradually taking shape. Pat Gilgan, who was Curly's bulk, brought in a rough estimate of the marketable timber on the property, which he said would be in later with more complete details. Percy Wren had secured his trees—sugar maples for the fields, elm for the house, cedars for hedges, hazel and dogberry and high bush cranberries for planting around the house. Lady slippers, Jack-in-the-pulpit and ferns were planted in the flower beds, and everything he had planted was doing well.

Christmas Concert

ST. GEORGE'S S. S.

The following program was recently presented to a capacity audience at St. George's Sunday School on Station St.

The program commenced with piano selections by Karen Mackenzie, followed by "The Wedding of the Painted Doll," by kindergarten classes. Much comment was made on the seriousness of the young minister in his part. They then sang "Away in a Manger"; Teddy Bear Land Rondo sang "Winter Wonderland"; recitation, "Not for Me," by Tommy Young was followed by numbers by a group of Barbara Dement's dancing school pupils: "Military Tap" by Judy Mc-Knight and Heather Scott; "Roller Skate Tap" by Linda Lennox, Penny Simmons and Susan Gist; and Janice Ronsky and Darlene Rogers also rendered several numbers. U.S. to Widen Dismissals Of UN Employees

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Alexander Wiley (Rep-Wis) said today a new move "is in the works to get rid of more Reds" in the U.S. staff at United Nations."

Wiley, a delegate to the UN general assembly, made the disclosure after a telephone talk with chairman Robert Hannegan of the U.S. civil service commission who, he said, will have a big part in touching off the house cleaning.

Eighteen U. S. citizens have been dismissed from UN jobs on the ground they were security risks, following a report by a federal grand jury in New York alleging widespread U. S. Communist infiltration of the UN staff. Wiley contends others are still on the payrolls of the UN secretariat.

Wiley said he now expects the three agencies, with Ramspeck as coordinator, will submit UN Secretary-General Trygve Lie "detailed statements giving the background of employees of questionable loyalty to this country," a step they have not taken until now.

Wiley said Lie has been bombarded because the U. S. government insisted on giving "only a one-word summary such as 'security' " in asking Lie to drop someone as a security risk.

That, he said, left the secretary-general unable to defend a dismissal in any case where the employee appealed. It is partly responsible for protests from other countries against the firings.

Father Bashes His Three Small Children to Death

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Archie Connett, 31-year-old high school English teacher, ran amuck in his estranged wife's home Tuesday, bashed his three small children to death against the floor, stabbed his wife and then cut his own throat, the Santa Clara county sheriff's office reported.

The children were found in pools of blood and scattered toys and Christmas decorations. Connett, who had locked himself in a bathroom, was found on the floor, blood gushing from his throat.

Connett, described by his principal as "one of our best teachers," was near death at Santa Clara County Hospital.

His wife, Wynona, 28, told officers she fled from her home after Connett stabbed her twice with a paring knife. She said she tried vainly to hide him from harm and their two little sons and daughter.

Britain to Pay Loans in Full, Right on Time

LONDON (AP) — Britain announced Tuesday she will pay the second annual instalments on the 1946 Canadian and United States loans in full and right on time.

A second annual payment on the wartime U.S. lend-lease account also will be made Dec. 31 on schedule, the treasury said. All together the payments total $176,680,000.

Britain last year made the first of 50 annual payments on the huge debts totaling $3,650,000,000. Under terms of the repayment scheme, Britain is entitled to whive payments in any year she finds her financial situation too difficult.

As yet, however, Britain has not applied for any waiver.

The Dec. 31 payment on the 1946 Canadian loan consists of $1,250,000 interest, $23,420,000 principal, $14,200,000.

GUESTS WELCOME Coca-Cola

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A skilful player will often deviate from a rule bid. When is it justified? Only when he knows it is off beam and he has a very strong purpose for stepping outside the beaten path.

One spade is the correct opening bid with this south hand:

♠A K Q 4
♥K 3
♦A K 7
♣A J 4 3

If a player knows this definitely and desires to try another bid, he may not be heading for trouble. He could offer hot excuses for opening it with one or two in clubs; or two in spades or no-trump.

An opening of one club is wrong because the higher rank of two equal length suits should be bid first. But he may want to give his partner the cheapest chance to make a response.

An opening bid of two clubs or two spades would be wrong. It would promise nine tricks when this hand counts only eight. But he may be afraid partner will lack enough to keep open a bid of one.

An opening of two no-trump would be wrong because it promises eight high cards when this hand has only seven. But he may like to take a chance that his jack will taken an unexpected trick.

This hand is so much better than a mere opening of one, there is great temptation to show the bigger picture. But the player who does so should know it is a stretch.

Partner of the stretcher would have no immediate way of knowing it was a stretch. His response would be based on the assumption that the opening was true. Which the opener must be prepared for.

Not only must the opener be prepared for the first response by partner. He must be prepared to give some warning of his stretch in a future round. This is to keep partner from going too high.

With all this chatter, what am I trying to tell you? That an expert could not be criticized for an odd opening if he knew how to protect his future. But one spade is the correct bid.

AT THE CAPITOL — King of the midget auto race track is Stanley Clements, starring in "Army Bound," last action drama opening Christmas night at 7.00 p.m. also showing Friday and Saturday with continuous shows. On the same program, in Technicolor is "California Conquest," starring Cornel Wilde and Teresa Wright.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — In my book, the bravest kind of movie maker is the one who attempts to film somebody's real-life story.

Everybody gets into the act, including the family, friends and business associates of the person being portrayed. And they demand payment for the use of their names. Some threaten suit if their names aren't used. Some want the facts juggled.

Then the picture is finally completed. The producer is bombarded by critics for making a watered-down or corned-up version of the person's life. And law suits for defamation of character or invasion of privy start popping up all over.

Henry Banke is now producing "The Grace Moore Story," based on the life of the late singing star.

"The legal clearances are indeed a headache," he sighed. "even if you use fictitious names for certain characters, you have to be careful. If the character is unmistakably someone is real life, the person may have grounds for suit.

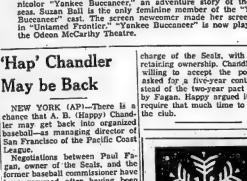
"We also have to be careful about source material. Our picture is primarily based on Miss Moore's autobiography, 'You're Only Young Twice.' If we use any other rel material, we must be careful that it appears in al least two sources. If we take it from one source, the person who wrote it might be able to sue."

Blanke produced the biographies of Emile Zola, Louis Pasteur and Benito Juarez back in the 1930s. He remarked that he even had troubles with those 19th century figures.

"There are always descendants of people involved in those stories and they can bring trouble," he said.

Blanke said that the Grace Moore film will stick as closely to the singer's life as possible. It will be concerned mostly with her early days.

"The climax of the picture will be her debut at the Metropolitan," he said.



The story has also been tailored to the talents of Kathryn Grayson, who is playing Miss Moore.

AT THE CAPITOL — Co-stars Cornel Wilde and Teresa Wright are shown above as they appear in Columbia Pictures' "California Conquest," color by Technicolor, opens at the Capitol Theatre Christmas night at 7.00 p.m., also Friday and Saturday with continuous shows. On the same program action and thrills on the dirt track with Stanley Clements in "Army Bound."

NEXT AT BELLE—Lana Turner and Fernando Lamas head a distinguished cast in M-G-M's "The Merry Widow," the world's most romantic Technicolor musical, showing Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Belle Theatre. A new Tom & Jerry Color Cartoon, and a gorgeous M.G.M. color Travelteik, "Beautiful Brazil" are added treats.

AT THE McCARTHY—Lovely Suzan Ball turns against Jeff Chandler in this highlight scene from Universal-International's Technicolor "Yankee Buccaneer," an adventure story of the high seas. Suzan Ball is the only feminine member of the "Yankee Buccaneer" cast. The screen newcomer made her screen bow in "Untamed Frontier." "Yankee Buccaneer" is now playing at the Odeon McCarthy Theatre.

Tony DeSpirito Back in Saddle

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Tony DeSpirito, the leading jockey in the U.S. with 270 winners this year, returns to the saddle today, still confident he can break the American riding record of 308 in one year.

DeSpirito served a 10-day suspension for a riding infraction, days to bring home 19 winners and shatter the mark set by Walter Miller in 1906 and tied by Joe Culmone and Willie Shoemaker in 1950.

DeSpirito plans to ride in Havana, Cuba, Christmas Day and again on Sunday to fire at the record on every available day. He will ride on all the other days at Tropical Park in Miami.

The slender little, Lawrence, Mass., booter is listed on four horses today.

'Hap' Chandler May be Back

NEW YORK (AP)—There is a chance that A. B. (Happy) Chandler may get back into organized baseball—as managing director of San Francisco of the Pacific Coast League.

Negotiations between Paul Fagan, owner of the Seals, and the former baseball commisioner have been resumed after having been broken off two weeks ago.

At the time, Fagan had offered Chandler $25,000 a year to take charge of the Seals, with Fagan retaining ownership. Chandler was willing to accept the post, but asked for a five-year contract instead of the two-year pact offered by Fagan. Happy argued it would require that much time to rebuild the club.

Death of King World News Story of 1952

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Death of King George VI was the world news story of 1952 with greatest impact for Canadians.

Presidents were elected, wars were fought, here and there a ruler fell, a train was wrecked spectacularly or an atom bomb exploded. All made revering headlines. But the story of the year was that of the death Feb. 6 of the courageous unassuming figure who typified the Commonwealth's emotional unity under the crown.

The King's death was listed by every daily newspaper editor and editor who voted in a Canadian Press poll which asked them to name the six top world news breaks and the six outstanding stories in the Canadian scene.

They were nearly unanimous also in listing Gen. Eisenhower's election among their six top world breaks. In third place was Princess Kurt Carsten's long effort last January to save the battered freighter Flying Clipper, ties.

Boyd Gang Tops

Top Canadian story was the Boyd gang—a crime yarn that began in March with the killing of Toronto detective Edmund Tong, continued through two jail-breaks, recapture and trial, and culminated in a double hanging and a life sentence for gang leader Edwin Boyd. The developing story growing out of discovery early in the year of foot-and-mouth disease in Saskatchewan cattle took second place.

The top selections:

World news: 1, the King's death; 2, Eisenhower's election; 3, the Flying Enterprise; 4, Farouk's ouster from Egypt; 5, Koje prison camp riots; 6, Harmon trail wreck.

Canadian news: 1, the Boyd gang; 2, foot-and-mouth outbreak; 3, Massey appointment as governor-general; 4, rise of the Canadian dollar; 5, Jack Hill's win in B.C.; 6, PC upset of N.B. Liberals.

Fellers Military Career

Princess Elizabeth's abdication followed a military coup in Egypt in July. Then in August came the spectacular rise of the dollar which hit par with the U.S. dollar Nov. 10 for the first time in 14 years.

High up among choices listed by late voters several had already mailed in their choices—was talkof the Curtis Fellers' case on the Army Works Services Dec. 15.

A FAMOUS CHRISTMAS LEGEND, TOLD IN THIS ONE ISSUE

The Story of THE OTHER WISE MAN

By HENRY VAN DYKE

You know the story of the Three Wise Men of the East, and how they traveled from afar, seeing to offer their gifts at the manger-cradle in Bethlehem. But long have you heard the story of the Other Wise Man, who saw the star in its rising, and set out to follow it, yet did not arrive with his brethren in the presence of the young child Jesus? Of the great desire of this fourth pilgrim, and how it was denied, yet accomplished by that denial: of his many wanderings and the problems of his quest: of the long way of his seeking, and the strange way of his finding, the One whom he sought—I would tell the tale as I have heard fragments of it in the Hall of Dreams, in the palace of the Heart of Men.

BY THE WATERS OF BABYLON

All night long Vasda, the swiftest of Artaban's horses, had been waiting, saddled and bridled, in her stall, pawing the ground impatiently, and shaking her bit as if she shared the eagerness of her master's purpose, though she knew not what it meant or was doing.

Before the birds had fully roused to their strong, high, joyful chant of morning song, before the white dawn had begun to lift lazily from the plain, the other wise man was in the midst of saddling swiftly along the high-road, which skirted the base of Mount Orontes, westward.

How close, how intimate is the companionship between a man and his favorite horse on a long journey. It is a silent, comprehensive friendship, an intercourse beyond the need of words.

They drink at the same wayside springs, and sleep under the same guardian stars. They are conscious together of the subduing spell of nightfall and the quickening joy of daybreak. The master shares his evening meal with his hungry companion, and feels the soft, moist lips caressing the palm of his hand as they close over the morsel of bread. In the grey dawn he looks around from his bronzed throne upon the gentle air of a warm, sweet breath over his sleeping face, and looks into the eyes of his faithful fellow-traveler, ready and willing for the toil of the day. Surely, unless he is a pagan and an unbeliever, by whatever name he calls upon his God, he will thank Him for this wordless sympathy, this dumb affection, and his morning prayer will embrace a double blessing — God bless us both, and keep our feet from falling and our souls from death!

And then, through the keen morning air, the swift hoofs beat their spirited music along the road, keeping time to the pulsing of two hearts that are moved with the same eager desire — to conquer space, the goal of the journey.

Artaban must indeed ride wisely and well if he would keep by the appointed hour with the other Magi; for the route was a hundred and fifty parasangs, and fifteen was the utmost that he could travel in a day. But he knew Vasda's strength, and pushed forward without anxiety, husbanding the fixed distance every day.

He passed along the lower slopes of Mount Orontes, furrowed by the rocky courses of a hundred torrents.

Crossed Level Plains

He crossed the level plains of the Nisaeans, where the famous herds of horses, feeding in the wide pastures, tossed their heads at Vasda's approach, and galloped away with a thunder of many hoofs, and flocks of wild birds rose suddenly from the swampy meadows wheeling in great circles with a shining flutter of innumerable wings.

He traversed the fertile fields of Cossaean, where the chief from the threshing floors filled the air with a golden mist, half hiding the huge temple of Astarte with his four hundred pillars.

At Baghistan, among the rich gardens watered by fountains from the mountain, he looked up at the mountain thrusting its immense rugged brow over the road, and saw the figure of King Darius trampling upon his fallen foes, and the proud list of his wars and conquests graven high upon the face of the perpendicular cliff.

Over many a cold and desolate pass, crawling painfully across the wind-swept shoulders of the hills; down many a black mountain gorge, where the river roared and raced before him like a savage guide; across many a smiling valley, with terraces of yellow limestone full of vines and fruit trees; through the oak groves of Carine and the dark gates of Zagros, walled in by precipices; into the ancient city of Chala, where the people of Samaria had been kept in captivity long ago; and out again by the mighty portal, riven through the encircling hills, where he saw the image of the High Priest of Nineveh, fashioned on the wall of rock, with hand uplifted as if to bless the centuries of pilgrims past the entrance of the narrow defile, filled from end to end with orchards of peaches and figs, through which the river wandered foamed down in mist him; over the broad rice fields, white as the autumnal vapors spread their deathly mists; following along the course of the river, under tremulous shadows of poplar and tamarind, among the lower hills; and across the flat plain, where the road ran straight as an arrow through the stubble fields and parched meadows; past the city of Ctesiphon, where the Parthian emperors reigned and the vast metropolis of Seleucia which Alexander built across the swirling floods of Tigris and the many channels of Hindeyeh flowed together through the corn lands — Artaban pressed onward until he arrived at nightfall on the tenth day, beneath the shattered walls of populous Babylon.

Vasda was almost spent, and he would gladly have halted to bring the city to find rest and refreshment for himself and for her. But he knew that it was three hours' journey yet to the Temple of the Seven Spheres, and must reach the place by midnight if he would find his companions waiting. So he did not halt, but rode steadily across the stubble fields.

A grove of date plums made an island of gloom in the pale yellow sea. As he passed into the shadow Artaban looked backward her pace, and began to pick her way more carefully.

Then, at the coming and of the darkness an access of caution seemed to fall upon her. She scented some danger or difficulty; it was not for her heart to fly from it — only to be prepared for it and to meet it wisely. His own heart knew about the grove was close and silent as the tomb, and as a leaf rustled, not a bird sang.

She felt her steps before her deliberately, carrying her head low and sighing now and then with apprehension. At last she gave a quick breath of anxiety and disgust, and stood stock-still, quivering in every muscle before a dark object in the shadow of the last palm tree.

Artaban dismounted. The dim starlight revealed the form of a man lying across the road. His humble dress and the outline of his haggard face showed that he was probably one of the poor Hebrew exiles who still dwelt in great numbers in the vicinity. His pallid skin, dry and yellow as parchment, bore the mark of the deadly fever which ravaged the marsh lands in autumn. The chill of death was in his lean body, and when Artaban touched it the arm fell back inertly, upon the motionless breast.

He turned away with a thought of pity, consigning the body to that strange burial which the Magians deemed most fitting for the funeral of the desert, from which the kites and vultures rise on dark wings, and the beasts of prey slink furtively away, leaving only a heap of white bones in the sand.

But, as he turned, a long, faint, ghostly sigh came from the man's lips. The brown, bony fingers closed convulsively on the hem of the Magian's robe and held him fast.

Artaban's heart leaped to his throat, not with fear, but with a dumb resentment at the impertinacity of this blind delay.

The Way of Wisdom

How could he stay here in the darkness to minister to a dying stranger? What claim had this unknown fragment of human life upon his companion or his service? If he lingered but for an hour he could hardly reach Borsippa at the appointed time. His companions would think he had given up the journey. They would go without him. He would lose his quest.

But if he went on now, the man would surely die. If he stayed, his life might be restored. His spirit throbbed and fluttered with the urgency of the crisis. Should he risk the great reward of his divine faith for the sake of a single deed of human love? Should he turn aside, if only for a moment, from the following of the star, to give a cup of cold water to a poor, perishing Hebrew?

"God of truth and purity," he prayed, "direct me in the holy path, the way of wisdom which Thou only knowest."

Then he turned back to the sick man. Loosening the grasp of his hand, he carried him to a little mound at the foot of the palm trees.

He unbound the thick folds of the turban and opened the garment above the sunken breast. He brought water from one of the small canals near by, and moistened the sufferer's brow and mouth. He mingled a draught of three simple but potent remedies which he carried always in his girdle — for the Magians were physicians as well as astrologers — and poured it slowly between the colorless lips. Hour after hour he labored as only a skilful leader of disease can do; and at last the man's strength returned; he sat up and looked about him.

"Who art thou?" he said in the rude dialect of the country, "and why hast thou sought me here to bring back my life?"

"I am Artaban the Magian, of the city fo Ecbatana, and I am going to Jerusalem in search of one who is to be born King of the Jews, a great Prince and Deliverer of all men. I dare not delay any longer upon my journey, for the caravan that has waited for me may depart without me. But see, here is all that I have left of bread and wine, and here is a potion of healing herbs. When thy strength is restored thou canst find the dwellings of the Hebrews among the houses of Babylon."

The Jew raised his trembling hand solemnly to heaven.

"Now may the God of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob bless and prosper the journey of the merciful, and bring him in peace to his desired haven. But stay; I have nothing to give thee in return — only this: that I may tell thee where the Messiah must be sought. For our prophets have said that He must be born not in Jerusalem, but in Bethlehem of Judah. May the Lord bring thee in safety to that place, because thou hast had pity upon the sick."

It was already long past midnight, and Vasda rode in haste, and Vasda, restored by the brief rest, sped keenly through the silent plain and swam the channels of the river. She put forth the remnant of her strength, and fled over the ground like a gazelle.

But the first beam of the sun sent her shadow before her as she entered upon the final stadium of the journey, and the eyes of Artaban, anxiously scanning the great mound of Nimrod and the Temple of the Seven Spheres, could discern no trace of his friends.

Ruins stood by the stagnant pools and jackals skulked through the low bushes; but there was no sign of the caravan of the wise men, far or near.

At the edge of the terrace he saw a little cairn of broken bricks, and under them a piece of parchment. He caught it up and read:

"We have waited past the midnight, and can delay no longer. We go to worship the King. Follow us across the desert."

Artaban sat down upon the ground and covered his head in despair.

"How can I cross the desert," said he, "with no food and with a spent horse?" I must return to Babylon, sell my sapphire, and buy a train of camels, and provisions for the journey. I may never overtake my friends. Only God the merciful knows whether I shall not lose the sight of the King because I tarried to show mercy."

For a Little Child

There was silence in the Hall of Dreams, where I was listening to the story of the Other Wise Man. And through this silence I saw, but very dimly, his figure passing over the dreary undulations of the desert, high upon the back of his camel, rocking steadily onward like a ship over the waves.

The land of death spreads its cruel net around him. The stony wastes bore no fruit but briers and thorns. By night the jackals prowled and barked in the distance and the lion made the black ravines echo with his hungry roaring, while a bitter blighting chill followed the fever of the day. Through heat and cold, the Magian moved onward.

Then I saw the gardens and orchards of Damascus, watered by the streams of Abana and Pharpar, and the mystic long sloping swards inlaid with bloom, and their thickets of myrrh and roses. I saw also the long, snowy ridge of Hermon, and the dark groves of cedars, and the valley of the Jordan, and the blue waters of the Lake of Galilee, and the terrible plain of Esdrelon, and the hills of Ephraim, and the highlands of Judea. Always through all these I followed the figure of Artaban moving steadily onward, until he arrived at Bethlehem. And it was the third day after the terror when men had come to that place and had found Mary and Joseph, with the young child Jesus, and had laid their gifts of gold and frankincense and myrrh at his feet.

Then the other wise man drew near, weary, but full of hope, gearing his ruby and his pearl to offer to the King. "Now now at last," he said, "I shall surely find Him, though it be alone, and later than my brethren. This is the place of which the Hebrew exile told me that the prophets had spoken, and here I shall behold the rising of the great light. But I must refresh myself with the visit of my brethren, and to what house the star-beam directs my feet, to whom they presented their tribute."

The streets of the village seemed to be deserted, and Artaban wondered whether the men had all gone up to the hill-pastures to bring down their sheep. From the open door of a low stone cottage he heard the sound of a woman's voice singing softly. He entered and found a young mother busy at her household work, while she told him of the strangers from the far East who had appeared in the village three days ago, and how they said that a star had guided them to the place where Joseph of Nazareth was lodging with his wife and new-born child, and how they had paid reverence to the child and given Him many rich gifts.

"But the travellers disappeared again," she continued, "as evidently as they had come. We were afraid at the strangeness of their visit. We could not understand it. The man of Nazareth took the gold and his new-born child and fled away the same night secretly, and it was rumored that they were going far away to Egypt. Ever since, there has been a spirit of fear in the village; something evil hangs over it. Herod the King and his cruel soldiers are coming from Jerusalem to force a new tax from us, and the men have driven their flocks and herds far back among the hills, and hidden themselves to escape it."

Artaban listened to her gossip, the timid answers and the child in her arms looked up in his face and smiled, stretching out its rosy hands to grasp at the winged circle of gold on his breast. His heart warmed to the touch. It seemed like a greeting of love and trust to one who had journeyed long in loneliness and perplexity, fighting with his own doubts and fears, and following a light that was veiled in clouds.

"Might not this child have been the promised Prince?" he asked within himself, as he touched its soft cheek. "Kings have been born ere now in lowlier places than this, and the favorite of the stars may rise even for a cottage. But it has not seemed good to the God of Wisdom to reward my search soon and so easily. The One whom I seek has gone before me, and now I must follow the King to Egypt."

Plain Food of Peasants

The young mother laid the babe in its cradle, and rose to minister to the wants of the strange guest that fate had brought into her house. She set food before him, the plain fare of peasants, but willingly offered, and therefore full of refreshments for the soul as well as the body. Artaban accepted it gratefully; and, as he ate, the child fell into a happy slumber, and murmured sweetly, in its dreams, and a great peace filled the quiet room.

But suddenly there came the noise of a wild confusion and uproar in the streets of the village, a shrieking and wailing of women's voices, a clangor of brazen trumpets and a clashing of swords, and a desperate cry: "The soldiers! the soldiers of Herod! They are killing our children."

The young mother's face grew white with terror. She clasped her child to her bosom, and crouched motionless in the darkest corner of the room, covering him with the folds of her robe, lest he should wake and cry.

But Artaban went quickly and stood in the doorway of the house. His broad shoulders filled the portals from side to side, and the peak of his white cap all but touched the lintel.

The soldiers came hurrying down the streets with bloody hands and dripping swords. At the sight of the stranger in his imposing dress they hesitated and scowled, but the captain of the band approached the threshold to thrust him aside. But Artaban did not stir. His face was calm as though he were welcoming the stars, and in his eyes there burned that steady radiance before which the half-armed hunting leopard shrinks and the fierce blood-hound pauses in his leap. He held the soldier silently for a instant, and then said in a low voice:

"I am all alone in this place, and I am waiting to give this jewel to the prudent captain who will leave me in peace."

He showed the ruby, glistening in the hollow of his hand like a great drop of blood.

The captain was amazed at the splendor of the gem. The pupils of his eyes expanded with desire, and the hard lines of greed writhed about his mouth. He stretched out his hand and took the ruby.

"March on!" he cried to his men, "there is no child here. The house is still."

The clamor and clang of arms passed down the street like the beadlong fury of the chase sweeps by the secret covert where the trembling deer is hidden. Artaban re-entered the cottage. He turned his face to the east and prayed:

"God of truth, forgive my sin! I have said the thing that is not, to save the life of a child. And two of my gifts are gone. I have spent for man that which was meant for God. Shall I ever be worthy to see the face of the King?"

But the voice of the woman, weeping for joy in the shadow behind him, said very gently:

"Because you have saved the life of my little one, may the Lord bless you and keep thee; the Lord make His face to shine upon thee and be gracious unto thee; the Lord life up His countenance upon thee and give thee peace."

Hidden Way of Sorrow

Then again there was a silence in the Hall of Dreams, deeper and more mysterious than the first interval, and I understood that the years of Artaban were flowing very swiftly under the stillness of that clinging fog, and I caught tonly a glimpse, here and there, of the river of his life shining through the shadows that concealed his course.

I saw him moving among the throngs of men in populous Egypt seeking everywhere for traces of the household that had come down from Bethlehem, and finding them under the spreading sycamore-trees of Heliopolis, and beneath the walls of the Roman

I am waiting to give this jewel to the prudent captain who will leave me in peace.

"Who art thou?" the sick man asked, "and why hast thou sought me here to bring back my life?"

The Story of THE OTHER WISE MAN by HENRY VAN DYKE

Through heat and cold the Magian moved steadily forward. "I shall surely find him, though it be alone," he felt weary but hopeful.

fortress of New Babylon beside the Nile—traces so faint and dim that they vanished before him continually, as footprints on the hard river-sand glisten for a moment with moisture and then disappear.

I saw him again at the foot of the pyramids, which lifted their sharp points into the intense sky from glow of the sunset sky, changless monuments of the perished glory and the imperishable hope of man. He looked up into the vast countenance of the crouching Sphinx, and vainly tried to read the meaning of the calm eyes and smiling mouth. Was it, indeed, the mockery of all effort and all aspiration, as Tigranes had said — the cruel jest of a riddle that had no answer, a secret that never can succeed? Or was there a touch of pity and encouragement in that inscrutable smile — a promise that even the defeated should attain a victory, and the disappointed should discover a prize, and the ignorant should be made wise, and the blind should see, and the wandering should come into the haven at last?

I saw him again in an obscure house of Alexandria, taking counsel with a Hebrew rabbi. The venerable man, bending over the rolls of parchment on which the prophecies of Isaiah were written, read aloud the prophetic words which foretold the sufferings of the promised Messiah — the despised and rejected of men, the man of sorrows and the acquaintance of grief.

"And remember, my son," said he, fixing his deep-set eyes upon the face of Artaban, "the King whom you are seeking is not to be found in a palace, nor among the rich and powerful. If the light of the world and the glory of Israel had been appointed to come with the greatness of earthly splendor, it must have appeared long ago. For no son of Abraham will ever again rival the power which Joseph had in the palace of Egypt, or the magnificence of Solomon thronged between the lions in Jerusalem. But the light for which the world is waiting is a new light, the glory that shall rise out of patient and triumphant suffering. And the kingdom which is to be established forever is a new kingdom, the royalty of perfect and unconquerable love.

"I do not know how this shall come to pass, nor how the turbulent kings and peoples of earth shall be brought to acknowledge the Messiah and pay homage to Him. But this I know. Those who seek Him will do well to look among the poor and the lowly, the sorrowful and the oppressed."

So I saw the Other Wise Man again and again, travelling from place to place, and searching among the people of the dispersion, with whom the little family from Bethlehem might, perhaps, have found a refuge. He passed through countries where famine lay heavy upon the land and the poor were crying for bread. He made his dwelling in plague-stricken cities where the sick were languishing in the bitter companionship of helpless misery. He visited the oppressed and the afflicted in the gloom of subterranean prisons, and the crowded wretchedness of slave-markets, and the weary toil of galley-ships. In all this populous and intricate world of anguish he found none to worship, he found many to help. He fed the hungry, and clothed the naked, and healed the sick, and comforted the captive; and his years went by more swiftly than the weaver's shuttle that flashes back and forth through the loom while the web grows and the invisible pattern is completed.

It seemed almost as if he had forgotten his quest. But once I saw him for a moment as he stood alone at sunrise watching at the gate of a Roman prison. He had taken from a secret resting place in his bosom the pearl, the last of his jewels. As he looked at it, a mellower lustre, a softer and iridescent light, full of shifting gleams of azure and rose, trembled upon its surface. It seemed to have absorbed some reflection of the colors of the lost sapphire and ruby. So the profound, secret purpose of a noble life draws into itself the memories of past joy and past sorrow. All that has helped it, all that has hindered it, is transfused by a subtle magic into its very essence. It becomes more luminous and precious the longer it is carried close to the warmth of the beating heart.

Then, at last, while I was thinking of this pearl, and of its meaning, I heard the end of the story of the Other Wise Man.

Pearl of Great Price

Three-and-thirty years of the life of Artaban had passed away, and he was still a pilgrim, and a seeker after light. His hair, once darker than the cliffs of Zagros, was now white as the wintry snow that covered them. His eyes, that once flashed like flames of fire, were dull as embers smouldering among the ashes.

Worn and weary and ready to die, but still looking for the King, he had come for the last time to Jerusalem. He had often visited the holy city before, and had searched through all its lanes and crowded hovels and black prisons without finding any trace of the family of Nazarenes who had fled from Bethlehem long ago. But now it seemed as if he must make one more effort, and somehow, whispered in his heart that, at last, he might succeed.

It was the season of the Passover. The city was thronged with strangers. The children of Israel, scattered in far lands all over the world, had returned to the Temple for the great feast, and there had been a confusion of tongues in the narrow streets for many days.

But on this day there was a singular agitation visible in the multitude. The sky was veiled with a portentous gloom, and currents of excitement seemed to flash through the crowd like the thrill which shakes the forest on the eve of a storm. A secret tide was sweeping them all one way. The clatter of sandals, and the soft, thick sound of thousands of bare feet shuffling over the stones, flowed unceasingly along the street that leads to the Damascus gate.

Artaban joined company with a group of people from his own country, Parthian Jews who had come up to keep the Passover, and inquired of them the cause of the tumult, and where they were going.

"We are going," they answered, "to the place called Golgotha, outside the city walls, where there is to be an execution. Have you not heard what has happened? Two famous robbers are to be crucified, and with them another, called Jesus of Nazareth, a man who has done many wonderful works among the people, so that they love him greatly. But the priests and elders have said that he must die, because he made himself out to be the Son of God. And Pilate has sent him to the cross because he said that he was the 'King of the Jews'."

How strangely these familiar words fell upon the tired heart of Artaban! They had led him for a lifetime over land and sea. And now they came to him darkly and mysteriously like a message of despair. The King had arisen, but He had been denied and cast out. He was about to perish. Perhaps He was already dying. Could it be the same who had been born in Bethlehem thirty-three years ago, at whose birth the star had appeared in heaven, and of whose coming the prophets had spoken.

Artaban's heart beat unsteadily with that troubled, doubtful apprehension which is the excitement of old age. But he said within himself: "The ways of God are stranger than the thoughts of men, and it may be that I shall find the King, at last, in the hands of His enemies, and shall come in time to offer my pearl for his ransom before He dies."

So the old man followed the multitude with slow and painful steps toward the Damascus gate of the city. Just beyond the entrance of the guardhouse a troop of Macedonian soldiers came down the street, dragging a young girl with torn dress and disheveled hair. As the Magian paused to look at her with compassion, she broke suddenly from the hands of her tormentors and threw herself at his feet, clasping them around the knees. She had seen his white cap and the winged circle on his breast.

"Have pity on me," she cried, "and save me, for the sake of the God of purity! I also am a daughter of the true religion which is taught by the Magi. My father was a merchant of Parthia, but he is dead, and I am seized for his debts to be sold as a slave. Save me from worse than death."

Artaban trembled.

It was the old conflict in his soul, which had come to him in the palm grove of Babylon and in the cottage at Bethlehem — the conflict between the expectation of faith and the impulse of love. Twice the gift which he had consecrated to the worship of religion had been drawn from his hand to the service of humanity. This was the third trial, the ultimate question, the last and irrevocable choice.

Was it his great opportunity or his last temptation? He could not tell. One thing only was clear in the darkness of his mind — it was inevitable. And does the inevitable come from God?

One thing only was sure to his divided heart — to rescue this helpless girl would be a pure deed of love. And is not love the light of the soul?

He took the pearl from his bosom. Never had it seemed so luminous, so radiant, so full of tender, living lustre. He laid it in the hand of the slave.

"This is thy ransom, daughter; it is the last of my treasures which I kept for the King."

While he spoke the darkness of the sky thickened, and shudder-ing tremors ran through the earth, heaving convulsively like the breast of one who struggles with mighty grief.

The walls of the houses rocked to and fro. Stones were loosened and crashed into the street. Dust clouds filled the air. The soldiers fled in terror, reeling like drunken men. But Artaban and the girl whom he had ransomed crouched helpless beneath the wall of the Praetorium.

Quest Was Over

What had he to fear? What had he to live for? He had given away the last remnant of his tribute for the King. He had parted with the last hope of finding Him. The quest was over, and it had failed. But even in that thought, accepted and embraced there was peace. It was not resignation. It was not submission. It was something more profound and searching. He knew that all was well because he had done the best that he could from day to day. He had been true to the light that had been given to him. He had looked for more. And if he had not found it, if a failure was all that came out of his life, doubtless that was the best that was possible. He had not seen the revelation of "life everlasting, incorruptible and immortal." But he knew that even if he could live his earthly life over again, it could not be otherwise than it had been.

Once more lingering pulsation of the earthquake quivered thru' the ground. A heavy tile, shaken from the roof, fell and struck the old man on the temple. He lay breathless and pale, with his grey head resting on the young girl's shoulder, and the blood trickling from the wound. As she bent over him, fearing that he was dead, there came a voice through the twilight, very small and still, like music sounding from a distance, in which the notes are clear but the words are lost. The girl turned to see if someone had spoken from the window above them, but she saw no one.

Then the old man's lips began to move, as if in answer, and she heard him say in the Parthian tongue:

"Not so, my Lord: For when saw I thee and hungered and fed thee? Or thirsty, and gave thee drink? When saw I thee a stranger, and took thee in? Or naked, and clothed thee? When saw I thee sick or in prison, and came unto thee? Three-and-thirty years have I looked for thee; but I have never seen thy face, nor ministered to thee, my King."

He ceased, and the sweet voice came again. And again the maid heard it, very faintly and far away. But now it seemed as though she understood the words:

"Verily I say unto thee, inasmuch as thou has done it unto one one of the least of these my brethren, thou has done it unto me."

A calm radiance of wonder and joy lighted the pale face of Artaban like a first ray of dawn on a snowy mountain peak. One long, last breath of relief exhaled gently from his lips.

His journey was ended. His treasures were accepted. The Other Wise Man had found the King.

And now that his story is told, what does it mean?

How can I tell? What does life mean? If the meaning could be put into a sentence briefly, there would be no need of telling the story.

England Once Forbade Christmas Observance

Did you know that the observance of Christmas was once forbidden in England — the home of the Yule Log, the Carol-singer and the wassailers?

During the Reformation many believed the undue jollity of Christmas Day was sacrilegious. Parliament, on December 24, 1652 ordered that "no observance shall be held of the five and twentieth day of December, commonly called Christmas day; nor any solemnity used or exercised in churches upon that day in respect thereof."

This edict proved to be very unpopular with the masses of the people. It was not until many years later, however, that Christmas was once again regarded as a holiday.

GONDOLA

By Shirley Sargent

Harley Davis was always wanting something. He knew Christmas was only two weeks off, but he just itched to buy a gondola car for his electric train. One day he ditched his little sister, Charlene, and hurried down town. He spent his entire monthly allowance and all his savings for a blue gondola car. Harley hoped his mother wouldn't be angry because he had been gone all afternoon. He hoped.

Contrary to his expectations, Mrs. Davis was jovial, teasing him, and even, to his immense relief, keeping Charlene away from his package. Charlene was five and a pest to Harley, because he was nine and grown up. Helping mother with the dishes that night was almost fun, Harley thought; she was so friendly and nice. Then it happened.

"Harley," his mother said tenderly, "Don't tell me what you bought unless you want to, but what did you get for Charlene?"

Harley was stunned. He wished she wouldn't smile at him — couldn't she see he was trying to think?

"Nothing, mom," he stammered, "I bought a gondola car."

Harley was stunned. He wished she wouldn't smile at him.

"Oh," she wiped the plate slowly, "I thought you had been Christmas shopping."

"I guess I spent all my money; I guess I sort of forgot about Christmas presents," Harley hung his head.

"Yes, I guess you did," she answered, and that was all she said about it, but he felt terrible. He didn't even unwrap his new car.

Gee, he'd really pulled a dumb trick this time, Harley thought miserably. He'd always bought them presents, but he'd completely forgotten it. Well, he'd have to earn some money; even his piggy bank was empty. He earned a quarter the next morning shovelling snow, but he had to take care of Charlene most of the time.

He tried to get a job the next day, with no luck, and when he found a dime in the snow Charlene grabbed it, yelling "Finders keepers . . ." He was so furious, he felt like choking her. Instead he made her a big snow house on the sidewalk, right in everybody's way, but people didn't seem to mind. Then the apartment lady with her little girls stopped to admire it.

"How old are you, Harley?" she asked.

"Nine," he said proudly.

"I wonder," she smiled, "I wonder if you could take care of my little girls this afternoon?"

Harley started to tell her goodbye, but she interrupted, saying she'd pay him 25c an hour. Harley was so surprised he leaned against the snow house, knocking part of it down. "Why, sure, I'd be glad to," he said.

Harley worked hard that afternoon, doing everything three little girls could think of and he could build. Once in a while the lady would wave to him from the apartment window, but he was usually too busy to look up. She paid him a whole dollar and asked if he would take care of the children again the next day. Harley, tired as he was, managed to say "Yes." His mother teased him about being a baby sitter, and was he going to charge her for taking care of Charlene? Harley didn't mind, after all he had a cash capital of $1.25.

Although it rained the following day, Harley earned another dollar taking care of the little girls in the apartment.

That afternoon, with his mother's blessing he went Christmas shopping. He felt proud to pay for the presents with money he had earned. He had the packages gift-wrapped and put them under the tree without telling his mother what he had gotten.

Christmas morning the floor was littered with gay papers, children's toys and Harley's electric train. He opened the box and put the gondola on the track. It looked keen.

Then mother handed him another package. "I bought you a gondola car a long time ago," she explained. "But of course I had to return it. I think you've earned this, though."

Harley grinned at his mother as he peeled the paper off. He knew what she meant. "A tank car!" he shouted, "Gee mom, just what I need."

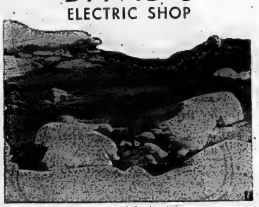
A Very Merry Christmas

CHRISTMAS ASTRONOMY
By Orla Breen



A new-born babe in a stable lay,
One night in the long ago;
And men pursued their usual way,
Concerned with their joy or woe.
For why should they care that from Galilee,
A carpenter and his wife,
In town for the tax, had come to be
The sponsors of one more life?
Why, none could have thought it worth his while
To stop at the stable door and smile!

But the tiny Flame in that infant breast
That seemed of so little worth,
Was to serve as a beacon of warmth and rest —
The light of this dark old earth!
Thus man never knows what gift of love
The babe in its crib may bring —
At the lowliest birth the Host above
May heavenly carols sing!
And souls that will scorn men's caste-forged bars
Can see a sky filled with Christmas Stars!

Ella Cloud stood back and eyed the tree with approval. Honestly, she thought, it's beautiful, even if it is more a New Year's tree than a Christmas tree. A surge of joy rushed through her. Mary would soon be home. Any minute now. Charles would be back from the hospital with her. Ella looked anxiously about the charming living room; everything must be done to make Mary's New Year a happy one.

Ella sank tiredly down in a chair, and covered her eyes with her plump hands. Two years since that awful day of the accident, but it seemed as vivid as yesterday. It was late afternoon when she got that message that her daughter had been in a traffic accident. The mad race to the hospital had been a nightmare. They wouldn't let her see Mary. She was glad now, that they hadn't.

"Aw, Mom," he said, "aw your nose!"

She felt tears trickle between her fingers. Mary had been bitter; wanted to die. And absolutely refused to see anyone, not even her mother, or Charles or little Charlie.

Then the operations began, one after another, until that happy day when Mary consented to see her. How precious Mary looked. Her blond curls spilled over her pillow. The doctors had performed miracles.

Little by little they had built Mary's face up again.

Ella heard a car stop, then footsteps coming up the walk.

The front door opened. Tall handsome Charles, and Mary stood in the doorway. Then Mary was in Ella's arms, and she was saying, "Oh, honey, we're glad to have you home."

Mary was brought into the house, fussed over almost as a brand new baby, and finally was settled comfortably in a big chair. Not until the first wave of the home-coming excitement had passed was she able to bring herself to express the uneasiness that had been in her heart all day.

There was a catch in Mary's voice when she asked, "Where's little Charlie?"

Suddenly fear choked Ella. She wished she had cautioned little Charlie not to mention his mother's face, but it was too late now.

"He—he went to a party," Ella said as she helped settle Mary on the divan.

A blare of children's voices sounded, "Good-night Charlie," then Little Charlie's "Good-night."

The door burst open, and little Charlie stood, in all his eight-year-old inquisitiveness, and stared at his mother.

The child's countenance fell. "Aw, Mom," he said, "Aw! Your nose!"

Ella said hurriedly, "It's a nice nose. Isn't it, Charlie?" Silently she was praying, "Oh, God, make him say the right thing."

Little Charlie's face twisted into a frown. "I don't see anything especially the nose Mom always had. And I've invited all the kids over tomorrow to see Mom's doctor-made nose. Now, Butch Mitchell's going to tease me something awful."

Suddenly, Mary began to laugh. The tears trickled down her pale cheeks. She was laughing as she had thousands of times before the accident, wholeheartedly.

Little Charlie said dejectedly, "It ain't nothing to laugh about. I thought sure you'd come back from the hospital with something to show."

Mary stopped, laughed, thought a second, then asked solemnly, "Would two toes do?"

Little Charlie's expression brightened, "Honest, Mom?"

Quickly Mary slipped off her shoes, then hose, and held up one pretty, slender foot, "See," she said.

"Golleee!" Little Charlie grinned, "That'll do just fine, Mom."

Mary was laughing again, and hugging her young son.

To keep from bursting into tears of pure joy, Ella asked, "How do you like the New Year's tree, Charlie?"

Little Charlie shrugged, "It'll do," he said with a grin.

Big Charles' arms were around Mary. He answered, "Mother, that's a beautiful tree, but not as beautiful as our Mary."

Ella smiled. It was going to be a Happy New Year for Mary.

Holly Superstition: It Will Determine Ruler in Household

Husbands and wives! Attention! There is an old superstition about holly that will interest you. It was a belief of the ancients that the first to bring Christmas holly into the house, either husband or wife, would be the one to rule the household during the coming year.

But don't put too much stock in the belief. Like other Christmas legends, the truth might be lost in history.

The Druids were great admirers of the holly plant. They believed that its evergreen leaves attested to the fact that it was never deserted by the sun, and was therefore sacred.

Legends have related how the crown of thorns was plaited from holly. The leaves of the plant were white until the Crucifixion, after which they turned a deep, blood red.

A holly wreath placed on the door is believed enough to frighten away the boldest of witches.

CHRISTMAS WEDDING

By Maude McCurry Welsh

Jean knew that Hawkeye, the store detective, was keeping his eyes on Jimmy, and she couldn't help feeling worried.

Jean and Jimmy were engaged. They were going to be married as soon as Jimmy got a raise. They both worked in the Mammoth Store and were saving everything they could to buy furniture for their home.

Hawkeye was exactly like the detectives made famous by the movies. Hard, gimlet eyes, black cigars, derby tilted on his head. It was his boast that nobody ever got by with stealing in this store. It was this boast that had given him the nickname of Hawkeye.

Old Hawkeye had seen her hand Jimmy a long flat package one day.

But why, oh, why should he suspect Jimmy of doing anything wrong! It was true his salary was small, but he would be promoted soon, Jean was sure of that.

Jean had had a wistful hope that they might have a Christmas wedding, but Jimmy's raise hadn't come through. In the meantime, they were carefully budgeting their combined salaries and had bought an expensive piece of electrical equipment for their home. That had been a thrill.

When they were married Jimmy was determined that Jean shouldn't work. Jimmy himself had been brought up in a wonderful home, with many advantages, but it had all been lost. Jean had come up the hard way. She'd been orphaned and had gone to work at fifteen.

But they were getting along fine now and had wonderful hopes of soon really belonging to each other. Jimmy's salary as head of the notion department in the basement wasn't large, but Jean knew he'd get a better one soon.

Business was brisk and steady since it was now the week before Christmas Day. Jean and Jimmy walked home together when the store closed, as they usually did, almost too tired for a movie or a walk along the river. They didn't allow themselves many pleasures and sometimes were so tired, they just said goodnight at the door of Jean's rooming house. Jimmy lived a number of blocks further down the street.

But they'd always have a little time together when the store closed. Once every week Jean would say, "Did you bring your bundle?" And Jimmy would say he simply couldn't. But Jean would laugh at him, teasingly, "Honestly, Jimmy, I want to do it for you," and at last he'd give in.

Jean hadn't the slightest idea that old Hawkeye had seen her hand Jimmy a long, flat package one day when he'd been working late in the stock-room. She'd done this before since it was the most convenient way. And Hawkeye was always snooping around. He'd even overheard Jean and Jimmy talking one day. Jean was saying, "You must bring the things to me. It's helping us to get ahead. And nobody will ever know."

Jimmy had said, "But, honey, it's not right."

Jean had laughed. "I only do it because I love you. You know that."

Jimmy's voice was husky with love. "You're so sweet, Jean. I believe you'd do anything for me."

And all the time Hawkeye was keeping his gimlet eyes on Jimmy. But Jean knew he hadn't done anything wrong.

And then the next time Jean handed Jimmy the long flattish package (Jimmy was working late that night again), they both felt a heavy hand on their shoulders. Hawkeye said, "You two kids come with me."

He took them to Mr. Purvis, the owner. "It's a clean case, boss." Hawkeye opened the package. "Ha, shirts. Just what I thought. She steals them for him."

Mr. Purvis said tiredly, "They are not new. They're freshly laundered."

Jimmy's face was crimson, but Jean said proudly, "We're engaged, Mr. Purvis, and Jimmy has to have so many clean shirts. It's so dusty in the basement, so I launder them for him.

Well, it was a clean case at that, and when the story Jimmy received his promotion right then and there, and Mr. Purvis gave them three days off, so they had a Christmas wedding after all.

Joel Poinsett, U.S. Statesman, Noted for Flower

Although he was a brilliant statesman and the friend of four American presidents Joel Roberts Poinsett is famous chiefly because he introduced the Mexican plant known as the "Painted Leaf," or "Mexican Fire Plant" into the United States.

Poinsett, then U.S. ambassador to Mexico, called the plant to the attention of American botanists and grew the plant himself as a hobby at his South Carolina home, after he left Mexico.

The plant grew heavily in America, however—especially popular at Christmas time — and was renamed poinsettia, in honor of the man who brought it to this country.

Contrary to popular impression the flaming red bracts of the poinsettia are not flowers, but leaves, and it is for these bracts that the plants are grown.

It is possible to have variations of either pink or white varieties, as well as of the more usual red, popular because it carries out the holiday color scheme of rich bright red with a contrast of the dark green of the leaves.

The beautiful poinsettia, almost a "must" as far as Christmas decorating is concerned, is one of the most temperamental of plants.

The poinsettia thrives in its native Mexico, but elsewhere must be handled carefully—perhaps pampered slightly. However, the brilliantly colored flowers it has at Christmas time is reward enough for any efforts needed to make the plant thrive.

Constant warmth is needed by poinsettias. Temperature should obe kept between 70 and 80 degrees during the day and no less than 62 degrees at night. And sudden change in temperature and drafts will cause the plant to drop its leaves.

Abundant water is also a necessity, but it should be applied but once a day so that the plant may become moderately dry between waterings. This permits needed oxygen to reach the roots.

Try to give the poinsettia the sunniest spot available. It is wise to fertilize it occasionally with a good commercial food tablet.

Santa through the years

It's little wonder that Saint Nick is especially generous to the American people. History proves that the Americans have done a lot for St. Nick.

They have given him a new name, a new face and figure, and a new means of transportation.

The original European version of Saint Nick pictured him as a tall angular man who rode on a bony grey mare. Both the horse and Saint Nick looked as if they hadn't had a good meal in some time.

The early English settlers in this country started giving Saint Nicholas his "New Look." The English children adopted the legendary Christmas figure from the Dutch, but the English children had trouble pronouncing "Saint Nickolous." Somehow the name changed to "Santa Kalous", and finally it was corrupted to "Santa Claus."

However, this was only the beginning. In 1809 Washington Irving, in his "Knickerbocker's History of New York", wrote of the Saint as the guardian of New York City. Irving described Saint Nick as a jolly fellow with a broad-rimmed hat and huge breeches. He taught Saint Nick to smoke a long pipe, and, in the story, replaced his shuffling haybarner with a trim wagon.

A short time later, Saint Nicholas' transportation was aided by Clement Moore in his famous poem, "The Visit from Saint Nicholas," written in 1832. Moore, a professor of divinity in a New York theological seminary, gave Saint Nick a sleigh, twinkling eyes, cheeks like roses, nose like a cherry, and a round little belly.

Today's Santa Claus is by no means streamlined, but he is a far cry from the lean, ascetic, somberly dressed fellow who, for centuries, on Christmas Eve, guided his mare through the streets of Europe.

STABLE AT BETHLEHEM: The shepherds "came with haste and found Mary, and Joseph and the Babe lying in a manger."

Ancient Church Bells Still Summon Village

A pair of ancient church bells, brought to Frankenmuth, Mich., from Bavaria shortly after Frankenmuth was founded as an Indian mission, has been calling the congregation of St. Lorenz to Christmas eve services for more than a 100 years.

Ninety-five per cent of the residents of the small community are members of the church, earning the village the title of "the most Christian community in the United States."

Frankenmuth has never had a crime of violence, and, as far as residents can remember, no one has been jailed over a period of 25 years. The only visitors to the lockup were transients given a night's lodging.

Smith of the BBC, who wrote and produced this program. The Original St. Nicholas Was Not A Fat Man, Was Noted for Goodness

Fact and fancy may be thickly woven about Santa Claus, but those who have studied ancient manuscripts have to conclude that he really lived.

He wasn't the fat and jolly figure most people know, and he usually was canonized, earth. But from the beginning, all the old texts ascribe to the golden goodness of his heart.

He was born Nicholas, in Patara, city of Lycia, a long vanished country in Asia Minor.

His father was a wealthy bishop and young Nicholas, it is said, was a remarkably religious and studious child. So good a youngster was he that later ages adopted him the patron saint of children.

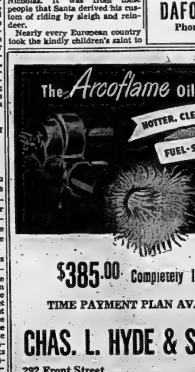
When his father died, Nicholas decided to give away the family's wealth, but secretly. The story goes that he used to throw bags of gold coin down the chimneys of needy homes. And one young girl, it is said, found a gift from the saintly fellow, placed a stocking in the hearth to catch the gold as it fell.

Throughout his life) he performed good works, even miracles. He was appointed archbishop after his death, in 325, he was canonized. The facts become foggier after that, but certain highlights are clear.

In 940 A.D., Vladimir of Russia came to Constantinople for baptism. Just what occurre dthere is unknown, but when Vladimir returned to his homeland, he proclaimed St. Nicholas the patron saint of Russia.

A little while later the Lapplanders and other northern peoples began telling tales of Nicholas. Those were the days when people that Santa derived his custom of riding by sleigh and reindeer.

Nearly every European country took the kindly children's saint to heart and celebrated his birthday, Dec. 6, by giving gifts. When the Dutch settled New Amsterdam, they brought SantaNiklaus with them. Shortly American tongues soon shortened the moniker to Santa Klaus.



In the U.S., Sania waxed his most prosperous. He put on weight, traded his bishop's robes for ermine-trimmed red velvet, moved his celebrations to Dec. 25. In 1809 the thin ascetic monk, according to Washington Irving, had become "a tubby little fellow with a jolly manner."

Thomas Nast, cartoonist for Harper's Illustrated Weekly, and creator of the GOP elephant and Democratic donkey, saw him as half Old King Cole, half Father Knickerbocker in a series of cartoons for Harper's.

In 1822, Dr. Clement Moore, a divinity professor, wrote down certain Christmas Eve experiences in a poem, and opened "Twas the Night before Christmas."

It was Moore who first got close enough to Saint Nick to see the rosebud mouth, dimples, beard and "belly that shook like a bowlful of jelly."

With these authorities behind the Americans, the U.S. version of Saint Nick re-crossed the ocean to be accepted from Scotland to Australia.

Perfect Present

By Willard Orran Farsing

The reassuring weight of the nickels and dimes in his pocket took the bite out of the raw Saturday afternoon. Scurrying the street from the ambience of three dollars for the first time in his eleven years, Jimmy Sands thought it was a pretty nice world after all.

After enjoying this sense of prosperity for a few seconds, he remembered that he'd have to hurry if he wanted to hide the Christmas present before his mother woke up from her nap. A frown came over his face as he glanced around to locate his pup, Mike wasn't anywhere in sight.

He started to whistle, but his attention was caught by little Sammy Farr, big-eyed with excitement and fright running toward him.

"Hey, Jimmy!" called Sammy. "They took Mike!"

Jimmy's heart sank. He knew who "they" meant, but he had to make sure. "Who took him?"

"The dogcatcher. Mike tried to run away, but they caught him down at the corner."

A boy of eleven couldn't cry in front of a seven-year-old, so Jimmy blinked away the tears.

Little Sammy wiped his nose on a ragged cuff. "I didn't have time to hide him like we always did before when that old dogcatcher came around."

"I shouldn't have left him down here by himself, but I didn't want to wake Mom up."

Jimmy sat down on the step and buried his face in his hands. Sure, he thought, they'll keep Mike five days before they get rid of him, but a license will cost two dollars and a half.

Then he straightened up; he had three dollars in his pocket, three dollars all his own, that he had earned by running errands, selling junk, and saving a few pennies that his mother had given him for candy.

If he bought a license for Mike, he wouldn't be able to buy the new purse for his mother, but he could buy a nice handkerchief or something with the fifty cents that he would have left.

A boy of eleven couldn't cry in front of a seven-year-old so Jimmy blinked away the tears that came when he thought of Mike being tossed into a pen full of big snarling dogs.

"I wonder if they'll feed him good?"

A sense of shame kept returning when Jimmy thought of his mother's shabby old purse. She'd had it as long as he could remember, and he had seen her stop several times to admire the shiny black one with the gold-colored clasp that was in Hoffberg's window. He had been looking forward to Christmas morning when she could carry the new one proudly to church instead of hiding the old one's shabbiness by tucking it under her arm... It just wouldn't be right to spend that money for Mike's license.

"Come on, Sammy. If you'll keep it a secret, I'll let you go with me to buy Mom's present." Maybe he could leave the purse with the landlady until after his mother had gone to work. Jimmy was glad that she wouldn't have to clean up those offices on Christmas Eve and Christmas night.

Jimmy's mother smiled at him over the potatoes she was peeling for their supper. "Didn't you come up the front way?"

"Yes." Jimmy closed the door and walked over to stare out the one window in their room.

"You didn't leave Mike out in front?"

"No—". The tears that he had been holding back poured out. "The dogcatcher took him away." Jimmy sank into a chair by the table and buried his head in his arms.

Smiling to herself, Jimmy's mother placed a comforting hand on his shoulder and said, "I think it will be all right with Santa if you get your present tonight instead of tomorrow night." She took an envelope out of the shabby purse that lay on the table. "Merry Christmas, Jimmy."

Something in her voice made Jimmy open the envelope and look inside. "Mike's license!" Jimmy grabbed his cap and started for the door.

"You had better wait till tomorrow, Jimmy. It's late, and it's a long way over to the dog pound. They'll take good care of Mike."

Denmark Pays Homage to Hans Andersen

Last year a festival in Denmark paid tribute to one of the greatest helpers Santa Claus ever had. He was Hans Christian Anderson, fairy tale writer, and composer of many Christmas stories.

His works have sold more copies than any other book, except the Bible, and have been translated into 35 languages, including Arabic, Hebrew, Chinese, Japanese, and Greenlandish.

Since 1875, the year that he passed away, visitors from all parts of the world have come yearly to the town of Odense to see the home of the writer of such tales as "The Little Match Girl", and "The Ugly Duckling."

Anderson's fairy tales, released just before Christmas each year, brought him money, fame and the attention of princes, as well as the adoration of children.

Once he received a United States dollar bill, enclosed in a letter written by a young American girl. It read: "Papa says that the dollar is my own, and that he does not suppose you are in particular need of money, but I owe you this and a great deal more, he thinks it proper that I should send it to you."

Christmas Miracle

By Maud McCurdy Welsh

Patti was trying to forget it was Christmas. Last Christmas there had been Jimmy and a ring on her finger. Then there was a girl named Ann and everything was over. Patti had packed up and come to this part of the city to live.

So there were no holly wreaths or Christmas trees in Patti's Pie and Bake Shop just off one of the bustling avenues. There was only Patti with her brown curls and mellow brown eyes and the long rows of pies and cakes in the show-cases.

People came from all over to buy Patti's cakes and pies and drink her coffee. There was the little old lady who sold magazines on the corner, who came in every day.

She was the first to come in on Christmas Day, and she was lugging a big wreath of holly and mistletoe. "Hang it in the window, dearie," she said.

When he saw the wreath his eyes brightened. "Gee, that's pretty."

Patti looked at the wreath and a sick pain caught at her heart.

Then there was the telephone operator who went in to a branch exchange, and later the little boy who always stopped by from school.

He had such sad blue eyes it made Patti's heart ache. Patti always gave him a huge slice of pie and he ate it with relish, but the sad bewilderment of his eyes never seemed to go away.

When he saw the wreath, his eyes brightened. "Gee, that's pretty. You gots' to have a Christmas tree, too, Mis' Patti!"

Patti started to say no, but choked. Instead she asked, "Don't you have a Christmas tree, Tommy?"

He shook his head, Patti said, her voice still choky. "Then we'll have one here. You can help me trim it."

In no time at all the tree was up and they were trimming it. In spite of her stern efforts, Patti was conscious of a slow excitement. Tommy asked if she believed in that Kris Kringle stuff, and she had to stop to think before answering. At last she said, "Yes, Tommy, I think I do. Kris Kringle may be just a symbol, but he's really alive in the hearts and spirits of hundreds of people all over the world."

Tommy's blue eyes grew bright. "Then do you think if I told him I only wanted my daddy back, and nothing else, he would bring him back to us? My mommy told him to go, but she didn't mean it. Now she's sick, but if Daddy would come back, we'd both be happy and she'd be well."

An idea was slowly dawning in Patti's mind. "We'll see what we can do, Tommy," she promised.

Patti hurried like mad and got a personal ad in the late edition of one of the big dailies. It read: "Mr. Thomas Baker, please call at Patti's Pie & Cake Shop at once."

Patti waited and waited. The little shop was brightly lighted and the Christmas tree was a beautiful sight to see.

But no one came. Everything had been sold, so Patti was putting out the lights when a tall young man walked in. He said, "I may be the Thomas Baker you're looking for. O course, I don't know."

Patti just felt it in her bones that he was the right one. She said, "Do you have a wife by the name of Margaret and a little boy named Tommy?"

"Yes, yes, I do."

"Then you're the right Thomas Baker. They want you to come home."

"Are you sure Margaret wants me too?" The young man's eyes were suddenly full of hope.

Patti nodded, "I'm very sure," and the young man thanked her, turned to go and almost collided with another tall young man who had just come in. He was looking at Patti with his whole heart in his eyes. "The minute I saw that personal, I was sure it was you. No one ever spelled Patty with an "i" as you do." Then he reached for her hands. "Patti, won't you forgive me for thinking I could ever love another girl? Won't you let me put this ring where it belongs?"

Patti was choked up with happiness as he slipped the ring on her finger. "Finding you is like a Christmas miracle," he whispered as he took her in his arms.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

May you have a joyous day — with many blessings to come your way!

Cedars of Lebanon Are Well Protected By Religion, Law

On a shelf-like plateau, 600 feet above the Mediterranean, the world's oldest Christmas trees stand where they have stood for centuries. The cedars of Lebanon, 400 of them, are protected by religion and law from harm at the hands of either the Moslems or the Maronite Christians.

The magnificent trees "that sing of the nativity" were numerated as monarch among trees long before Judah had her first king. Some of them have a girth of 40 feet and a branch circumference of 300.

In the days of the conquering thousands of conscripted Hebrew workers were sent into the Lebanons to take to Jerusalem "cedar trees without number"; the result of one of the first building contracts, between Hiram of Phoenecia and King Solomon.

Today, however, the trees are protected by law and the department of agriculture of the government sponsors the planting of seedlings, so that the giant cedars will grow forever.

ROSEMARY... for Remembrance

The rosemary shrub, symbol of fidelity and constancy, was once supposed to possess many occult virtues. Hamlet's Ophelia said, "There's rosemary, that's for remembrance." The fact that Rosemary blooms at Christmas has introduced it into celebration of this feast.

Rosemary, according to one legend, opened to hide the Virgin Mary and her child from the soldiers of Herod, a legend shared with the juniper and other trees.

Another legend says that, during the flight to Egypt, Mary threw her blue cloak over a bush of rosemary when she lay down to rest. Ever since, in her honor, the flowers have been the heavenly blue of the mantle.

St. Francis Made First Crib in Cave

St. Francis of Assisi is believed to have originated the custom of displaying the Christ Child in a crib at Christmas time.

He is reported once to have said to one of his followers: "I wish to celebrate holy Christmas night with you. In the woods near the cloister you will find a cave where we shall arrange a manger filled with hay. We shall have an ox and an ass just as at Bethlehem. I wish to see how poor and miserable the Infant Saviour became for us."

So at midnight, in the small Italian village of Garcia, in the year 1200, St. Francis and his followers celebrated mass at the cave and sang hymns in honor of the Christ Child.

AN AGE-OLD STORY RETOLD . . . "She brought forth her first-born Son, and wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid Him in a manger."

To wish you joy...

May yours be filled with the happiness of an old-fashioned Merry Christmas!

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is according to the stars.

FOR FRIDAY, DEC. 26, 1952,

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—May have to give yourself an extra prod to get over the possible rough spots, mostly till 3 p.m. If you exert right attitude, and your natural keen-thinking self, you can make headway.

April 20 to May 20 (Taurus)—Be ready, eager and full of ambition this stimulating day and you will reap just rewards. Avoid useless legal and personal complication.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Activities you like and for which you have natural talents highly favored. Surgeons, dentists, lawyers, publicity managers, artists among top sponsored.

June 22 to July 22 (Cancer)—No looking back, regretting the past. Look, move forward; be confident this encouraging day. You should meet with some success.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Be happy, hopeful of your outlook and the major part of your battle will be won. Mental work, trades, buying, financial undertakings can bring new achievement.

August 23 to September 22 (Virgo) — Among day's first boosted: physicians, chemists, government posts, long-term investments; work with machinery, tools; household matters.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Varied and far-reaching matters, strenuous tasks highly sponsored. Be consistent, sensible to young as well as old. Don't dominate!

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Things can hum with excitement, accomplishment now, if you let your natural self handle affairs. You have a clever mind, use it rightly in all things.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—A good period to start laying away for a rainy day, for less fortunate times. Attend to today's matters now and you won't have to worry or press so later.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Self-control important. It may not be difficult to start others on the warpath, and you don't want that, of course. Be wise; be calm, don't kindle resentment.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—Stay on the moderate side today. A smile a kind word are worth more than approving silence.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces)—Day's conditions can be tricky, fool you into making wrong moves unless you are careful. Study the news for information.

YOU BORN TODAY: have a knack for being able to do things right at the right time. Strong characteristics are innately dependable, above board, just, but often abrupt and over-frank. You have inclined to materialistic views, to be oversensitive. Give less thought to material values; pray daily for guidance. Birthdate of: Thomas Gray, 'Eng. poet; Geo. GOVERNOR BURNED

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP)—Governor K. C. Wu was painfully burned Saturday as he dedicated a new blast furnace at Sitze, near Taipeh. When Wu threw a kerosene-soaked rag into the furnace to start it in operation, a tongue of flame shot out. It singed his left eyebrow and the hair from the left side of his head and burned his hand.

Records Show Yule Customs Were Old In Fourth Century

The exact age of the Christmas festival is not known. Records show, however, that the holiday was spoken of in the fourth century as a custom of long standing.

Christmas began as Christ's Mass, or the Mass of Christ, sometime during the fourth century. It took that long after the blessed night for the great importance of Christ's birth to be realized by the people. Until this time it had been the custom of the church to celebrate the anniversaries of deaths, rather than births. Christ's birthday was the first to be made an occasion for feasting.

The date for the celebration of the Christ Mass was selected by the church. So many years had elapsed that the actual date of His birth could only be a matter of conjecture.

The festival and spirit of Christmas spread through the Christian worlds. Pagan customs, even as they do today, attempted to adapt themselves to the Christmas season.

For many years after the origin of Christ's Mass the church frowned upon the practice of exchanging gifts during the festival season. Later, however, the practice was condoned, in remembrance of the spirit of the Three Kings of the Orient who had followed a shining star to the crib of the new-born Christ, bringing presents with a sense of humility.

Games for All Make Christmas Family Party

Christmas is the time for family get-togethers. One of the best ways to make these gatherings memorable for all concerned is to engage in games which the whole group can play.

A nice one to start off with would be a Sugar Plum Hunt. Have one member of the family hide Christmas candies ahead of time in various nooks and corners around the house. At a given signal everyone starts hunting and gathering the pieces. The other who gathers the greatest number would be given a prize.

The Christmas Puzzle is another good one to get things going. Look through some magazines, which are filled with pictures of Santa Claus at this time of year. Cut out enough of these to go around, paste them on stiff cardboard, and cut them into pieces. Then put each group of pieces in a separate paper bag. At the signal, everyone opens a bag and starts putting the puzzle together.

The Christmas Scramble Contest is good for a group with older children in it. This is simply a contest to see who can unscramble a group of words the fastest. Just for fun, see if you can work out the following — astna, erireden, chagli, dynca, gostkncl, erte, trepsen, hupoe, alsore, and niborth.

Christmas Greens Brighten Home

A few well placed Christmas greens can do much to brighten a house at Christmas time. Properly clipped, the branches will never be missed, and might improve the looks of the tree from which they are cut.

Hemlock, red cedar, juniper, yew, pitch pine, white pine, will make suitable material for a spray to decorate a mantel, door, or a spray for a newel post.

In pruning, however, keep in mind the natural appearance of the tree from which you clip branches.

ST. NICK'S SPIRIT

It is thought that St. Nicholas died about 345 A.D., and for 30 days following his festival day his genial spirit roamed the earth, filling the hearts of mankind with love and generosity. He gave the gifts without thought of return — the true spirit of St. Nicholas and Christmas.

Lots of cheer and jolly good fun . . . May your holiday be A Merry one !

Churchill To Talk Over Global Affairs With Eisenhower

Leaves on New Year's Eve For New York on Queen Mary

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill will visit New York and Washington by the Queen Mary to talk over global problems informally with President-elect Eisenhower. They left yesterday to President Truman in Washington and fly to Jamaica for a two-week holiday.

The announcement of the 78-year-old prime minister's trip on the Queen Mary was made shortly after by his office at 10 Downing street. Lloyd's shipping underwriters estimated Churchill's last trip to the United States at $1.4, but added that winter ship speeds often are delayed by heavy weather.

In New York Eisenhower said: "I have heard that my old friend was coming and I am delighted to meet him."

Official Ottawa does not expect Churchill to visit Canada during his January trip. But he may go there later on another journey some time after Eisenhower's inauguration. The prime minister last visited Canada a year ago after he called on President Truman in Washington.

Diplomatic informants said during his three days in New York, Churchill will discuss with the next U.S. President the Korean war, Anglo-American trade relations, co-operation and defence problems in West Europe and Southeast Asia.

It is their view, that the two leaders will also discuss the possibility of a meeting with Prime Minister Stalin.

The announcement of Churchill's trip came less than 48 hours after Stalin's reply to the latter's invitation to the idea of direct talks with Eisenhower aimed at easing world tensions.

Churchill has said he favored top level talks with the Russians—with Britain taking part.

Eisenhower has not disclosed his personal reaction but his aides said he feels wary of being hoodwinked by the Soviets into a conference with Stalin.

Informed London sources predicted Churchill would pay a second visit—and special one, for the United States after the Jan. 20 inauguration of the new President. On that trip, the prime minister likely will take along other officials, including Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and R. A. Butler, chancellor of the exchequer. Details might be worked out in the coming Eisenhower-Churchill talks.

Churchill's wife, their daughter Mary and her husband, Christopher Soames, a Conservative member of Parliament, will accompany him on the Queen Mary. They will stay in New York with the British leader's aged friend, Bernard Baruch.

Washington officials said reception arrangements there had not yet been worked out so it could not be said what ceremonies there would stay at the White House.

By Ike Pledge

Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem., Tenn.) told reporters he hoped Congress would be invited to address a joint session. "His trips always help to bring together and prove relations between our countries," Kefauver said.

The timing of British announcement today stressed the Caribbean part of the Churchill tour. It said:

"The prime minister is leaving by the Queen Mary on Dec. 31 to spend about a fortnight in Jamaica. On the way he will stay two or three days in New York with Mr. Bernard Baruch. He will meet Mr. Eisenhower during that visit for informal talks. He will also visit Washington to pay his respects to President Truman. In Jamaica, a house has been placed at his disposal by Sir Harold Mitchell. He will visit the governor, Sir Hugh Foot, at Kingston.

Churchill is expected to sound Mr. Eisenhower's views on Korea in the light of the latter's firsthand visit there and stress Britain's continued opposition to any extension of the war in Asia.

On Western defences, the prime minister likely will try to explain the recent British support of a reduction in the military buildings of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Britain's disappointment at being excluded from the Australia-New Zealand-U. S. (Anzus) defence pact for the Pacific may again be aired.

70-Man Medical Team Trained To Make Jump

OTTAWA (CP)—The Army said Friday it now has a 70-man medical team trained to land by parachute and set up a complete operating room within five minutes.

It is the medical component of the tactical striking force, the brigade-sized paratroop and airborne formation designed for the defence of Canada. Its name is the last Canadian airborne medical section.

The Army said "these Florence-Nightingales-in-khaki" could land in support of assault troops, pools of cut-off troops, or elsewhere. Its men are trained to fight as infantrymen as well as to drop by parachute and carry out their medical functions.

Within five minutes of landing, they could set up two nylon tents as a holding ward and an operating room. They take with them medical supplies, portable stoves, blankets and other equipment.

Commanding officer of the unit is a 35-year-old native of England, Maj. James Gilbert, wise to the business of jumping from an aircraft from Second World War days.

Whooping Crane Moves Backward Toward Extinction

NEW YORK (AP)—The whooping crane has taken a step backwards towards extinction.

An aerial census of the last living members of this tribe, American Indian tallest birds, at their winter home in the Aransas national wildlife refuge on the coast of Texas totalled just 22 of them—one less than last year. To this total add two for the pair of captive birds at the Audubon Park zoo in New Orleans. There is the possibility also that a few individuals may be overlooked.

Reporting the census, by the U.S. fish and wildlife service, president John H. Baker of the National Audubon Society said:

"Each year it becomes increasingly apparent that winter mortality is a factor in reducing the numbers of the whooping crane and intensifies the problem of conservation."

Not least two of the great birds were slain this year by hunters on the migration route from northern Canada to Texas, picked up in Saskatchewan, died en route or escape to Texas. The other was killed in Kansas.

Old Adage 'As Thieves Fall Out' Holds True, Solving Brink's Case

BOSTON (AP) — Three Boston newspapers said today they learned a telling out among the Brink's bandits made Joseph J. (Specs) O'Keefe the "goat" and enabled federal investigators to gather enough evidence to charge him as a participant in the $1,219,000 robbery Jan. 17, 1950.

The Post, Herald and Record said the split among the gang was indicated by federal officials Thursday night as the contents of a safe deposit box rented by O'Keefe came public.

The statement was reported to have been made shortly after the arrest of O'Keefe and Stanley Gusciora on conspiracy charges in Pennsylvania.

O'Keefe intimated in the letter that the federal bureau of investigation knew his every move and that he was hired into taking the trip through Pennsylvania which resulted in his arrest.

Another Boston newspaper, the Globe, said the split came in investigating the robbery may call Alfred Gagnon, 41-year-old convict of Charlestown, R. I. state prison, who has claimed to be one of the planners of the holdup.

The grand jury is in recess until Monday.

Last May Gagnon told Attorney-General William E. Powers of Rhode Island and Attorney-General Francis E. Felly of Massachusetts that he and Carlton (Gus) O'Brien planned the B rink's crime.

Less than 72 hours later — early on the morning of May 7 — O'Brien was ambushed and slain in front of his home. Who killed him has not been apprehended.

Gagnon's story generally was discounted by police.

Geo. W. Arnott, Frankford, Presents Meteorite to Museum

Close-up of the 125-lb. meteorite which three quarters of a century ago fell on the George W. Arnott farm in Murray township west of the village of Frankford. The meteorite drove into a hillside clearing only a few rods from the Arnott barn while Mr. and Mrs. Arnott were doing the evening chores. It was dug up the following day and has since been kept by the Arnott family.

Wallace Havelock Robb, owner of the Abbey Dawn Museum east of Kingston, inspects the meteorite which will go on display next year. George W. Arnott of Frankford, son of the man whose farm the astral object fell on, presented the meteorite to Mr. Robb as a museum piece.

Astral Object Fell in Murray Township 67 Years Ago; Now at 'Abbey Dawn'

A big chunk of metal from outer space which 67 years ago flashed to earth in the Frankford district as a flaming meteor, is to become a showpiece at the Abbey Dawn Museum east of Kingston.

Few of even the oldest residents of the Frankford district remember the August evening back in 1885 when the 125-pound chunk of white hot metal zipped out of the eastern sky to drive into a hillside on the farm of George W. Arnott. And fewer still of the younger generation in the district know that a meteorite did fall in their area.

But the meteorite did fall and it was, dug up the next day by Mr. Arnott. Since then and until it was presented to Wallace Havelock Robb as a museum showpiece, it remained in the Arnott family.

Landed Near Buildings

The meteorite struck in a small clearing only 30 rods from the Arnott farm buildings, while Mr. and Mrs. Arnott were in the barn doing chores. After the gaining in the family for nearly three quarters of a century the pit-marked object was presented recently by Mr. Robb by George W. Arnott, a son of the man on whose farm it fell.

Although but four years old at the time Mr. Arnott still recalls the sudden roaring sound like a clap of thunder as the fiery astral object flashed through the evening air to drive into the hillside near his father's barn.

"Father and mother were at the barn milking and I was left alone in the house," he recalls. "There was a thunder storm approaching and the big stone fell just before the storm arrived."

He was too young at the time to remember whether anyone actually saw the big white, hot meteorite as it streaked through the sky but recalls his father digging it out of the ground the following day.

Neither did he remember if the object was still warm when dug up but he does remember the meteorite was something more than a seven-day wonder for people of this district.

"People came for miles to see it," he said. "I remember two men from Cobourg who drove all the way to our farm and examined it by the hour."

Displayed at Fairs

Mr. Arnott said his father used to have the meteorite on display at district fall fairs where it attracted much attention. But young people don't pay much attention to that sort of thing today," he said.

In any event the chunk of astral metal laid around the Arnott farm dooryard for quite a few of the younger generation realizing what they happened to pass that they were observing something from outer space.

The intervening years have obliterated all trace of the spot where the Arnott farm where the object fell. The farm was sold by the family 30 years ago, and the original buildings have long since been torn down.

But the Arnott meteorite is in well worthy of preservation as a museum piece. Weighing 125 pounds it is relatively large for objects of its sort reaching the earth's surface. By far the biggest percentage of meteorites weigh but a few pounds, the biggest ever to fall in the United Kingdom tipping the scales at only 56 pounds.

In all the world only two or three thousand falls of meteorites have been recorded. While the number seen to fall each year and actually strike the earth is said not to average over ten.

There are isolated reports of tremendously large meteorites having struck the earth. One of these was in Siberia near the turn of the last century where a swath miles wide through the forest was cut by a flaming object. Again in Arizona there is what is claimed to be a meteorite crater nearly half a mile wide.

But the biggest meteorite actually on display is that brought back from Greenland by Admiral Peary. This big lump of metal weighs 36 tons.

Dark Color

The one which fell near Frankford 67 years ago is thought to be a composition of iron, nickel and other elements in varying quantities. It is gunmetal in color and has the fused crust characteristic of such objects. It is heavily pit marked and shot through with maroon colored substance thought to be a form of iron. But 67 years have not put any rust on it.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica describes a meteorite as being "a mass of matter from outer space which has fallen on the earth's surface." These masses are usually made up of stony matter with varying amounts of metallic iron containing nickel. More rarely they are of nickelliferous iron alone and much more rarely of stony matter with little or no metal.

The Arnott meteorite appears to fall in the first named category.

According to authorities on the subject a meteorite before coming into contact with the earth may have been travelling through space with planetary velocities of many miles per second. Usually they travel in orbits of their own about the sun.

When the astral objects enter the earth's atmosphere at such a tremendous speed friction caused by air causes them to heat and become incandescent. It is then they are seen as scintillating balls of fire leaving behind them a trail of luminous matter like a gigantic shooting star.

Only a very small percentage of such objects ever actually reach earth as most are burned out by the atmosphere long before they reach the ground. Some explode and fall to earth in tiny particles or as dust.

Only Surface Gets Hot

But in any event their flight through the atmosphere is so brief that usually only their surface becomes heated to incandescence and so take only a comparatively short time to cool.

Mr. Arnott is well known in the Frankford district, having lived in the village for the past 27 years. He has been an auctioneer for 35 years and still conducts an occasional sale.

He has taken an active interest in municipal politics and was reeve of Murray township when 20 years of age. Later in the 1930's he was reeve of Frankford village for four years. Seven generations of Arnotts all have had the same name. The first was George W. Arnott on whose farm the meteorite fell nearly eight decades ago. The former reeve of Frankford was christened after his father, while his son, also George W. Arnott, lives in Toronto.

Wallace Havelock Robb is quite well known in the Belleville area. He lived here as a boy when his father was division superintendent of the C.N.R. and married a Belleville girl, a sister of the late Sentinel Review editor.

Mr. Robb has gained considerable renown as a poet and lecturer and has taken a keen interest in Indian lore. He has written several books on the history and tribal customs of the Mohawks and his museum at Kingston contains many Indian and early Canadian relics. His most recent book "Thunderbird," goes into the history of the Mohawk Indian tribe in the Bay of Quinte district.

George W. Arnott, 71, of Frankford, former farmer and auctioneer, who presented the meteorite to the Abbey Dawn Museum. The big chunk of stone, iron and nickel had landed on the Arnott home for years. There he had no more use for the meteorite he presented it to Mr. Robb.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

SPECIAL PROPERTY

Travelling across Canada from the Rockies to Newfoundland we meet much the same birds all the way, although many species are confined to the Prairies and others to the Atlantic border, because in these regions only can they find essentials for existence. However, a few species live in very restricted areas, and these, if ever, appearing elsewhere.

Alberta proudly possesses trumpeter swans. These grand birds, at one time found over a large section of the country, have gradually dwindled in numbers.

Yellowstone Park, a sanctuary in the United States, supports about 400 the year around. Otherwise only a few hundred on our Pacific coast and a mere handful, fairly recently discovered summering in Saskatchewan. Where he had no more use for the meteorite he presented it to Mr. Robb. Cypress Hills, are known to be left.

Picturesque whooping cranes, once nesting across a wide stretch, are counted by individuals. Not more than 30 migrants remain, probably most of these breeding in Mackenzie, at the west end of Great Slave Lake, and in the fall passing through Saskatchewan to a sanctuary in Texas.

On account of the southern tip of Ontario reaching far into the United States, that province is fortunate in having many summer residents unknown to the others. One species actually remains there permanently; the gorgeous cardinal. Another, the Baltimore oriole, not northward, only a few have been found beyond the borders of Ontario, in Manitoba and Quebec.

Very strange indeed is the fact that Ipswich Sparrows never nest anywhere but on Sable Island, Nova Scotia. Great interest in this is shown by ornithologists throughout North America. The island being a mere speck, it is thought that eventually it will be washed away. What then will become of these little birds? Even in winter they are "choosy," migrating along a narrow flyway and settling for some months on the very edge of the continent, stretching as far south as Georgia.

These actions cannot, however, be called unique, for Ross' Geese is on!: known to breed in one tiny area: on the Canadian mainland in the far north, opposite King William Island, in migration it passes through Alberta.

FARMER'S FALL FATAL

RENFREW (CP)—George Reid, 67-year-old farmer, died in hospital Friday from injuries suffered a few hours earlier when he slipped on the icy ground on his farm yard at Admaston, eight miles west of here. He suffered a fractured skull in the fall.

'AXY BIRDS

CARROT RIVER, Sask. (CP)— Mild weather has the birds delaying their annual winter migration to the south. Mr. and Mrs. J. Schiller of Carrot River saw a robin in their yard and at Indian Head, Sask. Gary Cahinnes spotted a woodpecker in his garden.

EASY'S WARNING

CARDSTON, Alta. (CP) — The sound of her baby coughing woke Mrs. Lloyd Saunders, who found her house was on fire. She escaped unhurt with the baby and neighbors helped quell the blaze.

TB PROGRAM

CALGARY (CP)—Early in 1953 the Alberta Tuberculosis Association expects to hit the 1,000,000 mark in its free chest X-ray program. By mid-December 940,173 free heat X-rays had been given in Alberta.

BACK WITH INTEREST

VANCOUVER (CP)—The thief who stole washing from a woman's clothesline returned it with interest. The woman reported that her wash found its way back on the clothesline. An additional 35 pairs of panties also were hanging there.

THE VOICE OF EXPERIENCE

It seems to us that some of the younger men surrounding Premier Leslie M. Frost in Queen's Park should permit him to make up his own mind about the continued usefulness of veteran Agriculture Minister Thomas L. Kennedy in the cabinet of which he is dean, and to which he unquestionably brings a good deal of mature judgment in deliberations on government policy.

A few days ago a Toronto report stated that Colonel Kennedy was about to retire. It was quickly denied by both the minister and Mr. Frost. That the "old man" of the government is likely to bow out at any time is conceded in Queen's Park circles but it is no secret in those circles, either, that some of the young fry in the party have encouraged the idea to the point of being presumptuous.

Col. Kennedy has more than once intimated that he was about ready for retirement. He has had a long record of service since he was first elected to the legislature for Peel in 1919. He was the one exception of the 1934 election when the Hepburn administration went into power, the soldier-farmer has held the unqualified confidence of electors in his home constituency. He first served as Minister of Agriculture in the Ferguson and Henry administrations. He again assumed that portfolio when Conservatives returned to power under Premier George Drew.

When Colonel Drew resigned to become federal leader of the Progressive Conservatives he turned the reins of the administration over to his veteran colleague. Colonel Kennedy continued as Prime Minister until Leslie M. Frost was chosen as party leader six months later.

It seems that there has been a strong feeling among some of the younger government supporters that as agriculture minister, Col. Kennedy's thinking is behind the times in some respects. It is said that some of the younger men in the cabinet are too pleased that his counsel, backed by years of experience both in matters of administration and practical politics often outweighs their own ideas and suggestions in cabinet councils.

Nevertheless, Premier Frost has resisted the idea that the old-time farmer's views are out-dated. If he hadn't, Col. Kennedy would have retired before now for he had not been unaware that his presence is resented by some. And some feel that he would have retired had not the premier felt that his more mature views remained a leavening influence on the cabinet.

We imagine that there are still a lot of old-time farmers among the electorate who would prefer that the affairs of agriculture in this province could be in much less capable hands than those of the veteran minister.

RABIES AND MILADY'S FASHIONS

Rabies, we know, is a disease which causes madness in dogs and other small animals and may be fatal to infected humans. Rabid, we know, is a state of mental excitement by intolerance which is usually associated with one's views on politics, religion, temperance, and might, perhaps, extend to the views of some on the subject of current trends in women's fashions. But it seems a bit far-fetched to us to believe that the epidemic of rabies which has broken out in the north-west regions of Canada is due in so small degree to the whims or caprices of today's best-dressed women.

Nevertheless, in Ottawa, Dr. J. G. Taggart, deputy minister of Agriculture, says it is.

Dr. Taggart says that rabies has been present among the wolves and foxes of the northern woods for years. Until recent years, however, the wolves and foxes were hunted down or died for their pelts as valuable offerings in the fur markets of the world. Now in North America, women's won't be seen in anything made of long-haired fur.

Mink, or one of its counterfeits, are in popular demand. As a result the trappers in the north woods are not hunting or trapping wolves or the foxes. This explains, too, says Dr. Taggart is the top of a cycle. These predators are in abundance and they are eating rabbits faster than the rabbits are breeding in the north. And that, we understand, is pretty fast.

As food grows short the rabid wolves and foxes are venturing south and have been causing alarm among farmers in both Saskatchewan and Alberta. They have bitten dogs. The dogs bite cattle or some other domestic animal and rabies is rampant in a farm or ranch. To date no case since 1950 has been reported.

In Europe women still wear the long-haired furs but exchange controls prevent them from being imported from Canada. And the task of federal and provincial veterinarians in the west has been to fight the disease by vaccinating dogs. And in the far north regions this is being done by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

WHERE YOUR MONEY GOES

At a time when Canadians have been made particularly conscious of high taxes and high costs of government it is interesting to note some recent Ottawa statistics.

On March 31, this year, the number of civil servants on the federal government payroll stood at the highest total in Canada's history. There were 131,646 employees. There were 7,066 more employees than on the same date a year earlier. And there were more than 16,000 more than the peyroll in March this year was about $16,000 higher than at the peak period of World War II.

From time to time there are very earnest pronouncements made in Parliament by the Government that in keeping with the new tax burdens for defence which have been necessary, strictest economies are being, or were to be, implemented, in curtailing ordinary costs of government. It would appear that either the promised efforts have not been made or, falling that, the weight of an ever-rising bureaucracy has made any effective economies in ordinary operation quite impossible.

In either case it is not a very heartening prospect for the Canadian taxpayer.

The communists in Korea have set out to destroy the Christian Church. It can be fundamentally a disconcerting to them that there are approximately ten times as many Christian congregations to South Korea as before the war began. Some of these are the result of the great flow of North Koreans refugees into the South. But many people for whom Christianity meant nothing in the days of security are now turning to the church and the gospel as their only hope in a world which is crumbling.

The universe seems at times to be crashing upon its foundations. There is no light shining across our pathway. Wicked men turn earth into a flaming hell. And yet in the end as they did it never was and never will be that bad for believing Christians. The gentle Teacher, scorned, ridiculed, abused, and finally murdered by his contemporaries dares to call himself the Light of the World. Try as men continually do to extinguish that light or to put it under a bushel —Leper-like as they seem in the midst of a dark and terrifying world situation—the gentle Teacher still continues to speak to the world continues to listen.

"A city set upon a hill cannot be hid." "We are the light of the world...Let your light so shine that men may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in Heaven."

CAPRICORN BIRTHDAY

Brother Percy, you were born
A December Capricorn.
That's the zodiac name I quote
For a fellow who's a goat.
And a goat you are, I'd say,
Born so close to Christmas Day.

Birthday gifts for you must be Gathered from the Christmas tree.
We cannot afford the price
Of Christmas specials for you
So—since mother taught us
To be thrifty

Here's your Christmas-birthday gift.

Well, dear brother Capricorn,
Here's the tie I've never worn,
Here's the usual fancy pair
Of Argyle socks I declare,
Plus a muffler for your throat.
All from Leo to the goat.

These Are Halcyon Days

(Montreal Gazette)

These be the Halcyon Days At I cat that was what the ancients called the seven days before and the seven days after the shortest day of the year December 21.

This phrase handed down as expressive of a period of serenity, gaiety and happiness, is derived from a fable concerning the halcyon bird or kingfisher building the period indicated, this bird was supposed to be hatching her eggs on floating islands in the midst of the waters. While this was going on, the sea was always calm and might be navigated in perfect security by the mariners.

It may be that there is a dearth of kingfishers this year. In any event neither the sea itself nor the figurative sea of life is behaving in a manner quite to deserve the appellation of Halcyon Days. The one is heavily buffeting ships and the other is afloat with human torments.

The Halcyon Days may be decreased by the earlier-and-earlier hailing of Santa Claus from far northward to longer-and-longer days, in which to see the seasonal festivities, the winter and its which to take part in Winter's enjoyments.

Of course the advent of the shortest day of the year does not mean that the back of Winter is broken and the end near at hand. It is quite true from that end it is a good thing that this is so, for the best of Winter is still to still to come. For while oldsters in the cities, and to some extent in the countryside as well, may miss the jingle of the sleigh bells, the schoolgirl figures and the kindred diversions, other forms of recreation, the families to their place and there is more leisure and comfort in their pursuit.

"There are those who plow for the first days of Winter," the poet argue that things and people of that time were much better than the first days of the validity of those arguments. Winter is the season as well, may also be would seem to be to relax and enjoy the unquestionable beauties and advantages. After all we have it from the Greeks that the Halcyon Days come in Winter.

To Redd the Room

(Windsor Star)

Our correspondent in Scotland, Mr. Duncan Gillespie, in an article on this page the other day described a custom now almost obsolete in this country but still in full vigor in rural districts in Scotland. He alluded to people having "redd up" their homes for the festive season.

"Redd" is a handy word. When applied to a room it means to put it somewhat to household chores. It is something more than cleaning or cleanup, dusting or arranging the furnishings. It takes in all of these, but "redding" is not right," to "set in order," or to tidy up generally.

When a good housewife "redds up" her house, she does a pretty large hunk of spring cleaning. Job. The home may have been dusty and untidy before the redding was done and orderly.

The natural Ontario It used to be applies to other buildings as well, to the woodshed, driveshed, barn or stable. It is done on the farm, there always was plenty of "redding" to be done in the menfolk busy. When they had finished a job, there was satisfaction in seeing what had been accomplished. "Everything would be in order, and in its place.

Letter to the Editor

Work of City Council Appreciated

Editor:
Ontario Intelligencer:

It seems fitting at this time of the year that some special words of appreciation should be said to our city fathers for having conducted the business affairs of our city in so able a manner during the past year. This despite the fact that we are not always in accordance with everything they do. It would be unfortunate indeed, however, if we all thought alike, however.

To Mayor Haig, who has brought dignity to his office and a much higher than average ability, and to the members of his council, a great big thank you for a job well done. We could almost hope that as a New Year's present we could be promised, if not a reduction in taxes, then at least no advance.

With best wishes for the festive season, which we trust the new may all share in the goodly things that the year of 1953 has to offer.

Unexpected Good Reading

(Saturday Evening Post)

Looking for a good book? One that will increase your knowledge tremendously and your vocabulary stupendously? Then we commend to your attention the Manhattan classified telephone directory. Having consulted that useful work on a routine matter recently, we were about to close the book, when our eyes caught the following bold headings: Apples, Fresh-Sliced. We had known for years that you could buy potatoes already peeled but that you can buy apples, freshsliced, delivered daily, was a revelation.

That started a browsing binge of an hour or more's duration, at the end of which we had acquired considerable, enlightenment and knowledge and sometimes startling information. On a single half page, for example, we learned where you can obtain smokestacks, wax, artificial snow and stuff. On another page we learned where you can purchase coffins. How if? Instead of buying coffins, you want to sell coffins, we can open in business for ourself. Only hitch is, our manpower has cultivated a tongue-in-cheek relation to real estate transactions.

If not interested in either accessing coffins or manufacturing of coffins, you might like to buy a hundred pounds of almonds. If so, don't make the mistake of looking under the heading: Almonds. The classified ads are after is: Nuts, Edible. This brings us to the subject of the art of wisdom as far as we are concerned, and we'll be modest about our considerable food. Well, you can, Steaks, chops, ham and bacon, fish, fowl, fruits, vegetables.

Another item for rent is a baby's crib. It had never occurred to us that the need for a crib sneaked up on the American family. We had supposed that babies have to go and rent one. To change the routine, household appliances, we turned to the logical heading: Spices, With mixed feelings, we read on.

First off, we were completely bewildered by the number of concern that will blend spices for you to your own private formula. The more first set off into a gourmet's dream featuring the spices of Asia. Then we went quickly and suddenly yanked back to reality by the realization that we failed among the spice purveyors: International Fertilizer & Chemical Corp. This added complexity outmeges!

Even this inadequate sampling should be enough to make the lending libraries and the telephone company that they have been overlooking a sure-fire favorite. Anyone doing a single book to curl up with after being shipwrecked on a desert island could, by the way, pick the classified telephone book.

Coronation Stamps

(Edmonton Journal)

Next January, according to Ottawa reports, will see the first issues of stamps bearing the effigy of Queen Elizabeth II. There will bear the uncrowned image of Queen Elizabeth, for the reason that the portrait.

While this news will give general satisfaction, many will wonder whether any plans have been made for the "redding" of the present stamp. Back in 1937 it will be remembered that a stamp was issued to commemorate the coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth (mother). When it went on sale in Edmonton, two days before the coronation, people were lined up at the post-office wicket by eight o'clock in the morning. Many who bought stamps then have preserved them as souvenirs.

The precedent should be followed this time. A special stamp of a striking design should be available over all Canada at least by coronation day.

Lawnmower Learner

(New York Herald Tribune)

A spokesman for Great Britain's Transport Executive yesterday admitted ruefully to Parliament that the Transport Authority had indulged in bits of bureaucratic fantasy beyond the dreams of the most amusing Socialists. The worst of it was that a Laborite exposed the bureaucratic fantasy exactly two months ago.

A man named Frank Wass, of Bournemouth, had bought a small power lawnmower. He telephoned the motor vehicle bureau for a driver's test. An examiner drove 20 miles to his home, questioned him on the highway code, then watched him cut two patches of the grass, each 18 feet by two feet. The examiner thought Wass was good enough to be classed as a learner and issued him a big, red "L" plate for the mower.

LAMPREADES, SPANIES, AND BABIES

Surely the first course we should find listed in the circulum of adult evening high schools would be "How to Raise Children" as we Americans come to accept without question the idea that just anyone is bound to be a good parent?

Courses in parenthood are finbeard of in most adult education centres. And I mean classes to which young, prospective, firsttime parents can go to prepare themselves for the great trust that is given them. Will say reader who knows of such a course in his own community please tell me about it!

You can go, learn how to make lampshades, how to converse in Spanish, how to take a bow-tie apart and get it back together. But you cannot learn how to prepare yourself for parenthood. It seems unbelievable that we leave this to chance, to instinct, to the passing down of folk-lore from one generation to the other, or to the mere term of magic, or secret, only to be revealed to the initiate.

We get nowhere by our young sters. "All right, now, smarty-pants, let's see you work it out. Be hard way. I had to, I'd like to see you do any better."

Then we almost take pleasure in seeing them falling over the same stumbling blocks we had. If this were not true, we'd be demanding that our boards of education provide instruction in this all-important field. Instead we are complaining that too much time is devoted to these "social studies" and "ballroom classes." Fools that we are, we want our children to follow in our footsteps!

For the youngsters need more than a smattering of formulas and prickly-heat. They need a long view of the baby's future. They need it before the baby arrives, and they need themselves fighting out each issue at the nursery door. "The baby is crying and I'm going to see why"—"You're not going to spoil that kid if I have anything to say about it."

They need to come to mutually agreeable terms, long before the occasion for difference arises.

Well, in lieu of the public education they should be getting from an enlightened board of education, they, or you, should be looking around for excellent literature in the field: Child Study Association of America, 132 East 74 Street, New York 21 New York and United States Government Printing Office, Washington 25 D.C.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

For one person who loves pigeons and feeds them around the garden or in the parks, there are probably fifty who find them a nuisance and pests in many ways, and such places where, for prosperity reasons, some of the birds are considered to be vermin. But it was as pests that the first pigeons came to America. According to the last census of the domestic pigeon in America is by Lescarbot, in 1606, mentions that the only poultry in Port Royal, Nova Scotia, were ten pigeons. A drawing in Champlain's first book on Canada shows a pigeon loft at Quebec, his first house, in 1608. The Jesuit Relations refers in 1648 and 1656 to a gift from the governor of New France of six squabs and six pigeons.

The colonil of the Virginia Company mentions, in 1631, the receipt of a supply of pigeons from England.

How many of the hipts we now see in all the cities of North America are descendants of these first gallant immigrants? There have been several importations of fancy breeds of pigeons but most of them have died since Champlain. But the chances are some of the ancient strain is still with us.

The Auk makes one dark suggestion. Perhaps there is a reasonable possibility that the disappearance of the wild passenger pigeon was due to a disease called canker, or trichomoniasis, fatal to the continent by the domestic European pigeon. It is a disease such as that, let loose amongst the wild pigeons which had no immunity to it, could have spread from several colonies that used to darken the sky over eastern Canadian skies.

BOOKS AS UNDYING FRIENDS

Building a library of books is like setting aside money in the bank for the proverbial "rainy day." Set them aside, one by one, and they become befriended and loved. That money in the bank, however, may, through inflation, shrink, but the books you accumulate never melt away. They increase in richness and give hope and comfort to you as long as you breath to life.

Richard de Bury, in his quaint, "Philobiblon," had this to say: "Books delight us when prosperity smiles; they also stay to comfort us when cloudy fortune frowns. They are wine and strength to human compacts, and without them grave hindrances will not be wanting."

Not only in themselves do books radiate their substance, but they sow seeds in the mind of each reader, the influences of which the world is beyond estimation. There is no institution in the world of any value as an asset as a well-stocked library. And this has often become worldwide in its influence. For example: "Pilgrim's Progress", "Les Miserables", "The Origin

Jimmy O'Brien, Fabled Family Man and CP Telegrapher For Many Years at Retirement Age

By W. E. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

QUEBEC (CP) — Silver-haired Jimmy O'Brien is one of those unique personalities of old Quebec, a shamrock in a garden of flower-de-lis.

A fabulous family man and a telegrapher in the long-gone days of the roving, happy-go-lucky second-class operators, Jimmy O'Brien is as Irish as his name. His wife is as French as this storied city itself.

Forty years ago they met, fell in love, married and began to raise a family here—we either could speak the other's language. Their 11 children grew up in a bilingual household and are the healthy hilarity of little bell-ringers who purred by great love and understanding.

The O'Brien kids scuffled through 12 pairs of shoes a year, living room carpets were worn bare in a matter of weeks, the bakes prodigiously. They grew with the loaves of bread three times a week. And Pop was making $55 a week.

Retires At 65

Jimmy O'Brien had graduated from messenger and commercial company telegrapher into the elite, postgraduate ranks of press-wire telegraphers. He was one of the first operators to enter the Canadian Press. When he retired at 65 a few weeks ago he quit a career that embraced morse telegraphy, news reporting and the modern-day Morkam operation.

He could whip out dots and dashes with the best; he could "put it over" from the fastest sender. He could match that rollicking old-time crew yarn for yarn—by line in French or English—with the Irish brogue he can't shake and wouldn't want "; a brogue as thick as soupe aux pois Canadienne. And, it is whispered, he could out-guzzle any cronies, let them come singly or in relays.

"Them were the days when people p'inted to us on the streets and said: 'That feller is an operator.' Nobody used any such fancy descriptive word as 'telegrapher.'"

Famous Old-Timers

Jimmy hobnobbed with such old-timers as Steamboat Archambeault who screamed and cursed if someone bedevilled him with "toot toot" on the wire; Larry Lynch, who observed his native Quebec for Toronto; Benny Lee, Jimmy Brown, Johnny Alexander, "Chap-O" Davenport and Old Man Hayden, always called just that, who was a press telegrapher for years in Montreal.

Jimmy was working beside Lachevrolière the time big old Steamboat messed up a literary car to port. The sender zipped through the coded designation "Mrs. Car Wabash." Steamboat put it down "Mrs. Carwash."

Jimmy O'Brien, baptized James Joseph, was born in 1887 in Quebec, birthplace of his parents who were children of Irish immigrants. The O'Brien house was on Champlain street, a string of ancient Irish, English and Scots homes in the middle of everything French-Canadian.

It was a rugged childhood for young Jimmy. The Irish kids fought with the others and among themselves. Jimmy's parish priest had to admonish them: "Now, when yo get out of mass let those Protestant kids be. If 10 o'clock is their church time, that's their business."

Telegraph At 14

Jimmy was only 14 when he became a telegraph messenger with the CPR. He learned telegraphy, became a relief operator in the city's branch offices and finally a "copy" operator of the staff at 825 a month. Overtime rate was 13 cents an hour.

Small increases came, but not fast enough for Jimmy. He switched to the Great North Western Telegraph Company and soon was making the almost unprecedented salary, o' $82.50 a month.

That was affluence itself for handsome, debonair young Jimmy with the sparkling blue eyes. Then he met Mary Ellen Brennan, a pretty dark-haired girl, three years younger.

The two stared moonstruck at each other and fell heels over head in love. The language barrier was only incidental. Maria struggled to write cards to Jimmy in the language she couldn't speak. The young swain sweated out replies in French.

They were married in 1912. Two years later Jimmy began working with the Canadian Press Association—forerunner of the Canadian Press of today. The O'Brien family was already started.

Jimmy worked hard in all came along, nine girls and three boys. One girl, a baby, died in infancy.

Lively Message

The ever-increasing O'Brien family was a lively community. Some of the youngsters spoke English first, others French, often depending on the mood of the day or two days or nights. But all quickly became bilingual.

When the family moved to Allenby Street, on Quebec's outskirts, the O'Brien children were to the neighborhood, "les enfants qui ont différents des autres."

They were different from the other kids, all right, and often they had to fight for their very name. "O'Brien" was something that brought hoots and jeers and small flying fists.

Seven of the 11 O'Briens are married now but the happy family life hasn't slowed. The boys are hunky and handsome, the girls graceful, poised and downright good-looking, with coal-black hair and dark, shining eyes. Four unmarried daughters are working and live with Mamma and Pop in a comfortable flat on Quebec's Lockwood.

In On Big Stories

Jimmy regales visitors and family with stories of incidents that became a part of his life. They include a stint as part of the news of Quebec and of the world.

He handled stories on the 1914 sinking of the Empress of Ireland in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. He had a scoop when the Quebec bridge collapsed in 1916. He helped movie the Prince of Wales' switch-hooking to an earlier trip when she was trying in 1937 to elude her divorced husband and sail with her child.

In 1934 Jimmy tied up a telephone circuit north of Quebec for hours and had an exclusive interview with a Cree Indian Convict, believed lost, who won a great interpreter race.

Kept Tab On Churchill

During the 1944 Churchill-Roosevelt conference in Quebec, Jimmy was the first newspaper man to learn that the British prime minister had sneaked off for a bit of fishing. Another time, when President Roosevelt met Lord Tweedsmuir, then governor-general, Jimmy had the job of organizing press facilities. He was assigned a gleaming limousine and a liveried chauffeur.

"There was quite a stir on my street when the car picked me up or drove me home."

Once he kept Prime Minister St. Laurent—then a Quebec lawyer—40 minutes on the telephone at supper time for an explanation of a difficult point of law.

The day the war ended Jimmy went aboard a government cutter to witness the seizure of an Italian ship. The weather was stormy and the harbor water rough. Jimmy had to leap from the cutter to a rope ladder dangling down the side of the Italian vessel.

"There I was, a-swinging like the pendulum on a grandfather's clock."

And there was the time Jimmy thought he had let his glasses during a shipboard interview with the Duke of Gloucester.

The prime minister of Canada got down on hands and knees and joined Jimmy in crawling about the cabin. Mr. King found the case, but no glasses. Hurrying back to the office, Jimmy thrust his hand in his coat pocket—and there they were.

'Boxing Day' Time When Dad Takes Family Out

By GLENNIE CURRIE

LONDON (Reuters) — There are a dozen names for Oct day after Christmas, but in Britain it's "Boxing Day," when John Bull traditionally takes his family to the theatre, the football stadium or the track.

A legal holiday, It's called "Boxing" day because it used to be the day Christmas "boxes" were given to tradesmen and distributed to the poor.

London's theatreland, deserted Christmas Day, came to life with a bang Friday. Thousands crammed into the district. The big attraction was pantomime — an English mixture of music, gags and shapely girls.

Elsewhere in the country, movie houses and community halls in many places have reverted to playhouses where, for a couple of weeks second-string pantomime companies dress up old fairy tales in jokes and songs.

This year, Londoners have eight of the 100-odd professional "panto" being played in Britain. They range from "Humpty Dumpty" to "Beauty and the Beast," and include the inevitable "Peter Pan."

London also has three "mammoth" circuses, two "spectacu-ous "Christmas shows," two pantomimes on ice and a rollicking musical comedy with a semi-drama, "Maria Marten," or "The Murder in the Old Red Barn."

Smallwood's Prediction Nfld. To be Great Mining Country Is Seen Nearing Reality

St. John's, Nfld. (CP) — Joe Smallwood predicted 15 years ago that Newfoundland would "blossom forth as a mining country whose importance will challenge the attention of the world."

Although not there yet, he is position to help fate, his prophecy, made in his authoritative "Book of Newfoundland," is certainly nearing reality.

The other day the energetic premier returned from London, declaring 'Newfoundland is on the threshold of a development project—"the biggest real estate deal on this continent in the present century."

Now, as head of his government, he can help his prophecies come true. He announced he has the latest in planning boxes at N. M Rothschild and Sons to help him.

Timber and Mines

Mr. Smallwood represented the province at round-the-clock talks With him were Labor Minister Charles H. Ballam and Dr. Alfred A. Valdmanis, director-general of economic development. He said field parties will begin exploration of Newfoundland and Labrador as soon as the Upper Churchill deal is ratified.

Until then details of the agreement will not be made public. They are believed, however, to centre about timber and mining development. Unlike other development schemes the Newfoundland and Labrador Corporation—the government's economic arm—had nothing to do with the talks.

Mr. Smallwood, 52, on Dec. 24, visualizes Newfoundland becoming a great industrial centre, with mining—particularly the production of iron ore—replacing fishing as the province's chief industry.

Iron Reserves

Since confederation with Canada in 1949, this has happened:

Newfoundland's biggest bonanza —Labrador iron—has been brought closer to development. The multi-million-dollar Labrador City iron, ore development program—already under way—is expected some day to move 10,000,000 tons of ore annually out of the Ungava and central Labrador regions to steel plants in Canada and the United States.

A $3,000,000 cement plant and a gypsum plant have been erected on the West coast, a birch processing plant near St. John's, and a large tannery in Carbonear on the Avalon Peninsula. A $5,000,000 machine and tool plant is under construction near St. John's.

Five British companies began probing for minerals this year and four have started work. At least two other companies are interested in Labrador's fabulous timber potentialities.

John Fox, youthful Boston financier, has had drilling crews searching for oil on the Island's West coast for two years. He says he is hopeful.

Height of Power

Power for future industries, says Premier Smallwood, is no problem. The Hamilton river, which swirls into Goose Bay in Labrador, has a potential of 10,000,000 horsepower. Coal lies underground in untold tons.

The Newfoundland government, which before confederation derived more than half its revenues from customs tariffs, now looks forward to prosperity without them. It exports large quantities of newsprint and iron ore. The Bowaters pulp and paper mill at Corner Brook is the world's biggest. Another large mill, owned by the Anglo - Newfoundland Development Company, is at Grand Falls.

Fish, once called at Bell Island, is exported to Sydney, where it is smelted by the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation.

Christmas Babies

TORONTO - (CP)—Five-year-old Lynda Bishop now has a sister to share her Christmas Day birthday. Lynda was born to Mr. and Mrs. Hedley Bishop Dec. 25, 1947, in Montreal. Her sister, Susan, arrived in the provincial maternity hospital Thursday at the Toronto General Hospital.

"We were just opening our Christmas presents this morning when I had to head for the hospital," Mrs. Bishop said.

HAMILTON (CP)—The stork visited Mr. and Mrs. William Pauls Thursday for the second Christmas Day in a row.

Susan Jane arrived Thursday, exactly one year behind her brother, Charles.

WAITER CHARGED

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—A Windsor waiter was charged with manslaughter Tuesday in the death of a man whom he forcibly ejected from a downtown beverage room. Harry Arthur O'Neill, 36, faced the charge after David Paquette, 40, of Windsor, died Sunday of a brain haemorrhage. Police said he was injured Saturday but returned home unaided.

BUY HUGE DREDGE

QUEBEC (CP)—Premier Duplessis announced Tuesday the Quebec hydro-electric commission has purchased the world's most powerful dredge to cut deep to rock ahead of electric power development at Beauharnois on the St. Lawrence river. Mr. Duplessis said the dredge cost the commission $3,033,786.

HANDBALL: OVERHAND STROKES AND THE SERVE

Bent-Arm Overhand Stroke: Ball meets fist at a right angle, cock wrist backward. Face hand well in working position. Ball is hit at slightly above shoulder level, with left foot stepped forward. Control and speed comes from straightening arm and snapping wrist.

Full-Arm Overhand Stroke: Arm is fully extended here and ball is hit at the highest point over the head and slightly back of the player. Body bends back at the waist and arches forward from the right leg. Left leg steps forward in direction of shot.

The Server: Face side well. Hit weight evenly on both legs, body leaning well forward. Ball is held in left hand and dropped from about knee height. Keep head turned slightly to rear — this allows server to observe opponent's actions.

Yes, it's "know-how" that counts in handball as in every sport — "know-how" that sets one performer above another. Learn the correct form — the "know-how" — then practise until you have mastered it and you'll get more fun and enjoyment out of your sports and games.

Baptismal Rite

Little Ann Elizabeth McGee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack McGee, of Toronto, was baptized on Wednesday, at the United Church parsonage by the Rev. J. F. Lane.

McFarlane Woodenware Holds Christmas Party

On Friday Night in the Airforce Hall, McFarlane Woodenware employees and their families and friends enjoyed their annual Christmas party. Luncheon was served at six, after which a much enjoyed program was presented by some of the talented members of the factory staff.

Ted Reynolds, (bass), sang a number of "Sea Chantles"; Danny Smith entertained with songs, sleight of hand tricks and ventriloquist act; Ken and Marjorie Slaght, songs with guitar; Grace Calvert and Johnny Lloyd, piano and banjo selections.

A number of Dutch children entertained with Dutch folk songs. Little Doreen Smith sang, "Rudolph"; Danny Boy and Margaret Smith gave a duet.

A sing-song, led by Ted Reynolds with piano and banjo accompaniment, was fully enjoyed by everyone.

Santa arrived and presented gifts and candy to all the children after which the floor was cleared and dancing completed the evening.

Many thanks are extended to Mr. Pierce for closing the factory down at 3 o'clock on Friday so that we helped in any way to make this Christmas party such a success.

Regiment Holds Boxing Day Tea

A delightful Boxing Day afternoon tea was held in the Officers' mess of the 9th Anti Tank Regiment, Bridge Street Armouries, with apparently 229 in attendance.

Those in the receiving line included Lt.-Col. G. W. McGregor, M.C., and Mrs. McGregor, and Major J. Clarke, mess president. Regimental Sergeant Major A. Lacey, acted as announcer.

The mess was beautifully decorated throughout with bouquets of chrysanthemums in shades of rust and yellow, while the tastefully appointed lace covered tea table was centred with the same, and enhanced with silver service.

Those who presided were Mrs. H. T. Wilson, Mrs. J. Tatham, those who served were the officers of the 9th Anti-Tank Regiment.

Mr. Dean Whalen furnished the organ and piano music.

The lecture room, where the dancing was enjoyed, was comfortably arranged with easy chairs in groups of six, while the floral decorations, which occupied conspicuous spots about the room, as well as those of the other rooms, were the result of Major W. Burgoyne's artistic ability.

There were also out-of-town guests present; was Major N. Featherston, who represented military headquarters, Kingston.

Bakelite Company Employees Enjoy Turkey Supper

On Saturday evening the employees of the Bakelite Company held their Christmas party at the Moose Hall with the management and 100 employees in attendance. Managers attending were J. Buchan, Percy Wilson, Phil Jeffery and Harry Sleeth.

When all were seated at the beautifully decorated tables the Women of the Moose served a bountiful turkey supper. Those serving were Mary Peoples, Barbara Bird, Marg. Vandusen, Georgette Goddard, Michaeline Calbury and Peggy Mintz.

A toast was made to the Queen, led by chairman, Mr. Peterson, and the invocation by George Beaudry. During dinner, music was played by William Chandler at the piano.

Mr. Frank Allen complimented and expressed thanks on behalf of the ladies to Mrs. Peterson for the Women of the Moose for the fine supper. Mr. Allen then led in a very merry Christmas and a happy New Year.

Sing-song

After dinner, a lovely sing-song was enjoyed and then following entertainment:

Mr. Buchan, Mr. Jeffery, Mr. Burno and Mr. Allen sang "When Irish Eyes are Smiling" with William Chandler at the piano. Mr. Art Duby sang "Down Yonder," "Whispering" and "Old Man River," closing with a fine rendition of "White Christmas."

Mr. Stan Tuck entertained on the banjo.

Home Towners Quartet, Mr. Bradford, Mr. Parks, J. Lowe and Mr. Twiddy also entertained. This is a fine quartet and will be heard often in the future.

Many thanks go to Ed Littleton, who arranged the Christmas party and supper assisted by J. Dalgleish, L. Taylor, E. Williams, Mr. Kenny, D. Clarke, B. Thompson and J. C. Snider.

Thanks were tendered to chairman, Mr. Peterson, who was not only a chairman but an entertaining one. Thanks were tendered Mr. G. Stewart, who acted as press secretary.

The convenor for banquet was Peggy Mintz who thanked all her workers whose harmonious assistance was so greatly appreciated.

Co-workers serving plates were: F. Carmel, G. Bilch, L. Downes, N. Scrymgeour, with L. Connel serving the dessert.

Miss Jack McGee, of Toronto attended the bride, and Mr. Jack McGee, the bridegroom.

Women's Institute

CHAPMAN W.I.

The regular meeting of Chapman W.I. was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Elliott in the form of a pot luck supper and social evening. Fifty adults and ten children sat down to well filled tables.

After supper, two films "Yoho Wonder Valley", and "Newfoundland, Atlantic Province", which were obtained through the Belleville and District Film Council, were shown by Mr. Milton McTaggart. These proved to be entertaining as well as educational. Community singing of "many favorite" old time carols was then enjoyed.

A penny table was held, the proceeds of which were to be sent to the Canadian Save the Children Fund. Gifts were exchanged among the members.

A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. and Mrs. Elliott for opening their home again on this occasion, and to Mr. and Mrs. McTaggart for showing the films.

The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. T. C. Graham on Tuesday, January 20.

'Women of The Bible' Topic WCTU Meeting

The Christmas meeting of the Women's Canadian Temperance Union opened with a service of song of the Christmas carols and reading of the Christmas story.

A few opening remarks by the president, Mrs. Farnsworth, were based on the verse, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given." The really sensational items in the newspapers are found under six columns, births, marriages, and deaths. Not the deaths, for those chapters have been written long ago, for the great choice has been made and taken shape, but the births.

These babies! The beginning of a life that may enrich the world. John Paul Richter says, "a new universe is created, every time a child is born". Each has a world of its own. This is the way God elevates and reverences and lights the world He has no other way of doing it and He needs no other way. One baby is sufficient for the task. What a baby cannot do, cannot be done. Some wrong wants righting, or a work wants doing or a wrong wants preaching, or a continent wants opening. God sends a baby into the world to do it.

That is why long, long ago, a baby was born in Bethlehem. A baby born to be the world's Redeemer.

A beautiful vocal trio, "Winter Wonderland", by Miss L. McDonald, Miss Farnsworth, and Mrs. C. McDonald accompanied by Mr. William Connor was greatly enjoyed by all.

Guest Speaker

The guest speaker was Capt. Brightwell, of the Salvation Army, who spoke on "The Women of the Bible". She made touching reference to his own mother, who though he openly sinned was loving and true to him. Her dealings with him which won him for Christ and subsequently into the work of the army. He closed with the story of the First Christmas Lamb.

Mrs. Fisher expressed the thanks of the meeting and gave to the Captain a contribution for "Christmas Cheer".

The clip sheet, "Is the Temperance cause advancing", took the form of a daily paper. Miss Myrtle Barnum and Mrs. Abrams. There was more in this than meets the eye so much said in the newspapers about the evil results of drinking. The "Star Weekly" of Sept. 6th, in an article, "What Makes an Alcoholic", gave a survey of Dr. Seliger, of Baltimore, director of the National Committee on Alcohol Hygiene, showing clearly the connection between alcohol and crime. A few years ago you could not have got such an article in a daily paper. The said, "although drinkers are not criminals, it has been found that, from a survey of cases placed where alcohol is sold and in prison, almost one quarter of the cases "alcoholism was closely related to the commission of the crime or was directly responsible for it."

The publicity shows how evil is the liquor traffic. It shows the public who may be deceived by the glamorous liquor advertisements, showing gracious living associated with beer, that taverns foster crime and are the meeting places of criminals. When the secular newspapers say it, the statement is believed.

That article in the "Star Weekly" would be read by hundreds of people who would never read a temperance address. The article commended the Alcoholic Anonymous and the Salvation Army as ready to help. He urged training of more workers to deal with individual alcoholics and more and better equipped clinics and hospital facilities, more recreational centres and organized social activities for the community.

One of the things which wears a rug out they tell us, is the constant grinding of sand particles in the pile by the tramping of feet. That is why a rug which is kept clean will outlast the one which is neglected. . . . Many women feel that having a rug frequently dry cleaned spoils it. Rug experts do not agree, but emphasize the cleaner the rug, the longer the wear.

Children's Dentistry

We took our two-year-old daughter to the dentist for a general check-up last week-end and were surprised to find out about a new method of preventing tooth decay.

The child's teeth were in excellent shape, but the doctor suggested he treat the enamel with a solution of fluorine. This treatment, according to the Dental Association, has cut tooth decay in children as much as 40 per cent.

Procedure is simple. The child's teeth are brushed very carefully with the solution which is said to "toughen" the enamel. In three days the treatment is repeated and again in three more days. Three years from now, the fluorine coating is done again. It has been possible to prevent all tooth decay in some children this way.

Sweet candy, desserts and soft drinks are some of the things which lead to tooth decay, according to the dentists. That is why it is important for us all to brush our teeth immediately after eating meals or snacks.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

How about those boys who don't want to keep their girls waiting?

Maybe I'm just an old cynic, but I'm inclined to lift an eyebrow when I hear about a man who offers a girl flowers on the ground that he can't marry her for awhile and so believes it's his duty to give her up.

Not that I haven't heard of some cases where the offer was absolutely genuine. But I believe these authentic cases are extremely few and far between.

For a man who is deeply and sincerely in love is not often that generous. Usually, he is so afraid somebody else will get his girl that he wants to tie her up tightly, with all the promises possible, and with a ring that warns: "No trespassing on this property!" Then he goes down to work hard and fast, to hasten the day when he can add a wedding band to the solitaire diamond.

Why is it, I wonder, that so many girls seem perfectly content to take such apparently noble-minded offers at values as their face value? Perhaps it's better that they do so, and no doubt it's because their love for a particular young man goes hand-in-hand with a complete confidence in what he says. So, because the girl is unusually believes every word that comes out of her young man's mouth, never seems to think to examine carefully his proposition about releasing her.

With some chaps of this kind, the suggestion that the girl would be better off if he did not keep her tied to him goes beyond mere offer and becomes a definite decision at which he has arrived and from which he refuses to be shaken. In such cases, it seems as though a girl should have the sense to see behind what he says, and sense what he really means. Then, almost invariably what these offers and stated decisions do mean is not that the young man is so unselfish that he doesn't want to hold a girl to what he feels is a poor bargain, but that he has soured on the bargain himself.

One young woman who has not been blind for the speed of heartbroken renunciation which her fiance made to her, but who has not yet reached the point of ringing sentences for the echo of what's behind them, writes me this letter:

Engaged For Three Months

"I am 21 years old and am engaged to a fellow a year older. We had gone steady for several months before he went into the army, and had the understanding that when he was discharged from service we'd become engaged. We carried out our plan and have now been engaged for three months.

"My fiance had intended getting a job immediately, so that we could soon be married, but instead he decided to go to college, choosing one some distance from where we live. Of course I did not object to this change of plan, for I realized how much it would mean to him later on to have this additional education. However, because he left for college, he promised that at the end of the first year we would get married, if I was willing to go to work and help out until he had graduated. As we have both had friends who married while still in college, it didn't seem a very great step to take, so I gladly agreed.

"About a month ago, I received a letter from this boy in which he said that, while he loved me very much indeed, he thought we should break off. He said he would continue to be warm friends, but that I should go out with other fellows. However, after he was through with school, he was lucky enough to find me still single, and we still felt the same about each other, we would get married. He said it broke his heart to take this second step, but he never saw anyone else, but he feels it is not right to ask me to wait for him. He also thinks that this has me so hurt and confused that I don't know what I'm doing. It has been as much in love with him as ever, and I would do anything to be with him, but if he loves me, as he insists he does, why would he want me to go out with other fellows? I haven't answered his letter yet, because I don't know how to take it or what to say in reply. Can you help me?

"Since this young woman is obviously thinking things over very carefully before giving her fiance an answer, it seems to me as though she were really anxious to get at the truth. So I'm going to tell her frankly, just how I see the situation.

Sorry He Committed Himself

"My feeling is that this young man is probably sorry that he committed himself so definitely while he was still so young, and that he is tired of having his solemn promise hanging over his engagement. He would like to be in a position to do as he pleases, and to go out with whomever he pleases. Therefore, he wants to give the girl his own release, in the simplest way to get it, without giving her his own reasons why, and to offer the girl her freedom first. He thinks he is doing the right thing by "letting her down easy" for the double purpose of trying to

National Hockey League Calls Up Reserves For Week-End Play

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

BOXING DAY "POP" CONCERT

'Twas the day after Christmas — and all through the house,
The noise was terrific — and even the mouse
That daily gives battle to Old Ginger the cat
Thumbed his nose at the Tabby, and boy, that was that.
For the lazy old Persian, which lives, as it seems,
In feline Utopia (just eats, sleeps and dreams)
Tore in mad desperation through kitchen and hall
In reprisal from what seemed a bottle-oven brawl
A riot, a battle, an "Old Ireland" spree,
Six shiploads of sailors fresh home from the sea.
There were pirates, eye-patched, and with cutlasses drawn,
Lafitten, Henry Morgans, the Kidd's and the spawn
Of Cartis's proud buccaneers, pistols aweave
Shouting "stand and deliver, or the sea is your grave";
Then clutching their loot with piratical glee
They tore from the bedroom in unholy spree
And Old Mom Alarm Clock at rest on a sill
Wished slowly and murmured, "Go sleep, if you will."
With nerves closed on eye then there came a new clatter,
The hoof-beats of horses, the "forty-foot's" chatter,
As we crouched 'neath the blankets, we heard a voice say:
"There is the varmint, he came thisaway."
A "do-got" exploded somewhere with a "bang",
We opened both eyes and bobbed since the "gang",
There was "Jerry" and "Roger" and Two-Gun Carew,
Hickok and Cisco and Hopalong, too!
King of the Mounted, Lone Ranger and Tonto,
We sat up in bed and we "hoisted 'em pronto."
Grim "do-shoots" muzzles stared straight in our eye
As they lashed back our foes, then our hands they did tie,
Then with wild thrilling laughter, they climbed on their "mounts"
And with cap fusilade from the room did they bounce,
From the sill the alarm clock looked down with a grin,
Seemed to say, "You'll appreciate now what I'VE been."
We sank 'neath the covers both weary and worn,
And dropped off to slumber this fine Boxing morn,
Slumber I don't laugh, for in less than a minute
A bugle rang out, there was dynamite in it.
Then a trombone, a sax, plus six horns and a rattle
And ye gods, a tin drum with a bone-shaking prattle
Surged into the room with an ear-splitting roar
And we sat-hungry house promptly spilled on the floor.
Rolled under the bed, came to rest near the wall,
And the "band" promptly swung into "Dead March In Saul".
Quite frankly we felt for a gun, club or bole
As the John Phillip Sousa each offered a solo,
And when it was ended, they went through the floor,
We pushed the bed-covers all up from the floor
Climbed wearily, dolefully into some duds,
Went down to the cellar and slept with the spuds.

* * * *

We found it's the least of the Boxing Day fays
When Junior brings in "the gang" with their toys.

THAT'S THAT!

Any God-fearing citizen who tells the plain truth and enjoys a fair amount of this world's goods, cannot today look an honest turkey gobbler in the face. Over on the "in-laws" farm yesterday one brosse so-and-so deliberately high-hatted this department. We don't blame him for we got rid of one of his tribe over the Christmas holiday and are well on the way to demolishing another, thanks to Dame Fortune and the Belleville Shrine Club. Yep, we knocked off a pair of thirteen-pounders in a draw and since then Peter shows strange indications of developing waitles. Mebbe it's his new teeth announcing arrival.

Anahoo, it was a grand holiday and outside of Jack Devine insisting that we take a voice in the weekly "Hockey Talk Shop" sponsored by our Shrine pal Charley Cayley (that's as far as we can go without being tabbed for the advertising, Chuck) there wasn't a thing in the sports world to break the Yuletide routine. Gad, men, what a relief to chuck that alarm clock a puck in the jaw two mornings in a row.

Actually the Christmas holiday season is the only one in the year's calendar that gives sports department something of a respite from the grind. True, some of the Joes have to work, but in the smaller centres, sport takes a holiday and the "slaves" likewise.

The only thing of any importance looming on the hockey horizon hereabouts is that senior "B" clash between the Glen Rays and Oshawa Truckers here Monday evening. That should be a drilly since Oshawa is at the moment leading the loop and the Glens, primed with alka-seltzer and Glen Roy butter are over the holiday hump, and rarin' to go. This game should be a thriller since the Glens thumped the Oshawans but strongly by a 7-4 score their last meeting and the Motor City stalwarts are in no wise ready for a repeat. Besides a win for the Glens will hoist them into a third place tie with the Kingston Goodyears.

It should be one of the tidy tilts of the season and a good turnout of fans will do wonders for the morale of the Glens. How about it, fellas?

Even Bruins Yelp for Help; Leafs Call More Assistance So Do Proud Detroit Wings

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The National Hockey League has called up the reserves this weekend.

With dressing rooms where the air is heavy with liniment and the benches are chittered with wounded veterans, Detroit Red Wings, Toronto Maple Leafs and Boston Bruins have call'd for reinforcements. Detroit and Toronto will have two rookies in their line-ups and Boston one.

Coach Bill Cook of New York Rangers, who won their first road game of the season Thursday night by downing Boston 3-5, said: "The rest of the league is coming back to us. They're feeling the injuries we felt during the early part of the season."

Extensive injuries forced the Rangers to lift centre Andy Bathgate, forward Dean Prentice and defenceman Harry Howell from Guelph Biltmores of the Ontario Hockey Association junior A series early in the season.

For their games in Toronto tonight and in Detroit Sunday Boston Bruins have called up right-winger Dunc Fisher from Hershey Bears of the American Hockey League. Fisher, a 20-goal man for Hershey this year, will play with Dave Creighton and Jack McIntyre while Jerry Toppazzini will drop back on defence to replace Hal Laycoe.

Toronto Maple Leafs brought Phil Maloney and Ed* Westerecki up for their Christmas Eve game with Montreal Canadiens. Both performed well in the 3-0 Leaf victory.

Maloney, up from Pittsburgh Hornets of the AHL, played an outstanding game at centre Wednesday night. Westerecki, who earned a reputation with Toronto Marlboros of the OHA Junior A loop, will again be at right wing on the Leafs Saturday night. The Toronto club is idle Sunday.

Detroit Red Wings, who travel to Montreal for a Saturday game and then entertain Boston Sunday, will have Marcel Bonin, a 21-year-old right winger, in their line-up. It is Bonin's first try at the big time, but he is leading scorer for St Louis Flyers of the AHL this season. Bonin will be replaced in St. Louis by Lou Jankowski, Detroit utility forward.

Terry Sawchuk, youthful Red Wing goal-tending wizard, is still out with a fractured ankle. He was replaced by Ralph (Red) Armas until last Thursday, but another sub, Glen Hall, will take over Saturday. Chicago Black Hawks replay the New York Sunday for the only other week-end game.

Point Out a Sports Event Result And You're What--'A Limb Bum'

BALTIMORE (AP)—The sports world has had a nice crop of limb bums in 1952.

Take, for example, Chuck Dressen, manager of Brooklyn Dodgers.

It was Oct. 4, Dressen's Dodgers had won the first game of the world series and dropped the second to the Yankees.

Quoth Dressen:

"All we've got to do now is take each odd game and we've in."

The Brooks won No. 3 and No. 5 all right, but came a cropper on No. 7 and the Yanks took the championship.

This makes Dressen a limb bum. He insists on getting himself out on a limb with some profundity and looks like a bum when it backfires.

Dressen has lots of company.

Jim Ellis, sports writer for the Baltimore Evening Sun, in self-appointed, unofficial boxcore keeper in the limb bum line. Here are some more entries from his new ledger:

Jan. 8—General Manager Hank Greenberg of Cleveland Indians: "Unless things change, the Yankees will be lucky to finish in the first division."

Feb. 1—Manager Eddie Sawyer of Philadelphia Phils: "I think we'll bounce back." (Phils sank so low early in the season Sawyer was bounced. They finished fourth under Steve O'Neill.)

Aug. 20—Joe Louis: "Walcott's too smart for Marciano. He'll beat him. Sept. 15—Heavyweight champion Joe Walcott: "Rocky can't fight. I ought to beat him." (Marciano knocked out Walcott in the 13th round and became the new champion.)

Oct. 30—Red Grange, after watching San Francisco 49'ers crush the Bears 40-16: "That's the greatest football team I've ever seen." (The 49'ers lost five of their next seven games.)

Football Player Sues Team-mate

CLEVELAND (AP) — A high school football player sued a former teammate for $50,000 Friday, claiming he broke his jaw in an argument over some missing sweat shirts.

Harold Kisner, 18, in his suit against Stanley Gotlieb, 20, said the injury wrecked his chance for an athletic scholarship.

Kisner said that they got into the argument last August, two months after Gotlieb was graduated, and that Gotlieb broke his jaw in a "malicious and wilful" attack. He said the sweatshirts were missing from the team's equipment.

Warriors Score 3 in 2 Minutes Against Barons

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Scoring four goals in the second period, three of them within two minutes, Syracuse Warriors walloped Cleveland's league-leading Barons 5-1 Friday night in an American Hockey League game.

Syracuse, fourth in the seven-team league, now is only six points behind first-place Cleveland.

Vic Lynn notched the first Cleveland goal at 9:27 of the second period. Then Dutch Delmonte of Cleveland was penalized for elbowing and Armand Lemieux and Sam Caramanna banged a pair for the Warriors,67 seconds apart. Bronco Horvath got two more before the period ended.

Eric Pogue counted the final goal in the last period.

Saskatoon Trims Stampeders 7-2

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Saskatoon Quakers trimmed Calgary Stampeders 7-2 Friday to protect their position at the top of the Western Hockey League.

Johnny Chad paced the Quakers with two goals, Jackie McLeod, Doug Bentley, Chuck McCullough, Herb Jeffrey and Cy Rouse tallied singles. Steve Wiltuik and Archie Scott fired the Calgary goals.

The Saskatoon attack ended Victoria's six-game winning streak by thumping the Cougars 6-1. Wayne Brown and Wingy Johnston each notched two goals for the Rockets. Bart Bradley and Kerr added the others. Jim Fairburn counted for Victoria.

Two-goal efforts by Gerry Foley and Roly Fillon paced Seattle Bombers to a 6-3 victory over Vancouver Canucks. George Hommelie and Doug Macaulay were the other Seattle scorers. Larry Popein, Ray Manson and Don Smith tallied for Vancouver.

Set Two World Speedboat Marks

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Two world speed boat records were set Friday as the Orange Bowl regatta got under way with time trials over a mile course on the inland waterway.

Mrs. Roby J. Scull, a Ventnor, N.J., housewife and mother of two children, boosted her own record for 4k-cubic-inch inboard runabouts by nearly two miles an hour.

She established a mark of 62.302 miles an hour. She set the old record of 60.708 miles an hour Aug. 3 at Cambridge, Md.

Tommy Hagood, Orlando, Fla., held the B stock outboard hydroplane mark for several minutes after his. F-36 was clocked at 53.804 miles an hour.

Then the honor was wrested from him by Wally Wakem, Palm Beach Fla., who sailed over the measured mile in both directions for an average speed of 55.945.

The former stock hydro record was 53.321.

The Kibitzer

The fundamental idea of any one-jump bid is to order partner to keep the bidding open to game. It matters not whether the jump is by the responder or the opener. It matters not what round.

If south started with one heart and the jump to two spades, north would be forcing to game. If south opened with one heart and north replied one spade, a jump to three clubs by south is a force.

If south started with a heart, north replied one spade, south bid one no-trump, and north jumped to three spades; it would be forcing to game. The jump in any round is forcing to game.

Take this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH	NORTH
♠ A K Q 4	♠ 10 8 5 3
♥ K 3	♥ A Q 10 7 6 2
♦ A K 7	♦ 9 8
♣ A J 4 3	♣ 6 5

South opened with one spade. The first response by north is two hearts. This promises at least three tricks. With eight south now sees 11 in the pack.

What a player sees 11 tricks he must know there is a game or some bid. Therefore, the second bid by south should be a jump in something. To also show his club suit; he should bid four clubs.

North has a rebiddable heart suit. To show it, he needs four in that suit. With adequate support for a rebiddable suit, south now assumes that hearts will be their trump.

Visualizing a slam in hearts by this time, south bids the ace and king asking convention of four no-trump. North replies with five diagonder, signal for showing one ace and no kings.

With a king now known to be in the hands of opponents, south is coniest to stop at a small slam in hearts. But north should know that their best combined trump suit is spades. He should go to six spades.

In expert play, it is always planned to play it in the trump suit that is most evenly divided in the pair. This permits ruffs on the length suit. Stop to consider this.

Biltmores Said To be On Skids; Win One in 13

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Guelph Biltmores are definitely on the skids.

Last year's Memorial Cup champions have only managed one win in their last 13 games. The dismal string stretches back to Nov. 28. The Biltz started the season fine shape but the parent New York Rangers were stricken with injuries and snapped up three of the Biltmore's veteran stars, Harry Howell, Dean Prentice and Andy Bathgate.

The Flatters maintained their winning pace for several games but the manpower shortage began to tell and in spite of the desperate scouting efforts of Coach Al Pike the Bilts are skidding.

Windsor Spitfires were victorious visitors to Guelph Friday night as they downed the home-towners 5-3 in a scheduled Ontario Hockey Association Junior A game. The Cinderella Spits climbed into seventh place with the win as they continue to work their way farther out of the cellar where they started the season.

Sunday School Lesson:

Jesus and The Wise Men

In all the history of the human race no individual has ever attracted the attention as has been given to Jesus of Nazareth.

Born in an obscure province of ancient Rome, of obscure parentage, without friends of court, armies to do His bidding, the "young prophet of Galilee" has had a greater influence upon the history of the race than any other individual—this, any hundred individuals—who have ever lived.

The greatest artists have their every word, act, and comment. The greatest artists have vied with one another to produce of Him a portrait that will be satisfactory to all mankind. The greatest musicians have exhausted their genius to produce music adequate to extol His name. And the greatest instrument of them all—the cathedral organ—was invented for the sole purpose of "making His praise glorious."

Subdued Jesus

Suppose we try subtracting Jesus from the world's life and literature?

What would we have left in the field of music? The great oratorios would all be gone, the greatest of all organ music, all Christian symbology, and many of the bedtime lullabies with which mothers sing their little ones into rest at night.

What would we have left in art? The greatest of the works of Thorswaldsen, Agogio, Leonardo, Rembrandt, Michael Grecho, Hunt, and an almost interminable list of other masters would go. Whole galleries would be completely denuded of their treasures.

What would we have left in literature? Whole sections would be left completely vacant in almost every library in the world. Even the pagan authorities would turn over books by the thousands dedicated to Jesus or His cause.

What would be left in drama? We do not ordinarily associate the theatre with the name of Nazareth, and yet Hollywood has drawn upon the Nazarene for countless of themes and scenes.

What would be left in history? Try to imagine what it would be like, trying to write the history of the last two thousand years and leaving Jesus of Nazareth out of the chapters.

Greatest of Them All

A long list of the world's great are readily called, with the question, "Which speech, of all those ever given, would you rather have heard?" Is it the sermon on the Mount by Jesus of Nazareth let the field be a vast multitude?

Napoleon is said to have sighed, "Hannibal, Caesar and I have conquered the earth, but Jesus of Nazareth has taken it captive."

The Uniform Sunday School Lessons for December 28: "Wise Men Seek Jesus," Matthew 2.

We do not owe our faith to the pygmies of the race—the little men whose names are only coupled with the trifles. Call the roll of the world's greatest in science, statescraft, philosophy and literature, and any generation and "believers" will be found at the tops of the lists in every category.

Invoke the name of Jesus of Nazareth in the most matured world, and men will listen reverently, even though thy may hate the Church and seek its overthrow.

Going Home Another Way

To the Gospel of Matthew we owe the beautiful and fulfilling story of the wise men who came from the east, bearing gifts to the new-born saviour of the world. The incident is mentioned nowhere else in all of literature, in such a connection.

And it is of the utmost significance that Matthew says of the wise men that "they went home another way," having seen the Christ child. Of course they would, for men who really see Him and ever be the same again, no matter how wise or how great they may be.

Two Missionaries Held Prisoners By Communists

Vancouver (CP) — Two Roman Catholic missionary nuns told Tuesday they were virtual prisoners of Chinese Communists for two years in a small "city."

Sisters Marie Angela and St. Matthew arrived here aboard the Norwegian ship Elizabeth A. Bakke on their way home to Pembroke, Ont.

Sister Marie Angela said the Communists forced them to keep to the attic, not permitting them to see or speak to a single friend for two years.

Sister Marie Angela was in charge of a school and hospital at Lishui, Chekiang, 300 miles inland from Shanghai.

In a calm voice, she described how she saw the missionary work she had spent 18 years building crumple around her inside a few hours.

The Communists closed the school and the hospital, though they kept a clinic operating there.

"The only people we spoke to during the two years were Communist officials from whom we tried for the whole period to get permission to come home," she said. "There was no entertainment of any kind and radio was not permitted."

Harry Meldrum Moore

Of late there had been no further word of the railway. Editor Halder was keeping a close watch on Bellevue and Toronto newspapers for any new development. Ben Whitmore was reporting anything he could take up on his tri-weekly trip to the county town, and it was Ben who said that the surveyors would not be going out until the end of the fly season in October.

In the Echo office, where Curly was wont to go for a few minutes' relaxation from his many duties, he and Jack Halder planned steps that must be taken to have the survey put all the way through to the Depot when the party was out.

"Our best plan," Curly said, would be to call a public meeting and appoint a committee to go to Bellevue to interview the railway company. We could back up our committee with petitions signed by everybody in these townships. We might explain, when we meet the company, that we do not represent a wealthy section of the county that we cannot give them a bonus, but we can promise to do everything possible to help them in the matter of securing right-of-way. We could offer them as an inducement, the flat where the bridge as a site for their station, their yards and their water supply, and we could tell them that the water they use now will cost them no more than the pumping."

"You're not forgetting much, are you, Curly?" Halder asked proudly.

"There may be other things to offer them, Jack," Curly went on, "but we may have to dig them up. Keep hammering away in the old paper. And for the time being set your sights on the survey. If we get that much, we're apt to get the railway in the course of time. The next first, and the time to go after it is now, not after the surveyors reach here, is the time and are preparing to return to Bellevue.

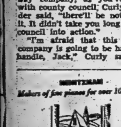
"If we do as well with the railway company, as you've done with county council, Curly," Halder said, "there'll be nothing to it. It didn't take you long to spoil council into action."

"I'm afraid that this railway company is going to be harder to handle, Jack," Curly said. "It may be a difficult matter to pin them down. Now, here's what we have to do. We're looking for you to get started. Prepare several short, pithy items, in close relation at once. Advertise a public meeting for Friday evening, June 13th. Tell everybody it's important that they turn out. We'll appoint a committee to go to Bellevue to see what can be done. I'll be going to county council we the 23rd, and I'll take time out while there to keep the issue at fever heat. Meanwhile try to find out something about George Godfrey, the railway president, and his associates. Put Godfrey's name on your mailing list and send him your paper. Print every nice thing you can about him and his associates and their railway. But play Godfrey up, and that regardless of what he tells our committee when it meets him. Rub him the right way, Jack. Keep rubbing him the same at manner of course, and there's no telling what he will happen."

"You'd kill him with kindness," Halder smiled.

"Well, if you know of a better way to get on the right side of him, let's hear it," Curly grinned.

The petitions were circulated, signed and returned. The meeting was held, and Reeve Curly Brown, Banker Metcalf and Station-keeper Matt Hawkins were sent to Bellevue to interview the railway company to ask them to consider making the Depot their objective point. Curly got the assurance in promise that the survey would be made all the way through to the Depot when the survey party was out.



And in time the committee was in the office of the railway company's president, Godfrey by name, and his vice-president, Clif Brown, by spokesman, pointed out the advantages of the railway connection between Bellevue and the Depot and the great amount of business that would be done after once such a service was established.

President George Godfrey, a short, middle-aged, bald-headed man with a big nose, bushy eyes and the strong smell of cigars about him, explained that the company had not planned to run the railway further northward than the Lookout at the present time. He said the railway was being built for one sole purpose as an outlet for the mines. The company was still in the throes of organization, he stated further. A charter had been applied for, but there were other matters to clear up before the actual work of building the railway would begin. Construction might start within a year, possibly not before two years.

Mercs Finally Reach Senior Top, Trim Tigers Twice As Indians Lose

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Dogged determination and a break in the schedule have given Orval Seibert Mercurys first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A race.

The Mercs were snapping at the heels of Stratford Indians for over a month. Last week they had the upper hand in a row with the lowly Hamilton Tigers and picked up valuable points. Meanwhile Stratford dropped a close one to Sarnia 4-3, on Friday night in the Mercurys downed Chatham Maroons 9-2 for their third victory in a row and gained a one-point lead over Stratford.

Brantford Redmen took a stranglehold on fourth place by shutting out Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen 3-0. It was Jim Shirley's first goose egg of the season in Brantford goal.

Weires Win

In the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A southern group Sudbury Wolves proclaimed their right to first place by thumping Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians 10-1.

Billy McComb scored twice for the Mercurys with others notched by Grant and Jerry Dutkowski. Dock and Price scored for the Maroons.

Three goals in the first period gave Brantford the win. Don Oberholtzer used two and Bill Dingwall's blue line shot accounted for the other. Jim Shirley handled 40 shots to earn his shutout.

Sudbury's landslide win gave them a four-point edge on Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds in the NOHA. Tatter McClellan scored three times, Johnny Mestan notched two and others were Ike Nick Tomlak, Marty Burton, Red Barrett, Roly McLenahan and Maxmo Kampel. Lindsay Lumley scored on a breakaway rush early in the second period to rob Andy Anderson of his shutout.

Saturday night action includes an attempt by Sudbury Wolves to extend their lead as they visit Sarnia Sailors. Brantford will be at Stratford and Hamilton Tigers play in Kitchener.

Share Honors At Dufferin

TORONTO (CP)—Barbara Bellaire, owned by J. Smith of Otterville, and driven by Wilmer Hillock, and Prince Meredith, owned by John B. Reid of Allan Craig, Que., and handled by Doc Hoggins, shared honors in the junior free-for-all when harness racing resumed at Dufferin Park Friday. They each won a heat.

Dumfiess Bomber, owned by J. Smith of Ottawa and driven by Hillock, won both heats of the fifth and secondary feature, an AA trot.

DeSpirito Has Five Days to Go

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Tony DeSpirito, leading United States jockey, failed to get a winner in eight tries Friday at Tropical Park, dimming his chances of breaking the record of 388 in a year.

DeSpirito had 376 going into Friday's program, but the best he could do with eight mounts was second on First Grandson in the fifth race. He was third in the finale and one in the money in five others.

He still has five days to go, but must bring in 12 winners to tie the record set by Walter Miller in 1906 and tied by Joe Culmore and Willie Shoemaker in 1950.

Georgie Dunn KO's Chavez In 10th Round

EDMONTON (CP)—Georgie Dunn of Edmonton Friday enhanced his world lightweight ranking with a 10th-round technical knockout over veteran Carlos Chavez of Los Angeles. Dunn scored 91½ and Chavez 136.

The fight was stopped at 2:30 of the last round when Chavez pulled up with a limp.

After the fight the Edmonton boxing commission announced that Dunn's purse was being held up. The main event was delayed 20 minutes as Dunn a Negro battler who came to Edmonton from Hartford, Conn., more than two years ago, refused to fight while Johnny Smith, Edmonton, was referee.

The fight went ahead with three judges outside the ring instead of the usual two and Smith inside as a non-scoring referee.

Ted Williams Goes in Business

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Capt. Ted Williams, Marine jet pilot who was the highest paid baseball player in history, Friday became the vice-president of a fishing tackle distributing company.

Ted, slugging outfielder for Boston Red Sox, stopped by to set up the business arrangement before heading for California and, he believes, on to Korea. He leaves Miami Jan. 3.

The left-handed hitter who signed for a reputed $125,000 with the Red Sox in 1950 thought it would be good to have a sideline to fall back on.

"I feel right now that when I get out of the service probably next September I'll be back in baseball," he said here. "I'd like to play some more.

"But I'm getting near the age where major league baseball players start to go downhill," added the 34-year-old slugger.

"That's one of the reasons I decided to go into partnership in the Southern Tackle Distributors in Miami."

O.C.C. to Play Hockey Series

TORONTO (CP)—The Upper Canada College hockey team, 14 players, two managers and a coach, leaves today to play a series of five exhibition games with Eastern Canada teams.

The series starts with two games against Halifax Seagulls, a juvenile team, Dec. 29 and 30. The club then plays Sackville intermediates, Moncton High School and St. Rose Juveniles. The team represents UCC in the Prep School League.

Fresh Water Tackle Fine for Fla.

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT

(Noted Sportsman, Author and Creator of Selmar Tables)

The fisherman is a fortunate soul. Unlike the hunter, he can indulge in his sport when he chooses. In fresh water, of course, there are always the closed seasons, but that unhappy situation is easily relieved. Always there is the sea, with its countless millions of fish, ready for the taking.

One of the nice things about fishing is the fact that an angler does not need to kill in order to enjoy his sport. A fish which has been caught and brought to net can be released and allowed to swim away to fight another day.

Not so with hunting. A shot bird or a downed animal cannot be returned to circulation. It has served its purpose for the hunter and that is that. Thus, in hunting, there is need of necessity, be short. As I say, the fisherman is indeed fortunate in his choice of outdoor sport.

Here in Pennsylvania and elsewhere in the frigid states a great many fishermen go in for ice fishing. When I grow older and more weather-resistant I used to do some ice fishing. Now, in my sixties, I don't get enough fun from fishing through holes in the ice to offset the acute discomfort that cold weather inflicts upon me.

Heads for Florida

But I don't put my tackle away. Instead, I clean my reels, restring my lines, tie new flies and lures, patch up windings and nicked varnish on my rods — no, I have them ready for next summer but to prepare for our annual vacation under the warm skies of the Florida Keys.

Too many folks thinks of saltwater fishing in terms of offshore cruisers and heavy-duty tackle. That, my friend, is wrong. If salt-water fishing were confined to that sort of lucrative business I would store my tackle and go into annual winter hiber-nation.

The salt-water picture has changed a great deal during recent years. No longer does a confirmed fresh-water enthusiast need to buy new tackle or learn new techniques in order to enjoy salt-water wishing.

All he needs to do is to load what tackle he has into his car, add as many of the family as can get away for a while, and start south. His fishing-outfit, rod or his fly-rod rig can be put to excellent use in southern salt water.

When I say "start south," I mean exactly that. You don't have to go to the Florida Keys: I go to them because I happen to like the bonefishing, but there are plenty of places to do winter fishing other than the Keys.

When you drive south, all you have to do is keep going and you will hit salt water and fishing—the south Atlantic coast, the Pacific coast along southern California, the Gulf of California or the Gulf of Mexico.

Lots of Accommodation

You don't even have to plan in advance for southern fishing. You will find plenty of fishing camps, motels, tourist places, all of which cater to fishermen. Stop at any sporting goods store in a southern city or town and the dealer will provide you with complete information re nearby waters.

As you know, you don't need a licence to fish in salt water. You may have to buy one if the sport increases in popularity but at present the sea is open to all and the fish are yours, as many as you want to catch, size and numbers all unrestricted with a few exceptions, such as the new regulations on pink bass.

Most folks, when they talk or think of vacations, think of summer trips to the north woods or the seashore. We used to do that and those trips were lots of fun. Then we realized, all of a sudden, that winter months, here in the northern states, seem to be interminably long.

So we have gone a right-about-face. Now we stay home in the summer. Of course, the weather is hot, often uncomfortably so. But we can go outdoors without wearing an overcoat. Moreover, we can go fishing if we feel like doing so.

In the winter there is not much to keep us busy out in the open air. We can't travel about in the snow, get a little exercise and get cold. The older we become, the more we dislike cold weather.

So we postpone taking our vacation until after January 1st. Then we do what I suggested that you do — we load our gear into the car and start south. Today's cars, even during cold weather is of infinitely more value than a summertime trip.

Fresh Water Tackle

Once in the Keys, the only tackle I use is my regular fresh water tackle. My bass-bug fly rod is ideally suited to bonefishing or, for that matter, any of the fly fishing on the sand flats about the Keys. My casting rod is excellent for channel fishing, pier fishing, or casting the shore lines for snook, redfish and trout over in the 10,000 island section of Florida's west coast.

In Florida waters there are about 40 species of game fish which will take a fly. In fresh water, a fly fisherman does not need much backing on his reel as a rule. With those salt-water bass, you will become intimately acquainted with the backing on your reel as your casting line will be out of sight most of the time, submerged in the briny deep.

And, incidentally, if you do take my advice and head south this winter, be sure to take your solunar tables with you. Quite a few of the southern newspapers publish the weekly schedules from the solunar tables but you had better play safe and have your home newspaper mailed to you. Those southern salt-water fish respond to the Solunar Periods just as well as do their northern fresh-water cousins.

Only Wishes She Had Used Syntona Long Ago

"Suffered Years of Misery" Stomach Disorders, Dizzy Spells, Constipation; Got Rheumatic Pains in Arms, Muscles. "Have First Real Relief Now," she says.

Mrs. Katherine McCoy, 13 Aspell Street, London, Ontario, says that if people really knew how much Syntona can help them they would certainly buy it. So, she is glad to make known the relief she got by taking this Herbal Medicine. Here is her experience:

"I suffered years of misery with stomach disorders, having awful gas, sour acid stomach, constipation and a heavy distressed feeling in my stomach after eating. I was dizzy spells, nervous and feeling run down. Sometimes my nerves were only worries to me. Rheumatic pains, so bad I couldn't sleep, set into my arms and muscles and I had no ambition to do my housework.

"I read about Syntona many times, but never thought it would help me. And a few weeks ago, however, I got a trial bottle and I'm glad I did. Now, after having it used over two weeks I have tried it long ago. It has given me the first relief from all this trouble I had for many seasons, and I can enjoy my meals unsatisfactorily and worry-free. I have no more gas, sour stomach, dizzy spells and have more energy to do my housework. I am certainly glad to make this statement about Syntona and hope that everyone who suffers like this will get Syntona."

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville by Dolan Bros. Druggist.

Hydrogen Blast Wrecks Jap Factory

Rescue workers are shown removing the body of one of the 16 persons killed when a huge hydrogen tank exploded at a chemical factory in Nagoya, Japan. Note the twisted wreckage in background. An estimated 900 persons were injured in the blast, with 212 of them requiring hospitalization. Many nearby buildings were damaged.—Central Press Canadian.

Howe Says 1953 Will See Record Post-War Arms Output

OTTAWA (CP) — Production Minister Howe said today that a big flow of arms will come out of Canadian factories next year and predicted that many of these factories will remain in business after the current three-year defence program ends in 1954.

He disclosed also that with the development of higher technical weapons production in Canada, the Canadian government has been able to persuade many of the big contracts in the United States, increasing her orders in Canada.

As a result, the big deficit in Canada's arms trade with the U.S. has been eliminated and a balance reached in orders placed over a two-year period.

Mr. Howe, who is minister of trade and mines as well as defence production, touched on Canada's defence effort in a year-end statement on production and trade.

Spends About 7% P. C.

As production minister he is responsible for spending about 7% to 20 per cent of Canada's three-year $5,000,000,000 defence program which began in April, 1951.

Mr. Howe emphasized that setting up and constructing factories takes time. Canada was no easy job. But now most of the kinks had been ironed out and most of the needed key plants set up and ready to operate.

These included the A. V. Roe plant at Malton, Ont., to produce the Orenda jet engine and the CF-100 jet fighter. The Orenda will be used to power both the CF-100 and the F-86 Sabre jet fighter under production at Canadair Ltd., Montreal.

Will Cut Costs

The Sabre formerly was powered by the U. S J-47 jet engine and was the most costly defence purchases in the U. S. The switch over to the Orenda will cut Canada's arms costs in the U. S.

The Orenda plant was opened last September. Rapid progress is being made, said Mr. Howe, in setting up production of Orenda components such as fuel systems, combustion chambers, light metal castings and turbine blades.

"In shipbuilding, Canada now is able to produce the main propulsion machinery for its own escort vessels. Under the weapons program new facilities have been created for the manufacture of various U. S.-type products.

"In the electronics field Canada is keeping abreast of the rapidly changing situation and now possesses the capacity to turn out many things as walkie-talkies, gunfire control equipment and sub-miniature tubes."

Aircraft Biggest Program

But aircraft production was the biggest program. Output of Sabres was progressing "favorably"—and technical difficulties in producing the CF-100 were overcome.

Mr. Howe gave no indication just how much government money would flow down its armament efforts next year.

"Canada's defence program is one of preparedness and the interdependent situation suggests that the need for such a program may continue for a considerable time."

Psychologist, Defending Mothers Says Mom Not to Blame for All Child's Ills

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A woman psychologist today took issue with the idea that "mom is to blame" for all of a child's troubles and ills.

Psychologists write a lot about childhood psychology, but practicing psychologists study the psychology of parents, she said.

Parenthood is just a development-al stage, Dr. Jane Loevinger said. "It's not a disease. It's not old age," said Dr. Jane Loevinger of Washington University, St. Louis, in an address to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Dr. Lorvinger cited five statements buttressing her arguments that there is too much emphasis on the mother-child complex:

1. "Parenthood has never been recognized officially as a branch of psychology nor as a normal developmental stage."

2. "Child psychology is one of the most intensively cultivated

Deputy Finance Minister, Dr. W.C. Clarke, 63, Dies Suddenly in Chicago Hotel

OTTAWA (CP)—Funeral services will be held here Tuesday for Dr. William Clifford Clark, 63, who as deputy finance minister for 20 years gave brilliant guidance to Canada's financial development from the depths of the depression years.

His death, from a heart seizure Saturday in a Chicago hotel, sadden ed the federal cabinet and the finance department. He had been chief adviser to five finance ministers and main draftsman for some two dozen federal budgets.

Dr. Clark felt unwell on his arrival by train at Chicago to address the Allied Social Sciences Association convention, and died of a heart attack shortly after reaching his hotel. The convention luncheon today, where he was to have spoken on Canadian fiscal policy was cancelled.

Church Service Held

A church service will be held at Chalmers United Church Tuesday and burial will be at Cataraqui Cemetery, Kingston, Ont., where he had been an esteemed professor of economics at Queen's University.

In a warm tribute, Prime Minister St. Laurent called Dr. Clark "a dedicated public servant" whose "decisive part in shaping the wartime financial and economic policies which won for our country such widespread admiration throughout the world."

But the white-haired finance expert had been responsible for more in shaping the National Housing Act, the prime minister recalled. It was one distinguished service, he should have felt that something translated into the welfare of his fellow-citizens generally would be the finest of memorials."

Finance Minister Abbott remembered Dr. Clark's "clear judgment and unswerving devotion to duty."

Appointed in 1932

His appointment in 1932 as deputy finance minister by the late Prime Minister R. B. Bennett was followed by a series of achievements that showed his mental stature.

He planned the financial side of the family allowances system, helped found the central banking system—the Bank of Canada—and launched the program of short-term government borrowing from financial institutions under Bank of Canada direction. He handled billions of dollars of public taxation.

The question is still open as to who will fill his shoes, but it appears likely that the office will go to Kenneth W. Taylor, former prices board chief and now assistant deputy minister of finance.

Went to Queen's

Dr. Clark went to Queen's University from his farm home at Martintown, in eastern Ontario's Glengarry county. He was graduated with a scholarship in economics to Harvard University and returned to Queen's to lecture from 1915 to 1923.

His next move was to Chicago to join S. W. Straus and Company, a financial firm, and in 1930 and 1931 he served on the committee on Hoover's advisory committee on unemployment relief in the U.S. But in 1931 he suffered a nervous attack of osteo-arthritis and after recovering he returned to Queen's University as director of research and administration.

Survived by Widow

With his appointment as deputy minister by the Conservative government in 1932 he served under Finance Minister Rhodes, and after the Liberals came to power was top adviser to C. A. Dunning, J.L. Ilsley and D.C. Abbott.

He is survived by his widow, two sons and two daughters. They are Dr. George Clark, Edmonton; Kenneth Clark, New York City; Mrs. David McGinnis, Kingston; and Mrs. Donald Johnston, Niagara Falls, Ont. Two sisters, Miss Isabel Clark, Kingston, and Muriel Clark, Montreal, also survive.

MacArthur Says Statement By President on Ouster Inaccurate and Misleading

NEW YORK (AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's description of a statement by President Truman as "inaccurate and misleading" today stimulated anew the controversy around the general's ouster as Far East commander.

MacArthur, in a statement issued Sunday night, took issue with a reported comment by Truman that he relieved MacArthur because the general "was trying to force us into an all-out war in the far east."

The President, in comments recorded at his press conference yesterday, said he relieved MacArthur "because he was insubordinate."

MacArthur, in a statement made public Saturday in an interview he gave to the White House correspondent. It was one of a series of year-end statements Mr. Truman and President to White House reporters.

In Washington Sunday night press secretary Roger Tubby said Truman would have no comment on the MacArthur statement. Tubby said the President "made his statement and is sticking by it."

Top Aid Heard

Courtney Whitney, retired major-general who was chief of MacArthur, gave out the latter's statement. It said:

"President Truman's statement is inaccurate and misleading.

"My purpose and desire was not to involve us in war in the Far East is inaccurate and misleading.

"My purpose and desire was not to involve us in war in the Far East is inaccurate and misleading. ..that I wanted to involve us in war in the Far East is inaccurate and misleading.

Bay of Quinte, Moira River Now Frozen Over

Sub-zero temperatures, the lowest of the season, wrapped the Bay of Quinte and the Moira River in the first ice-shackles over the week-end.

Dropping mercury on Saturday presaged the lowest temperatures of the season when Saturday afternoon the registration at the Purification Plant was 1.5 below zero.

The mercury continued to fall and on Sunday morning it hit the two below mark at seven o'clock. It remained there for an hour then slowly started to rise reaching the day's high of 32 degrees in the afternoon.

The bay is frozen over and the mouth of the Moira is completely under "ice wraps" with the exception of two ribbons of open water near the bay fairly fast moving currents.

News of Trenton Fire in Garage Drives Dwellers Into Cold Street

TRENTON (Special)—Mac Van-Luven was changing the oil in a furniture van in the garage at Cobley and VanLuven Furnishings property shortly after noon yesterday when he noticed flames shooting from the ceiling above the automatic stoker. He ran to get the garden hose in another part of the store but by the time he got back the garage was filled with burning smoke and he was forced to abandon this idea. He called firemen.

Two lines of hose were quickly set up in firemen converged on the building in the midst of the downtown business section. Smoke poured out of windows broken by firemen getting streams of water into play. Firemen attacked the fire from the roof, others went into the burning section from the ground floor. The fire was confined in the chilly weather.

The fire was confined to the garage section of the store. Little damage resulted from flames but water and smoke caused considerable loss. A number of mattresses stored above the garage were soaked with water while a pool room next door and apartments above were filled with smoke forcing people living in the apartments from the premises.

The firemen were back to the firehall within an hour.

Damage to the stock of the firemen touched the serious aspect of the fire. "It's a good job the VanLuven van was on hand when the fire in time. The whole block might have been wiped out if he hadn't been down there working."

Temperatures Down

If King Mercury swooped in on Trenton on Saturday and by nightfall temperatures were well down below zero and the ice on the waters of the Trent River thickened and grew to its full size for this time since the cold weather set in.

In the afternoon it was apparent that the city would be in the "cold one" because garage operators were chopping a hole in the river in the boathouses below the C.N.R. footbridge. During the night the river had frozen solid enough to allow skinny players their first real activity of the season.

And down on the shore near the river's mouth another kind of activity was in full swing. Fishermen were busy readying their shanties for the annual harvest through the ice.

Truck Hits Pole

A truck ran into a telephone pole on North Front Street Saturday breaking it off and causing considerable damage to the vehicle. The driver, Douglas Dunkley, 23, of Picton was not injured. He was driving Everett (Nipper) Eaton's truck from Trenton.

The driver told police that a vehicle pulling out of the Weller's Road intersection forced him off the road into the pole. He had just pulled out of the gas station on the west side of the street and was proceeding north by Hayhow's mill.

The possibility of entering a play in the February Festival of one-act plays to be staged by the Central Ontario Drama League was discussed at a recent meeting of the Belleville Theatre Guild. If such action is taken, it was decided that "Overlaid", written by Robertson Davies, Master of the local organization's selection to be shown in Toronto. The play, under the rules, must have been written by a Canadian.

The Guild also discussed producing a series of plays after January 1st over radio station CJBQ. Dorothy MacKinnon was named chairman of a committee to investigate the feasibility of such a move.

Casting for the Guild's next three-act production "The Happy Time", to be held during the first week in January, Director Sid Rose announced. Rehearsals will be held Wednesday nights, with public presentation scheduled for late March.

At the meeting, J. B. Priestley's one-act drama, "The Rose and the Crown" was displayed as a workshop production. The cast comprised Helen Hall, Jack Wenaccott, Betty Barrie, Jack Williamson, Stuart Robb and Moe Miles. Miriam Bishop directed the play, assisted by Muriel Brule.

Bulls Upset By Children, Cancel Fights

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Sunday's bullfight was cancelled because the bulls, upset by the presence of children scampering in the bull ring and can't meet the minimum weight requirements.

Municipal regulations say bulls must weigh at least 940 pounds. None in the corrals here weighed only 850.

Alfonso Gaona, the bull fight manager, said they weighed enough when they were brought to the bull ring. But the constant distribution of Christmas presents to their children during the holiday had upset the bulls so they had not eaten.

No Translesis on Hand

The Knight of the Road has almost passed into obscurity.

Loitering Lizzie's Sunday Day last year there were no translesis at the local jail. No evils to enjoy the sumptuous turkey and cranberry dinner, served annually with the compliments of the local police department.

Saturday night, however, Jack Frost drove two of the few remaining highway travelers to seek shelter. They were given a night's lodging but no succulent fowl serving awaited them on arising in the morning.

Johnny Comes-Lately headed out knowing that another dinner will be waiting for them here in another 363 days.

One Twin Now Near Normal, Still in Danger

CHICAGO (AP) — The official word on the Strodie Siamese twins today was still "no substantial change," but surgeons were heartened by their tenacious grip on life.

A spokesman for the Illinois Neuropsychiatric Hospital emphasized that both Rodney and Roger, separated from their head-to-head connection 13 days ago, are in critical condition.

Roger, the twin who lost his connection to the circulatory and drainage blood vessel—the sagittal sinus—in the 12-hour, 49-minute operation Dec. 17, was still in a coma. Rodney, who has the benefit of the large vein and some brain-covering membrane sacrificed by Roger, was alert and apparently near normal.

The great danger was the possibility of infection, which could quickly prove fatal.

Roger, with virtually none of the membrane which encases the brain has a substitute membrane of a plastic substance, polyethylene. This is covered by a layer of aluminum foil. Over this is a bandage.

Rodney, who has about two-thirds of the top of his brain covered with natural dura mater, has substantially the same head covering as the other twin.

Rodney has been taken off oxygen. Roger still gets supplemental oxygen.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO. (CP) — Golds took over leadership of a mixed stock market in early afternoon trading today.

Senior golds drew good support but interest centred on secondary issues. Kenville and Gunnar, both prospects, headed most actively, moving about 120,000 shares for no change in price. Junior producers showed a list of small gains led by Preston and Campbell. Among other active prospects, Chibou and Graham Bousquet gained while Lacnlet slipped. Holding companies held firm.

Foods, manufacturing companies and miscellaneous issues were strong in industrials while papers slipped.

A few base metals traded heavily. Belleterre leading pennies and Estelle, Nesbitt-Labine and Ontario Pyrites gaining. Higher-priced issues held firm and Canada Malartic gained.

Western oils showed a majority of losses as Central Leduc, Del Rio and Federated traded lower. Dome Exploration, Britalta and Canada Southern rose.

First Destroys Boy Scout Lodge Near Hamilton

PALERMO, Ont. (CP)—A fire which destroyed a boy scout lodge five miles west of here Sunday night was believed by police to have been started by a person with a grudge against the Boy Scout organization.

Richard Skillen of Hamilton, one of four scouts spending the weekend at the camp, discovered the fire and entered the building to try to save some equipment. He said coal oil from lanterns used by the scouts was spread over the floor.

Skillen and three companions, Alvin Wilson and John and Peter Carson, all of Hamilton, slept in one of the cabins near the lodge. The boys found a bed had been intended to use slashed to ribbons.

Palermo is 12 miles north of Hamilton.

$300,000 CHURCH FIRE

EAST ORANGE, N.J. (AP) — Fire gutted the 52-year-old First Congregational church Sunday. Only the stone walls remained. Rev. Walter Van Hoek set the loss at about $300,000.

$25,000,000 Base in N.B. Eventually May be Big Enough To Handle Full Division

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian Army in 1953 stood guard on three continents, fought sporadically on one of them and prepared to build the largest camp it has ever had in Canada. The latter, a $25,000,000 base in New Brunswick, eventually may be big enough to handle the manoeuvres of a full division.

Looking back on the 13 months, army headquarters today listed as highlights 24 events ranging from the fighting on Little Gibraltar Hill in Korea to adoption of the 33-ton British Centurion tanks.

Heavy discharges of veterans of Korea kept manpower totals from increasing markedly. In January the Army had roughly 42,000 men; in December about 46,000.

Throughout the year, the Army maintained a brigade in Korea, another in Germany and a third at home to provide a pool of reinforcement formations roughly equal to two additional brigades.

The Army List

In listing the year's 10 big events the Army didn't mention the biggest explosion of all at home, the Currie report. This document, with its description of a "general breakdown" in the system of administration, supervision and accounting of the Army Works Service provoked Parliament's stormiest debates of the year, now awaiting renewal when Parliament reconvenes Jan. 12.

These were the events the Army listed:

1. Sporadic action by the 25th Infantry brigade group in Korea while peace talks dragged on. The climax came in October when a fierce engagement was fought atop the battle-scarred peak of "Little Gibraltar" by troops of the 2nd battalion, Royal Canadian Regiment. Only company of the unit, aided by armor and artillery, fought the Communists to a standoff in the effort to take the hill.

2. The 27th infantry brigade group, under rigid training and discipline in Europe, became fully operational as part of NATO defence forces.

3. At home and abroad, the largest troop movement since the Second World War was under way. Some 38,000 soldiers were on the move in 1952 by land, sea and air.

New Military College

4. Educational facilities for the services' future officers were expanded with opening of le Collège Militaire Royal de Saint-Jean, St. Johns, Que., by Governor-General Vincent Massey. Introduction of a regular officer training plan also opened up increased avenues of educational advancement for potential officers.

5. To meet the increasing need for tradesmen and specialists, an apprentice-soldier plan was announced under which boys 16 years of age will be recruited for training in special trades.

6. Looking northward, the Army staged exercise "Eager Beaver" 1,000 miles north of Edmonton on the shores of Klaane Lake, the largest joint U.S.-Canadian engineering job undertaken in the north land since the war. Army engineers bulldozed two giant airstrips over ice and frozen muskeg in sub-zero temperatures. In the eastern Arctic, exercise "Sun Valley III" brought a joint Army-Air Force manoeuvre into Nugava Bay in northern Labrador.

International Parley

7. In an effort to advance standardization of weapons among NATO countries, the Army brought together top infantry leaders of the USA, British and Canada in the first three-country Infantry conference. Lt.-Gen. Simonds, chief of the general staff, called upon delegates at Quebec City to "think always of the infantry soldier and make more efficient his weapons and lighten his load." The Army also adopted the Centurion tank.

8. Canadian arms shipments to other NATO countries continued "in record quantities." Over a two-year period enough aid has been extended to equip three infantry divisions.

9. Plans to construct the Army's largest training camp in peacetime history were announced.

10. On the home front the Army continued to build up the new reserve force CWAC organization. Members of the CWAC are training in clerical and other skilled trades at manning depots across Canada.

During the year, 132 soldiers distinguished themselves in action in Korea and received awards that included four Distinguished Service Orders; 19 Orders of the British Empire; two Distinguished Conduct Medals; three Military Crosses; seven Military Medals; four British Empire Medals, and 85 mentions in dispatches.

Men Tossed About Like 'Peas In Drum' on Ocean

The 10,000-ton freighter Maplecove ran into this fierce blast by the deep-sea tug Island Sovereign.

Both had been slammed by savage blows from the Pacific ocean as the Canadian Pacific freighter struggled homeward with a damaged rudder.

The freighter carried a crew of 34. Fifteen men were aboard the tug.

It was a 1,200-mile gale-swept voyage for the freighter and, said crew members, a "nightmare" for the tug.

The Island Sovereign took the big freighter, inbound from the Orient in tow Christmas Day at the entrance to Juan De Fuca Strait.

For five days the tug made little headway against 65-mile-an-hour winds and waves 40-feet high.

"It was the worst experience I ever had," said Capt. Arthur Warren of the Island Sovereign.

"It was just about impossible to eat, sleep or rest.

No Sleep in 84 Hours

"We had three meals, and I haven't closed my eyes for 48 hours."

Capt. R. A. Leicester of the Maplecove said he had only one anxious day—Dec. 18 when the rudder post broke.

"We had been in gales ever since we left Yokohama for Vancouver and were anxious to be with just a bit of speed on when the steering went."

The crew rigged up a "jury rig" with a wooden ladder, hatch covers and an iron grating, but it was not a success.

GIVE CATHEDRAL WINDOW

COVENTRY, England (AP)—West German shipbuilders, whose countrymen destroyed Coventry Cathedral in the air blitz of 1940, will furnish a stained glass window for the new structure, now being erected, it was announced Sunday. The gift grew out of a conversation between President Theodor Heuss of West Germany and Pastor Adolf Kurtz of Berlin, who has conducted Lutheran services for German workers here.

Glimmer of Old Western Days Still Is Active

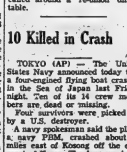
CALGARY (CP)—The campfire lights of Indian days have given way to gaudy neons and the hardriding cowboy has traded in the glitter created by the modern dude. But the glamour of those Old West days still is alive in Calgary.

It comes to life again when there is a gathering of children of one of southern Alberta's first pioneers.

Such a gathering occurred here when four sisters and a brother, the family of the late Col. J. F. Macleod, former commissioner of the North West Mounted Police, met under the same roof for the first time since 1926.

The occasion was the unveiling of a cairn near Chuny, Alta., built to mark the 50th anniversary of the signing of the Blackfoot treaty, which Col. Macleod was instrumental in bringing about.

Four members of the family are Calgary residents and the fifth is from Toronto. Mrs. George Sharpe of Toronto arrived to spend the Christmas season with her sisters and brother, A.S.B. Cross, Mrs. John Montgomerie-Bell, Mrs. Cecil Townshend and Norman Macleod.



Stories of Old West were recalled around a re-union dinner table.

10 Killed in Crash

TOKYO (AP) — The United States Navy announced today that a four-engined flying boat crashed in the Sea of Japan last Friday night. Ten of its 14 crew members are dead or missing.

Four survivors were picked up by a U.S. destroyer.

A navy spokesman said the plane, a navy PBM, crashed about 50 miles east of Wonsan on the east coast of Korea. The four survivors were rescued by the U.S. destroyer Renshaw.

'Crescent Wing' Bomber Makes Maiden Flight

LONDON (Reuters)—The world's first four-jet "crescent-wing" bomber has made its maiden flight in southwest England, it was announced here Saturday.

It is the Handley Page 80, ordered in quantity "off the drawing board" by the RAF some months ago and now taken off the secret list.

The crescent wing, roughly in the shape of a quarter-moon, swooped back from the fuselage and then straightens out toward the tips. It is said to combine advantages to two other wing types for the latest high-speed jets — the sweep-back and the delta, or triangular, wings.

The new plane's engines are imbedded in the revolutionary wing. It has a high swept-back tailplane on top of a single fin.

The plane's manufacturers, Handley Page Limited, claim that no other bomber flies as fast, as far and as high with as great a bomb load.

Previous claimant to the title was the Avro 698 Vulcan, the first delta-shaped-wing bomber, which made its maiden flight in Britain last Aug. 30.

Welland Ship Canal Claims New Record

PORT COLBORNE (CP)—The 1952 Welland Ship Canal navigation season established a record in tonnage of commodities handled by the Welland Canal, figures released by the canal office in St. Catharines show.

Tonnage during the year was set at 17,738,515 tons. The previous record set in 1951 was 16,231,096 tons.

Increases were reported in all four major commodities — grain coal, ore and oil—with only miscellaneous products showing a decrease.

Grain showed the largest gain. There were 4,933,018 tons of grain shipped through the canal this year against 4,150,507 last year.

Coal shipments were up to 5,360,088 tons in 1952, compared to 4,835,698 tons in 1951. Ore totalled 2,585,000 tons against last year's tonnage of 2,116,123.

Lethargy Said More Dangerous Than Communism

WHITBY (CP)—The lethargy of professed Christians and their refusal to make militant avowals of their faith when confronted with communistic propaganda is more dangerous to Canada than open communism itself, Gordon C. Hutchins, M.P., told the Older Boys' Parliament, said Saturday.

The premier, from London, Ont., was successful in obtaining a majority for a number of resolutions on social problems which had been presented in the "speech from the throne."

The Parliament, being held in the Ontario Ladies' College, adopted a number of policies which will set the members' pattern in leadership of some 4,000 boys of six Protestant denominations in Canada.

1. The Parliament is opposed to the use of alcohol because of its harmful influence upon physical and mental health.

2. Members are to set an example for their peers by refusing to use tobacco.

3. Commercial dance halls will be boycotted by members of the Parliament, and boys within their leadership will be encouraged to expect morally responsible supervision of the dances they attend.

4. Members will take active steps to retain the interest of youths in their churches, and will urge more positive measures to combat interference to Christian fellowship and worship.

5. The Parliament will oppose commercialized Sunday sports.

IN OUR OWN BACKYARD

Having long associated great mining projects with the more remote regions of the Canadian northland, southern Ontario citizens may be prone to dismiss new and nearby developments as ventures of the great significance. Nevertheless, in Bellerille's own backyard, an extensive iron mining development is proceeding at a rate which promises commercial ore production within two years.

The importance of the new magnetite field at Marmore, where the Bethlehem Steel Corporation has already converted a wide forest area into a potential mining property in the past year, is emphasized by the visit there a week ago of Premier Leslie M. Frost, Ontario Mines Minister Phillip Kelly and officials of the Mines Department. Struck by the extent of the preliminary operations since the project was undertaken, the visiting party watched huge, modern excavating equipment at work which will remove 30 million tons of overburden before actual underground mining gets under way.

Beneath, is an ore body estimated to yield 20,000,000 tons of iron concentrates which will require a 25-year recovery program on a vast scale, utilizing the most modern methods of iron mining. It is in fact a combination of modern conditions which led to the initial developments in this southeastern Ontario field. It was the adaptation of the prospector's magnetometer to use by air during the war as a means of enemy submarine detection which led to extensive geological surveying in recent years which would have been long neglected in the days of ground exploration. Other factors which encouraged development in the Marmora area included the proximity of the field to transportation and the success of a pelletizing process for handling the ore with much greater convenience.

After Premier Frost had viewed the Marmora project where vast plant facilities for crushing, milling and concentrating ore are yet to be constructed, he took occasion to point out that this development is probably the first of several which are projected in eastern Ontario. He predicted that the base metal industry would soon be making a greater contribution to the economy of the province than the precious metals which have held the mining spotlight for so many years in Ontario.

Coincident with the iron development there is certain to be also a considerable increase in mining of industrial minerals of lesser importance but nevertheless in great demand in the wider development of this new area. On the whole, it is now the confirmed judgment of geologists that there are most encouraging prospects in the area for important mining development in the years ahead.

More quickly than will be realized locally, a new and vastly important industry will become a thriving segment of the economy of the eastern region. It is an area which is dependent almost exclusively on its basic agricultural enterprises, came to see expansion into commercial industry at rapid pace in recent years, and now looks forward to a greater diversity in industrial progress which must redound in considerable measure to its welfare and prosperity.

"IS THAT YOU MYET?"

We would be very much surprised if Canadians are regarded by the world at large as a loquacious nation of people. The group of us have ever been likened to our taciturn neighbors in New England but neither have we been accused of the gregarious garrulity which is characteristic of many of our American friends.

Yet it is now on the record that Canadians are the world's talkingest people — on the telephone. A few days ago "Telephone Statistics of the World" were released and the figures show that the people of no other nation on earth are equal to us as telephone conversationalists.

In 1951 Canadians averaged 278 telephone conversations per person, or better than one phone call each day of the year for every man, woman and child of the entire population. The people of the United States were second, averaging 276 conversations. The Swedes were third with about 309.

Canada remained in third place in 1951 for the number of telephones in use and in the number of telephones per hundred persons. Of the world total of 70,400,000 phones, the U. S. had 45,638,457, followed by the United Kingdom with 4,000,000 and Canada with 3,146,000. Only six countries had more than a million phones — West Germany, France, Sweden, Italy and Australia.

On January 1, 1952, New York City had more telephones than any other city in the world, all of France or the continent of Asia. Greater London with roughly half as many was highest among cities outside of the U.S. Washington, D.C. had the greatest density of telephones with 64 for every 100 persons.

If there is any satisfaction to be gained in this new Canadian record of achievement, it is that the statistics might weigh in against the household exasperation of this day and age which sees all school homework in the community co-ordinated and dispatched via the family's party line.

Admiralty Island off the coast of Alaska was discovered by Captain George Vancouver about 1793.

Mount King George in the Rockies, with an altitude of 11,226 feet, was named after King George V.

STEWARDSHIP

Christian people have generally held to one of two ideals with reference to the use of money. Some have either said that money is essentially evil and have turned to the ascetic life or else they have declared that money is a factor which when consecrated to God can be of use in His Kingdom. The latter belief is known as stewardship.

This is undoubtedly the truth which the Bible teaches about money. People often believe that they are quoting the Bible when they say that money is the root of all evil. But they are not, because the Bible does not say this. The Bible says that the love of money is the root of all evil and that is a different matter.

A steward is a trustee administering goods or valuables which belong to someone else. Stewardship is the acknowledgment that God owns everything, that we are trustees holding divine gifts in our possession for His little while and duty bound to use them to the upbuilding of our lives, to the welfare of our fellows, and to the glory of God.

Stewardship is a Christian duty, but it is also a rich source of satisfaction and reward. As we have never tried it, you are denying yourself something of essential value.

How the News Spread

(Fort William Times-Journal)

The youngster had heard the Christmas story from the teacher, and when his Daddy came home, he repeated it for his benefit.

The father listened as the boy told about the angels bringing the good news to the shepherds. Then he asked him:

"How was the news brought?"

The youngster thought that over, and, boy-like, said:

"Newspapers, I guess."

The father was telling it yesterday as a story on himself because he happens to be a radio announcer.

Superior to Sarnia

(Fort Arthur News-Chronicle)

Plans for extension of the oil pipe line from Superior to Sarnia have had sequel in increased valuations on Alberta oil stocks, in the expectation of new transportation costs. At the same time some value has disappeared from the tanker fleet that was produced to carry the oil down the Great Lakes.

Simple Things Matter Most

(Montreal Gazette)

"I am resolved to do my duty, and I am sustained by the knowledge that I am supported by the widespread goodwill and confidence of all my subjects."

These were the words of George VI. in 1937. They were his first message as King. And it was in this same spirit that the monarch spoke Thursday morning in her first Christmas broadcast as Queen. No doubt it was the influence of the season and the sense of home-gathering that placed and gave the Queen's broadcast Thursday a quality of its naturalness and simplicity. But there was also something in the very manner and words of the Queen that seemed to make everyone feel at home, as they gathered about their radios and heard her speak.

These Christmas broadcasts from Sandringham have come to be looked forward to in the Commonwealth, as part of the expected and welcomed ritual of the Christmas holiday. But this is only as it should be. There was an instinctive reason why this ritual was established.

The Queen's grandfather George V established the first of these broadcasts just 19 years ago—at Christmas time, 1932. It was the Statute of Westminster had been only the year before. Under its terms a profound change was recognized in the relations among the members of the Empire. It was the statute declared that the members of the British Commonwealth are henceforth to be "autonomous communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another, in their domestic or external affairs, though united in a common allegiance to the Crown."

That was the definition, the Crown became at once something different and more than it had been significant than it had ever been before. It became the symbol of the bright new reality that there were now independent. It was not until the King addressed all the Commonwealth came to be spoken of as "a family of nations" and the King as the one in whom this unity of family feeling was centred.

It was to express this change that George V. made his Sandringham in 1932 in his first Christmas message. His bluff, rich voice could be heard in every home, now from my home and my heart to you all—for those who are celebrating this day with their children and their grandchildren as well, as such, I wish a happy Christmas. God bless you."

In this message, as in many others, George VI followed his father's model closely. And almost at once he was his role to speak to his people under the terrible conditions of war.

But this only gave the Christmas message a greater meaning, for he spoke of the need for sharing the great burdens, of the dark good, and of putting "your hand into the hand of God." He said that "better than light and safer than the known way."

So it was again Thursday. In the same context of human terms, the Queen was visiting the future, speaking "from my own home where I am about to spend Christmas with my family." And she went on, as her grandfather had done before her, to have a special word for those distant lands and on every side of the globe. There is need for courage, and for keeping alive the sense of belonging to the family of nations, whose strong family ties would strengthen the world of peace.

Many who heard the Queen on Christmas Day must have thought back to the Christmas broadcast of last year. They may in memory have heard the voice of her father's predecessor strangely changed and broken—saying, in his last message, that it is "the little things that matter most."

Perhaps it was the very special tenderness for George VI's daughter, pleading herself for one in her father's place. Many who heard her remembered her as a child. And now, as Queen, she spoke with the same determination as before—in the ways of duty all the days of her life.

So long as these old simple things still "matter most" for the Commonwealth on Christmas Day, hope and faith will survive in a darkly troubled world.

Farmers Have Less Money

(Ottawa Journal)

A delegation from the steelworkers' union met cabinet ministers in Ottawa to ask aid for the farm machinery industry, now in danger of drastic lay-offs in the large plants due to lack of orders. It is understood the delegation might consider gifts of farm implements to the United Kingdom countries, suggested also that an investigation be held at finding out if there was a monopoly in the industry fixing prices at such a level that farm purchases were reduced.

Apparently there was no mention of what appears an obvious explanation of sales resistance by the farmer to machinery. It is that as a lot of Canadian farmers, more especially in the Prairie provinces, have not the money this year with which to buy new machinery.

Their cash income has been clearly pointed to this trend in recent months. Farm cash income reduction has been in food items, which indicated that the farmer has not already showed a tendency to rise owing to new pay demands by industrial workers. Instead agriculture has been shrinking at a fairly rapid rate.

The agricultural economy of Eastern Canada centres around dairying, fruit and vegetables and meat animals. Due to the U.S. embargo resulting from the foot-and-mouth disease and to lower meat prices throughout America, Eastern Canada's meat industry this year, in comparison with the record year of 1951, has suffered less affected by loss of export market for thousands of cattle than the dairy and vegetables and the threat of a further reduction of the dairy market by imported oils.

Consumers, and union members who work in farm machinery plants are among them, have been in a very complaining mood about high food prices. Now these are lower. Industry should not expect farmers to buy more and cheap food at the same time.

'Carmen' For The Many

(New York Times)

The girl who sells popcorn at the Lee Theatre, Fort Wayne, Ind., has solved for the audience which came on Thursday evening the problem of restraint. Carmen bought only two bags of popcorn. This was a measure of the girl's self-restraint or whatever it was might have saved the day for the 1,700 individuals who crested the Metropolitan Opera House before the broadcast came.

But they would be startled indeed by the enterprise originally intended to provide only a few cornucopias of popcorn—for a spectacular handful was now reaching at least 70,000 eyes—27 cities, and would soon reach many more.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE CLEAN MIND

Clean windows in a home, office or those in a car make a lot of difference in contrast with those which are clouded with dust and dirt. Clean windows you see the most and feel the most. Everybody notices everyone who looks through them. Women in the home are especially disturbed when they discover such windows. They speak of them as showing a bad condition.

The mind is the great window through which we all look. If that mind is unclean, everything we read, hear and observe is affected. Once we have read that an artist with an unclean mind could paint the face of a pure woman. The clean mind sees beauty as it is, not as polluted or imperfect.

The clean mind is incapable of false visions. It can see far ahead. A person with such a mind can look at life with fitter and truer eyes, with words that cut and not harm another, words of a person's mouth and the meditations of the heart that please God and the mind. What an experience it is to be privileged to be in the presence of such a one!

Health depends upon cleanliness. Science has stated that cleanliness is actually next to Godliness. Certainly that would well be said of the mind that is kept clean. With the clean mind we can get into the hearts of people, passing nothing but a kindly judgment. We can see all looked into faces that reflected the clean mind. Those who have light to such faces were those cleansed daily with kindly and thoughtful thinking.

The clean mind is the one of "pure vision." It sees all beauty and all ugliness—but it selects only beauty. Like the plucking of the pure white pond lily. The mind is left unsoiled. The clean mind is attractive. Just the same as we are selective with our reading, our books, our magazines, and our work in life. Better than gold is the possession of a clean mind.

Personal Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

CHILDREN FORCED TO ACCEPT BRIBERY

Dear Dr. Brady: My daughter, age 8, resembles her father in two ways. She's a chocolate addict and a teaspoon of chocolate syrup to one glass of milk. Is this harmful?

Which? The chocolate or the bribery?

Do you resort to bribery whenever your daughter fails to perform according to your wishes? How does it work, Doctor?

If you'll be a good girl, I'll bring you a present. If you don't put away your toys, you can't go to the store with me. Unless you brush your hair right you can't wear the new hair ribbon. Will you eat your carrots? I give you another sweet bun!"

Such a technique will produce a wife for some unfortunate man who will trade her services for money or affection. It will produce a man who trades his capacities for something of the sahe. It is the sort of training that brings about "what we delight in pointing out as typically North American and beautiful.

The corruption is deep in the home in which a child learns early to figure the angles. Parents who bribe their children to perform or behave in a certain way are inadequate to the sacred task of raising children with acceptable moral standards.

See to it, gently, kindly, with soft voice, but insistently until it is done, that your child does what he should do. Explain why that it should be done. Let him know that you are waiting for his performance; that until it takes place, there will be no further conversation, discussion, explanations, bribes, favors.

"When your hair is brushed and your toys are put away, we can make other plans. Now is the time to clean up."

"Now is he time to eat supper. Meat, vegetables, salad, these are super. Sweet buns and desserts are extras, not essentials. When you have eaten your supper, if you are still hungry, you will have dessert or chocolate milk shake."

Chocolate interferes with the assimilation of calcium and should be kept away from children. If you must flavor milk, use natural fruit flavors or vanilla or maple.

A Word Is Coined

(Hartford Courant)

Many of the good things in life including so they say, real love are the happy by-product of mischance. Many scientific discoveries are owing their recognition to an acute eye viewing an accidental happening and correlating it with other facts. All to which leads to the main point, namely that an esteemed, younger contemporary, the New York Times, inadvertently created a new word the other day. It is a word of tremendous possibilities and it is to be hoped that its brief life may be saved that we now mention the matter.

The story had to do with a certain public official, and was published by the State Department to be, so the story said, a "good" story. Which, of course, means that there was mental conflict in the production of the story involved, as it does midway between good and poor. A poor risk, indeed! How many things are in that middle flat dangle halfway between good and poor?

"How was the show last night? Oh, not too good, not too bad. Just sort of good, I guess."

In fact nearly everything including people in the world is just sort of good. Most singing is good. Most people are good sports. Most cooking ranges from good to poor, or, if you are lucky, from good to good. Most people barely get home at parties and enjoy good health.

We could go on like that ad infinitum to bolster the position that nearly all in the world may have indicating safe middle ground is nearly so effective as the Times Montoye operator. We are not sure that it is a particularly good idea for the Times to throw its respected weight behind this new word.

Big Job Coming Up

(St. John's News)

The House of Commons in Ottawa had been told that it would cost $100 million to replace Newfoundland's narrow gauge railway with a standard gauge Mos.

That is the great deal of money. In fact, we freely admit that it is a great deal of money, but we cannot see how the issue can be permanently evaded, regardless of cost.

Keep the Union Jack

(Moose Jaw Times-Herald)

The Union Jack is right just as well be understood that if Canada is to have a distinctive national flag it must include the Union Jack. Those who want to remove the Union Jack from their minds to that and govern themselves accordingly.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

We flatter ourselves in this country that we have a classless society. From some angles, this may be true. But there is one established amongst us, in the large cities at any rate, a class division which does not seem to have not been in a streetcar or bus recently. They have not been the inside of a day coach for years. They have not been on a train. They do not travel by bus. They never go on the subway. They do nowhere except in their motor cars. For them the street cars, their secretaries get their tickets and sleeper reservations. Except for the few minutes involved in walking through the crowded railway station, they move from he isolation of their motor car to the isolation of their compartment or stateroom in the train with the minimum contact with the public.

In the olden days, what were called the upper classes gloried about in their private coaches; and private coaches were far fewer in proportion to the population than motor cars are today. It is not only our mobility of the middle class who belong to this class of isolated people who have ceased to travel by bus or day coach. Thousands of quite modestly situated people, minor executives, lawyers, businessmen, have secretaries to get them their railway reservations. Thousands and of them have long ago got out of the habit of the bus, the motor cars even to travel five blocks, rather than use the public conveyances.

To say that these people are ill at ease when they do with the necessity of boarding a crowded street car or bus, or to hunch for a seat in the crowded coach, is not to exaggerate. All unaware, the people are is creating a social class. It may not have gone far enough as yet to assert itself as such. But the old saying that one half of the world doesn't know how the other half lives is perhaps truer today than when the observation was first made.

GOOD MANNERS

Post-Christmas thank you note
"Thank you for your card"

"Thank you so much for your beautiful Christmas card!" Keep these pleasant words-of-the-season bridge-y polished and ready to say to your friends and acquaintances as you chance to meet them these days after Christmas. It's nice to add an attractive word-bow, to . . . "How very kind you were to remember me, Dorothy. I loved your thought, and I loved your card." People are, naturally, delighted to be thanked for their greeting-cards. (I feel disappointed, hurt, when you forget to thank, when you give the impression of being indifferent, casual, about a friend's thoughtfulness. Say thank-you words with a sprightly charm of manner and voice . . . so that the memory of your Grace-of-Appreciation will joyously linger on!

How to reply to "thank you for your card"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister and I would appreciate some of your advice. Last evening she and I were trying to "sum up" things to say to someone who thanks you for sending a Christmas card. (Because of the season we were speaking mainly of Christmas cards, but we also meant birthday cards or any other kind of greeting card.) We decided that, of course, if the friend says that he or she liked the card, it's easy and simple to say, "I'm so glad you liked it." But if the friend says only, "Thank you for your Christmas card," my sister maintains that all one needs to say is, "You're welcome." To me this doesn't seem like a very good reply . . . not enough. Will you please give us some guides?—Polly and Peggy.

I agree with you that "You're welcome" isn't "enough". It sounds gracious, as if you could not think of anything nice to add. It's fun to think of something to add that is a bit lively, though simple. For example: "I did want you to know, Annie dear, that I was thinking of you at Christmas time. I hope you had a Happy Christmas . . . and a Happy New Year to you, too." Or: "Well, Tom, you see I wanted to send you my friendly greetings for Christmas . . . and a wonderful New Year to you." (Or, for a birthday card, "I cannot every word of that birthday greeting with all my heart, Florence . . . and many, many happy returns of your day!")

However, most important to be remembered is the way you say these replies. The warm friendliness in your manner. The pleasant lilt in your voice. And always, always, the appealing charm of adding the personal touch.

Godmother prefers to give bond or savings account as christening gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be the godmother to a baby who is to be christened on Sunday soon. Is it necessary to give a gift in silver? I would prefer to give a defense bond or to add to a savings account I started when the baby was born. Which gift would you suggest—Godmother.

Today it is not at all a "must" that a godparent give a christening present of silver. This formerly was the traditional christening present. Your idea of giving the baby a bond, or to add to the savings account you have already started for the baby, is excellent . . . and this most practical type of present is today very often given. Either present is in excellent taste, and depends on your own preference.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

What's the cure for romantic heartbreak?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a guy whose girl walked out on him and married somebody else. I thought I could forget her by going out with the fellows and losing myself in them, but it doesn't work. I keep thinking about her just the same, and wondering what I am going to do with myself the rest of my life.

Do you know any cure for what ails me?—J. M.

Dear J.M.:

Certainly I know a cure for what ails you. The cure is, instead of going out on the town with the fellows, look around for another girl and start taking her out. Or, rather, take a lot of nice girls out and widen your circle of pleasant and worthwhile companions.

Maybe you won't believe it, but if you'll just make up your mind to carry through such a program, even though it seems as though you still keep thinking of the past all the time, you'll find that your unhappy experience will gradually lose its power to disturb you and that, eventually, its power over you will disappear completely. You're not going to forget that other girl, of course. None of us forget people and experiences that have profoundly affected us. But they do retreat into the background of our minds if we give them half a chance, instead of keeping them in the forefront of our thoughts by concentrating all our attention on them.

So don't worry. You won't go on mourning that girl's loss forever. Not if you're a normal human being. What will happen is that after a while you'll find another girl so special that you may even wonder what you saw in the first one. It may be a bit disheartening to find yourself recovering from a romance that you thought was the one love of your life, but somehow that seems to be the way our emotions work—and a good thing it is, too!

How should her daughter's engagement be announced?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband and I are neither divorced nor legally separated, but we live apart. There is no enmity between us, and our daughter, who has just become engaged, is very fond of him and sees a lot of him.

In making formal announcement of our daughter's engagement, would it be proper to put "Mr. and Mrs. So-and-So announce, etc." or just "Mrs."—Mrs. D. H. R.

Dear Mrs. D.H.R.:

Since you and your husband are neither divorced nor legally separated, your relationship with him is your own private affair, and as far as the public is concerned, you are still a team.

Hence, under your particular set of circumstances, the correct way to announce your daughter's engagement would be to use "Mr. and Mrs."

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Clay packs, mud blackheads pack-bar

Soap is the most valuable oil all toiletries. It is the queen of cosmetics and most skins are healthiey and more blooming for its frequent use. Often it prevents blackheads from forming. When they have been long established, however, and are deeply imbedded in the skin, lather and friction may not remove them. They are a menace. When the pores expand because of these wax-like plugs, and delicate tissues are broken, they invite infection and acne may result. They change the normal texture of the skin into a coarse cutaneous fabric.

Blackheads can develop in the early teens, and that is why mothers should teach their little girls to wash their faces with thoroughness, especially at bedtime. A bland soap should be used; the water should be fairly hot; the lather should be pressed into the flesh with light taps of the fingertips. All the suds should be rinsed away, first with warm water, then with cold. This is little daughter's beauty ritual.

For years beauty specialists have used clay packs for the purpose of renovating a dust-laden skin. This treatment can be self-administered at small expense.

From your druggist get a few ounces of kaolin. This is our old friend Fuller's earth, used for cleaning felts and furs, made clean and safe to use.

Place a heaping tablespoonful in a small bowl, add enough witch hazel to form a mixture the consistency of whipped cream. Spread on a clean skin surface. You can use your fingers or a small spatula. Include your neck. Necks have a way of getting darker than faces, and a color divorce between them is no beauty bargain.

Now is your opportunity to relax or to pick up the mystery story. The longer the mask remains on, the better. The usual time in beauty salons is thirty minutes. By that time the mask will have started to flake.

Remove it with tepid water and dry the flesh gently. Get out your favorite massage cream and apply a light film with brisk, tapping movements. The flesh will be fresh and glowing. If the skin is inclined to be oily, apply an astringent with pledgets of cotton.

Queen's Private Life Invaded Says Paper

LONDON (CP) — The Sunday newspaper, the People, said Queen Elizabeth's private life is being invaded by public officials who are fervently hoping she won't have another baby for at least two years.

The mass-circulation pro-labor newspaper said Commonwealth officials are fervently hoping there will be no little brother or sister for Prince Charles and Princess Anne before 1955. Otherwise they see a prospect of the royal tour of Australia and New Zealand being once again interrupted.

"This is a preposterous position for the young queen, who may well desire to add to her family."

The newspaper says the public should be made aware of "the conflict that is rapidly building up between the Queen and the court circle."

Efforts of the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh to modernize the public and private life of royalty were frustrated by court officials.

"They seem determined to make them accept the out-of-date conventions that have surrounded the monarchy for so long. They want to continue the old-fashioned system of engagements planned months in advance and carried out with strict adherence to court rules."

Ladies Auxiliary Q.D.P.A. Holds Christmas Party

The annual Christmas party of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Quinte District Police Association was held recently at the home of Mrs. Jack Balyx, 17 Everett Street.

The living room was tastefully decorated with a lovely Christmas tree.

Everyone had an enjoyable time.

After a short business meeting games were played with Mrs. J. Bland being the prizes. Gifts were then given out from under the tree, Miss Mona Hartley making a jolly Santa Claus. Pictures were also taken of the group. Mrs. Clair Hayes, the president, proposed the toast to the Queen.

Everyone had an enjoyable time.

The next meeting is to be held at the home of Mrs. Peter Thomson early in January, the program for the evening being the election of officers and a card party.

Christmas Concert

Moira — The Moira school teachers, Mrs. Fred Watts and Mrs. Marion McTaggart held at Christmas concert in the church Thursday evening and was well attended by the parents and friends who came to enjoy the treat with them.

Acting as chairman, Mr. Wesley Farrell, welcomed the guests and thanked them for their cooperation and help towards school and Sunday School. A Christmas tree was setup and was followed by a program consisting of recitations, carols, drills, dialogues and a Christmas pageant.

Sr. chorus, "Merry Christmas" and a "Christmas Song"; recitation, "Welcome" by Gordon Adams; play, "Christmas Tea-cosy" by the Juniors was cyptically Old English, where the characters announced themselves and even talked about themselves; carol, recitation, "What the Stocking Said", by Richard Simpson; dialogue by three boys, "Making a Cake"; Jr. song "Up in Santa Land," a drill by the seniors, "Jolly Gipsy Waggon", caused much merriment. Then the Juniors favored with a rhythm band selection, "Up on the Housetops".

"Santa's North Pole Conference" by the seniors, dramatized the families "Christmas in Other Lands". Bradley Lee gave a humorous recitation, "Ma and the Auto". Earl Simpson favored with a solo, "Santa Claus is Coming."

Talking Christmas Tree"

The play, "The Talking Christmas Tree" was quite humorous, and proved a setting point in regard to Christmas Tree decorations; Gena and Gail Lee rendered a lovely duet, "Slumber", Grades 4 and 5 sang "The Night Before Christmas". "A Song of Christmas" was then sung by Norma and Peter Hovinga and Tom Boyd. The boys of grades 6, 7, 8 sang the "Christmas Tree Carol," while Ella Lee posed as the angel in the background.

"O Little Town of Bethlehem" by the intermediate girls with Harry Lewington as soloist, after which the group sang "Let's Keep the Christ in Christmas."

"The Birthday of the King" was the impressive Christmas number. During the telling of the story pictures for the following hymns were displayed: "Silent Night", "Away in a Manger", "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night", "Bethlehem Town", "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear", "Carol, Sweetly Carol."

The flats band rendered the following selections: "Jingle Bells", "Joy to the World", "We Three Kings" and "Away in a Manger."

The program closed with the school singing Willy Claus" "Little Son of Santa Claus". Santa Claus arrived in due time to unload the gaily trimmed Christmas tree, after which Mr. Hillis moved a vote of thanks to Miss M. Huff and pupils for the excellent entertainment.

Collections amounted to $25, of which $12 was given to the Sunday School.

MARMORA

Marmora—The Christmas festival was observed at St. Paul's on Christmas Eve with a carol service at 11.30 succeeded by a choral celebration of Holy Communion at midnight.

The church was decorated with evergreens and flowers. Those on the altar were the gift of Mrs. W. J. Neath in memory of her husband, Horace J. Neath and father, William Nuttall.

Canon J. M. Brownlie officiated there being a large congregation present. He based his Christmas message on Gal. 44, "When the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth His Son," showing that, although Christ fully fulfilled the messianic hopes, He was not universally accepted, but to all many as received Him, to them gave He power to become to sons of God.

The choir effectively rendered the anthem, "While Shepherd's Watched Their Flocks by Night."

MARMORA

Pussy Returns Home After Five Months

MARMORA—The old comic song, "The Cat Came Back", was illustrated in Marmora on December 8th.

"Fluffy", a grey Persian cat, was given by Mrs. Charles Campion to some friends at Petherick's Corners on July 1, and Arlene and Joyce, her two young daughters took farewell of it, as they thought, at the time. They had two other cats to engage their attention and "Fluffy" was seldom remembered. Then it happened on December 6th, that there came to their door a badly battered feline with a gash over one eye that seemed to have passed through much tribulation. The other two fellines seemed surprised and yet sympathetic to note with the members of the Campion household, that it was none other than "Fluffy". After nursing, the cat's life is five years old, is much its former self again and the sisters say very definitely "We are not going to part with it any more".

Miss Annie Cousins, of Belleville, spent Christmas with her sister, Mrs. Thomas McCann and Mr. McCann.

Master Ronald Wells spent Christmas with relatives in Peterborough and visited his mother, who is a patient in Civic Hospital, there.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Jarvis visited Mr. and Mrs. Harold Mumby and family in Port Hope, on Christmas day.

Miss Joan Crawford spent a few days this week with Mr. and Mrs. George Fox at Malone.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Asselline of Belleville, were Christmas guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Aitchison and family at Deloro.

Miss Marian Savage spent Christmas with friends in Toronto.

Mr. Harry Camplon and daughter, Mrs. Leila Lawrence spent Christmas day with Mr. and Mrs. Goldie McInroy at West Huntingdon.

Miss Hilda Taft is spending the Christmas vacation in Kingston, with her mother, Mrs. M. Taft.

MOIRA

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Foster and children were tea hour guests of Mrs. George Foster and Mr. Beverly Foster on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lake were Saturday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Ketcheson.

Mrs. Ray Williams, of Dayton, Ohio, was a Friday caller on his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Blake Ketcheson.

Planes Have Been Setting For Many Fantastic Incidents

By ADELAIDE KERR

NEW YORK (AP) — Airplanes are sometimes the setting for scenes as packed with drama as any mystery thriller.

A bomb explodes a Canadian airliner in mid flight — and six men, a wife — and 25 others — plummet to death. A mild-looking passenger on a plane from a Communist country seizes control of an airliner at pistol point and pilots it to freedom.

An old warplane glides to earth in the southern United States and a dozen aliens without passports vanish in the dark to emerge with new names and lives. In the cushioned seat of a trans-Atlantic airliner dozes a smuggler, who has diamonds hidden in his heels.

Story of Albert Guay

Some of these happenings, which made front pages, chilled the spines of readers. There was the story of Albert Guay, the dapper little Quebec jeweller, who was tired of his wife and in love with a pretty young waitress.

One September day in 1949, Mrs. Guay — whose life was insured for $10,000 — boarded a Canadian airliner. Forty miles from Quebec a bomb exploded in its baggage compartment and the plane crashed, killing all on board. Some time later Guay went to his death on the gallows, convicted of timebombing a plane to murder his wife.

An American airliner might have met a similar fate but the pilot kept his nerve. Just before the plane left Los Angeles, a porter accidentally dropped a bag, which flashed into flame.

At the same moment young John Grant rushed to the ticket window shouting: "Don't let that plane take off; I just put a bag full of gasoline on it."

Grant's wife and two children were on board the plane. He, too, was unhappy at home and in love with an airline stewardess. Grant was sentenced to prison for one to 20 years.

Twenty passengers aboard a Mexican airliner had a closer call last September. Their plane was in flight when a bomb exploded in its baggage compartment. A cool-headed pilot made an emergency landing with all on board safe.

Police said seven of the passengers had been hired for fictitious jobs in Oaxaca, insured for a total of $250,000. Emilio Arellano, an engineer, and singer Paco Sierra, named as beneficiaries of some of the policies, are awaiting trial.

Illegals Smuggler

Immigration agents knew aliens were being smuggled into the U.S. by chartered plane. They long sought Gregorio Simovich, a Russian-born Cuban smuggler, as the kingpin but the Cuban government refused to extradite him.

One day last fall border patrolmen found Simonovich trudging along the runway of an abandoned air field. The unknown plane that dropped him there had disappeared. The Russian was tried for smuggling aliens and sentenced to two years.

Last June three Yugoslav mechanics travelling on a Yugoslav airliner to Trieste, whipped out pistols, took control of the plane and brought it down in central Italy.

The mechanics asked political asylum and remained in Italy.

Not long ago a gem smuggler arrived by plane from Belgium with thousands of dollars worth of diamonds hidden in the hollow handle of a clothes brush. U. S. customs agents knew who he was, but they let him pass; they followed and watched him hand the brush to Adolph Neumann of Montreal and Abraham Hornstein of New York. Then they arrested them.

'Spit Test' May Provide Advance Tip-off to Disease

By FRANK CAREY
Associated Press Science Reporter

ST. LOUIS (AP)—A kind of "spit test" may some day provide an advance tip-off to the oncoming of certain diseases, the American Association for the Advancement of Science was told Friday.

Research on human saliva raises hope for an eventual test that would warn of the "very earliest beginnings" of such ills as hardening of the arteries, arthritis, premature aging and dental disease before any discernible symptoms appear, a woman chemist reported.

Dr. Frances Kraszne, director of the Universal Research Laboratories at Newark, N.J., said the research also opens up new possibilities for advancing man's understanding of these still-battling conditions.

The essence of her report was that certain chemicals which occur in human saliva have an apparent tendency to increase when a person has certain ailments or dental defects. She left the implication that early detection of such an increase —through periodic analysis of saliva—might be a means of forestalling an ailment.

Dr. Kraszne studied the saliva's content of "cholesterol", a white, fatty substance which also occurs in the bile and nerve tissue. She chose cholesterol because, this chemical apparently has some "still unfathomed association" with premature aging, hardening of the arteries, etc.

Peacetime Uses Of Atomic Energy Now Under Way

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—The University of Michigan's memorial phoenix project said Friday it now has under way 94 research studies on peacetime uses of atomic energy.

In the last year the studies disclosed new uses of atomic energy ranging from a new method of distinguishing between cretins (babies without thyroid function) and Mongoloid idiots to new ways to kill trichinosis in pork.

Dr. Ralph A. Sawyer, director of the studies, said in a progress report that a new technique was found by which radioactive iodine is used to measure the thyroid activity of newborn infants. By this method the cretins can be distinguished from the Mongoloid idiot, whose condition is in no way related to thyroid activity. As a result, treatment can be started without delay.

Dr. Sawyer said a study of radiation shows it can be used to kill bacteria to preserve foods, sterilize drugs, change fermentation processes and other processes.

Allied Raiders Kill 53 Chinese Near Panmunjon

SEOUL (AP) — Allied raiders pushed through a freezing snow on the western front today and killed or wounded an estimated 53 Chinese Communists.

The Eighth Army said the Allied unit engaged the Reds in a 12-minute clash near the truce-site city of Panmunjon in near-zero temperatures.

A brief fight erupted nearby when a Chinese unit of unknown size stabbed unsuccessfully at Allied positions.

The Fifth Air Force said fighter-bombers hit Red front-line areas in clearing weather.

The Eighth Army said a Chinese platoon attacked on the eastern front south of Anchor hill and defending troops killed or wounded 13 Reds.

Elsewhere along the freezing, 155 mile battle front, Allied patrols encountered large groups of Red defenders.

One Allied patrol ran into a group of 60 Chinese near Chorwon on the central front. The Allies called for artillery, which killed or wounded 30 Communists.

Another United Nations patrol brought an hour-long skirmish with 30 Reds near Heartbreak ridge on the eastern front. An estimated seven Reds were killed.

The Fifth Air Force said B-26 bombers destroyed about 40 Communist vehicles Friday before snow and rain grounded them.

The air force weekly summary said three Allied war planes were lost over North Korea last week.

Toronto Rookie Plays Sensational Game In 2nd National League Start

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The senior "B" hockey war breaks out in two fronts tonight with the Oshawa Trackers being the guests of the Glen Rays here and the Orillia Foxtiles visiting the Foxes in a battle for the cellar spot.

The Glens are rested and recovered from the holiday, according to team captain Vern Geyer and are ready for what should be a top-notch battle with the loop-leading Trackers. The Oshawans are but four points in front of the fourth place Glens and with the teams scrilling down for the tough grind between now and playoff time, there should be some neat puck-chasing around these parts the next five or six weeks.

The Glens will probably be without the services of Jud Seesmark, defenceman, who suffered a leg injury in the last game with Stouffville. The injured member is progressing all right, but it is doubtful if Jud sees action this evening.

The Glens handed the Trackers a neat if not gaudy 7-4 defeat in their first clash here on December 2nd, and the Trackers haven't forgotten that setback. They will be at full strength tonight and they'll go all out to snatch a win. They can't afford to lose for Stouffville and Kingston are snapping at their heels with the Glens breathing down these teams' necks. It should be a honey of a battle.

Meanwhile Don Barrett's juniors trek to Cobourg where they take on the Jays of the lakeshore town in a junior "B" tilt. The Hawks had their troubles aligned, but good, by the Peterborough Triple Links on their last outing, and they're still smarting under the defeat. They will be gunning for their ninth victory in twelve starts tonight. Incidentally the Lindsay Wheelers defrocked the Kingston Vics from third spot in the junior standing with a 4-3 victory in Kingston on Saturday night. The Lindsay kids staged a terrific third-period rally that netted them three of their four goals and the victory. Penalties hurt the Vics in the third heat with the Lindsay goalie Truax rising to some sort of hockey heights with a sensational last-ditch stand.

PRO FOOTBALL

Had a fifty-yard seat via television yesterday to see the Detroit Lions - Cleveland Browns world's professional football championship battle, and brother these pros really play for keeps. They smash at everything and everybody in sight and one slight error looms up like the Passing State Build.' flag at night. The Lions outlasted even a Browns' fumble in the last quarter in what proved to be the turning point of the game. There were plenty of things to thrill about, especially Doak Walker's 67-yard gallop for the Lions second TD, with the work of Lions' quarterback Bobby Layne being terrific. One big disappointment was the placekicking of Lou Groza, Cleveland's star booter. He missed three in a row, something of a record. The game was played in freezing temperature and even the visitors shuddered when the Brobdingnagians of the gridiron plunged about-find into what appeared to be solid sod but in reality was hard frozen ground. Over 50,000 saw the fray but from our seat there appeared to be plenty of empty pews in the end zones.

AT LONG LAST!

Here's something for the wrestling faithful. The Masked Horror, who is as popular with the enthusiast herehouts as a well known striped kitty at a strawberry social, is no longer a mystery. He met his well-deserved fate, men, in a scramble with another hooded horror, the "Red Mask", of Toronto, the other night, and when promptly revealed as Ken Kroll. He is known, at Frank Valois, out of Montreal, as the guesswork is all over. The closest the guessers came to the "Hood" was a Montreal pachyderm, but that was all. Now you can start guessing all over again.

TRENT VALLEY HOCKEY!

The Trent Valley Hockey League swings into action tonight, according to the schedule released by Secretary Dick Bridgman. Twelve teams have entered the two-section loop with Havelock, Hastings, Lakefield, Norwood, Campbellford and Marmora in the northern section and Point Anne, Stirling, Frankford, Trenton, No. 4 Repair Depot, RCAF and Wellington in the southern section. Three games are scheduled for tonight with Point Anne going to No. 4 Repair Depot, Trenton at Wellington and Stirling at Frankford. The regular schedule will be published as soon as released.

The league has laid down some player rules that should stop unnecessary packing of clubs. Each team will be allowed to sign 20 players to include spare goalies as to replacements will be allowed for any injured players. At least five players signed must be bonafide residents of the community which they represent in the league. Also, it says here, the names of five local players must appear on the referee's report and if any are not present, the team must play shorthanded. No club may sign more than five players who played OHA senior "B" hockey after January 1st, 1953. Senior and intermediate players who play in OHA games after January 1st, 1953, may not participate. Junior "B" players may play in both leagues if they so wish.

Belleville and Peterborough have been declared "open territory" and players from either entries may sign with the team of their choice without the necessity of a release. If a player from these cities appears on a line-up he becomes that club's property until he secures a written release from the manager.

Nesterenko, Marlies Junior, Scores Two, Helps With Third As Leafs Blank Bruins 3-0

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A 19-year-old Toronto collegiate student named Eric Nesterenko practically wrapped up the victory single-handed as Toronto Maple Leafs blanked Boston Bruins 3-0 in a National Hockey League game Saturday night.

The rookie forward, playing his second game in Leaf livery, scored two goals and set up the third for his linemate Gord Hannigan.

The 190-pound Nesterenko plays most of his hockey with Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, a Leaf farm club. He played with Leafs last Wednesday when they shut out Montreal Canadiens 2-0.

Plays One More

Under the three-game lend-lease arrangement which the NHL has with amateur clubs, Nesterenko will play one more game with the Leafs.

Back in action Sunday afternoon, he scored a goal as Marlboros registered a 4-3 victory over Galt Black Hawks.

The almost-forgotten man in the last two Leaf games, both shutouts, was goalie Harry Lumley, who scored his third shutout of the season.

Detroit Red Wings also called on help from the minors during the week-end as they stretched Eastern's lead to five points with a 3-2 tie in Montreal Saturday and a 7-1 win over Boston in Detroit Sunday.

Glen Hall of Edmonton Flyers of the Western Hockey League replaced the injured Terry Sawchuk in the Detroit net for both games and distinguished himself in the Saturday tie by handling 25 shots while Gerry McNeil of Montreal only stopped 15. Detroit also used Marcel Bonin of St. Boniface Mers of the American Hockey League and Jim Hay from Edmonton in both games.

Hawks In 2nd

Second place changed hands twice during the week-end. Montreal moved one up on Chicago Black Hawks Saturday, but the Hawks took over Sunday with a 6-2 win from the tail-end New York Rangers in a bruising game.

In the Detroit-Montreal game, Glen Skov and Red Sinclair scored for Detroit, Doug Harvey and Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion notched Canadien goals.

The Red Wings went on a small scoring spree Sunday. Gordie Howe Ted Lindsay and Marty Pavelich teamed home two goals each and Red Kelly notched the other. Howe increased his lead in the scoring race to five points during the week-end. He now has 41. Penticton Vees' goalie Jim Shutter for rookie Glen Hall.

At New York Jimmy Peters scored twice in the Chicago win. George Gee, Scotty Bodaur, Fred Hucul and Gerry Couture added others. Nick Mickoski, Wally Hergesheimer and Nell Strain scored for Rangers.

No games are scheduled tonight.

Detroit Lions Outplay Cleveland To Win Professional Grid Title

CLEVELAND (CP) — Detroit Lions Sunday won their first U.S. professional football championship in 17 years, outplaying and outscoring Cleveland Browns 17-7 before 50,934 fans in the National League playoff.

The favored Lions scored touchdowns in the second and third quarters and a field goal in the final period while the Browns, pro finalists in the last six seasons, got one touchdown in the third quarter.

Never Headed

Detroit was never headed, capitalizing on a poor punt by Horace Gillom to drive from midfield in eight plays for the first touchdown. Quarterback Bobby Layne went over on a plunge from the one-yard line.

Veteran halfback Doak Walker, the lightest offensive back on the field, scored the first touchdown of the season on a brilliant 67-yard run in the third quarter to make it 14-0 for the Lions.

The Browns snapped back in the next four minutes to drive 80 yards with Harry (Chick) Jagade scoring their only touchdown.

Pat Harder, Detroit place-kicking specialist, who converted both his team's touchdowns, completed the scoring with a 37-yard field goal.

Referee in Statue of Liberty Role In Penalty-Riddled Junior Battle

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fearless Jack Shrubb, 14, in his second business, is about to referee a fight instead of hockey at once.

The Brockville Hockey Association Junior A middleweight expert soon may trade with his fiancee in the after- as a cross-country hitchhiker. Saturday night with Bill Ward's Hawks bowed 4-3 to Toronto St. Michael's in Galt.

Shrubbie was so busy handing out 11 majors and five misconducts between benches that he only had time to assess 13 minor penalties in the whole game. Wards

Other Saturday games were shutouts. Windsor Spitfires moved into sixth place for Memorial Cup by Biltmores 3-0 in Windsor. Toronto Marlboros, without Eric Nesterenko defeated Oshawa Generals 5-2.

In the Sunday doubleheader in Toronto, Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen, currently falling the parade, took advantage of St. Mike's weakened condition to win 7-2. Then Marlboros slipped past the Black Hawks 3-2. This time Nesterenko was on hand and scored a goal.

Quebec Citadelles had a profitable week-end in the Quebec Junior League. They split 4-4 in a first-place tie with Montreal Canadiens' Junior Canadiens. Paying holders of last place, 7-4 Saturday and 7-3 Sunday. Three Rivers Reds are tenth.

Between rests in the penalty box, Jack Caffery scored twice and Bill Dineen, Ed Fiala and Bill Lee notched singles for St. Michael's Saturday night. Ken Wharram punched home two for Galt and Ed Kwiatkoski scored the other.

Parker MacDonald, Wally Maxwell, Eric Bendo, Tom McCarthy and Bill Hardy each scored once in the Marlboro shutout.

The Windsor goals were Bill Brown tallied twice and Marlin McAlendin added the third.

Gerry Collins and Graham Joyce each scored two for Kitchener Sunday, Leven Tennant and Buddy Horns accounted for the others.

Jim Logan and Paul Knox scored the St. Michael's goals.

Marlboro goals Sunday were by Gene Kidd, Parker MacDonald, Louis Bendo and Nesterenko. Ed Slesynger, John McMurray and Hillary Menard were Galt marksmen.

Michel Labelle scored three for Quebec Saturday, and Cyr, Camille Henri, Bertrand Lepage and Jean-Guy Talbot added the total to seven. Claude Besupre, Ken Mosdell and Brian McCann counted for the Royals.

Henri and Labelle each notched two in the Sunday game. Others for Citadelles were fired by Roland Leclerc, Jean-Guy Gignac and Gabby Alain. Orlis Gagnon, Bowman and Bob Laforest scored Sunday goals for the Royals.

Mercs, Indians in Hop-Skip-Jump Battle for Senior Loop Top Spot

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stratford Indians last first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series to Owen Sound Mercurys Friday night but snatched it back Saturday.

And Owen Sound surge closed a five-point gap last week and after a 4-3 win over Chatham Friday night held a single-point lead.

Stratford downed Brantford Redmen 4-3 Saturday to regain the lead while Owen Sound lost 3-2 to Sarnia Sailors. Sarnia gets another chance to pick up points tonight when they visit winless Hamilton Tigers.

Kitchener topped Hamilton 11-5 Saturday night while goalie Al Bennett turned away 45 shots compared to 13 saves by Ed Hurley for the losers.

The Stratford win came on goals by Dinny Flanagan, Billy Flick, Steve Dejordy and Bill Walker. Wally Hastiuk scored all three for Brantford.

Chuck Glash, Vern Gardiner and Ollie Haddon scored Sarnia's winning goals. Mike Bukachenski and Doug Gillespie tallied for Owen Sound.

In the lack-lustre effort staged by Kitchener and Hamilton Harry Pavlin, Harvey Jacklin and Bill Mitchell scored two goals each. Art Hurst, Don Rope, Charlie Brooker, Don Bauer and Jack McKenzie fired singles. Bill Batchelor notched two for the Tigers and Bill Hammond scored the other.

Don Gimson, former coach of Athil Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds fired by the executive for what was termed causing trouble among the players, opened a new career as coach of the Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians Sunday.

He got off to a bad start. North Bay Trappers, after dropping a 7-4 decision to the Greyhounds in overtime, Saturday night, trounced the Indians 9-2 Sunday. Sudbury Wolves are still in first place with a two-point lead. Greyhounds are three points down to North Bay and then the Indians.

Ron Pozzo scored three for the Greyhounds Saturday. Ron Lay notched two and Chuck and Jimmy Johnston each scored once. Vic Jackson with two, Don Hogan and George Cosselin were North Bay scorers.

Frankie Tingler fired two for the Trappers Sunday. George Cosselin, Vic Jackson, Bo Elik and Jack Leckie scored the others. Laurie Peterson, Gordie Kerr and Jim Farrell starred Indian goals.

The Greyhounds visit North Bay Trappers for the only game tonight.

Miss Storey also scored a triple win, taking the girls' A title by defeating Helen Day of Stratford 11-4, 15-1, the girls' B title by tripping Dale Perrin of Kitchener 11-4, 11-0, and then combining with Helen Waldner of Kitchener in the girls' doubles 15-11, 15-13.

Aussie Temis Stars Crush Yankees In Sensational Davis Cup Display

BY GAYLE TALBOT

ADELAIDE (AP) — Australia's two tennis tigers—Frank Sedgman and Ken McGregor—today pounced on the rug from under America's Davis Cup team in a hurry.

They'll play out the final three matches only because all the tickets have been sold and the rules demand it.

But after today's one-sided exhibition there's little reason to think for Uncle Sam's lads is a faint glimmer of hope.

First Sedgman delivered one of the heaviest salvoes ever seen in top play as he opened the series with a crushing 6-3, 6-4, 6-3 victory over the United States captain, Vic Seixas of Philadelphia.

Then McGregor work down young Tony Trabert under a searing sun and finally trounced him by scores of 13-9, 6-4, 6-1.

The first set between McGregor and Trabert ranks as a classic duel between two great servers. But once Trabert wavered and lost his delivery in the first game, it was all over. From there on McGregor was unbeatable.

Trabert was so frazzled that just before he reached the dressing room he wavered in his stride. An alert ambulance man guided him the rest of the way.

The long struggle in heat of more than 90 degrees was a tough experience for the Oakland youngster, playing his first hard-core competitive match in a year.

The only argument heard in the throng of 15,000 was whether Sedgman or McGregor played greater tennis.

It only could be assumed they would team up to smack down Seixas and Trabert in Tuesday's doubles. In that event, the Australians could be expected to permit the other two members of their squad—Mervyn Rose and Lewis Hoad—to close out the singles in the concluding singles Wednesday.

It is understood that both Sedgman and McGregor will announce they are turning pro after the Davis Cup bout next Thursday night. Their displays today should do them no financial harm when they begin work with Jack Kramer's troupe early next month.

In the opinion of Alrick Man, junior manager of the American team, the long-legged McGregor was the best man on the court today.

Though Sedgman was at his brilliant best in turning back Seixas without really extending himself, it was McGregor who was Aussie's No. 1 player—who filled the eye. His service and net play against Trabert was spectacular all the way and his ground strokes at times bordered on the miraculous.

Seixas lost mainly because his soft offset backhand couldn't stand up under the hammering Sedgman gave it. Sedgman moved in on the net almost at will throughout and Seixas seldom got the ball past him.

Flyers Get He'p

EDMONTON (CP)—Coach Rod Fohr of Edmonton Flyers of the Western Hockey League Sunday night announced the team has obtained two recruits.

Goalie Lorne Worsley was obtained on loan from Saskatoon Quakers while Glen Hall is subbing for injured Terry Sawchuk, regular netminder for Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League.

Defenceman Leon Bouchard has been obtained on loan from Montreal Canadiens to bolster the Flyer rearguard.

East Underdogs Defeat West In All-Star Game

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The underdog Eastern college all-stars, led by Hinsdel Tom O'Connell, smashed three passing records Saturday as they upset the favored West 21-20 in the 28th annual East-West football game.

A crowd of 62,000 fans in rain-drenched Kezar Stadium saw the great Illinois quarterback set records for passes completed and passing yardage. One of his receivers, Paul Dekker, Michigan State, broke the mark for passes caught.

The all-America studded West had lined up as a six-point favorite.

The Eastern team came from behind to win with a 75-yard aerial and ground drive in the final minutes of the game. O'Connell threw the passes among the 21 he completed for his record—in the march through the line.

With the ball on the five-yard line, he handed off to halfback Bill Wightkin. Wightkin drove around right end to score. Bob Hanor of Villanova made his conversion score perfect for the 21 to three for three—as he booted the winning point.

Southern 'Grey' Trims 'Yank Blue' In Annual Tilt

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—Dixie all-stars, led by Auburn signal-calling of Ray Graves of Texas A. and M. and the plunging of fullback Leroy Zimmerman of Santa Clara, punched the Yankees' Blue Saturday and won the annual Blue-Gray football game, 26-7.

It was the 10th victory for the south in 14 games.

The Yankee passing team of Tom Marchibroda of Detroit and Leo D'Achille of Indiana was ineffective much of the time against a tight defence.

But Marchibroda, top United States distance-passer, was the only really dangerous weapon the Blues had. His long aerials accounted for the northerners' lone touchdown.

Graves accounted for one of the south's four touchdowns. Lewis Carpenter of Arkansas got two and Labat the other. Ed Miodzurzwski of Williams and Mary and Charlie Harding of Virginia each quarterbacked two conversions.

DeSpirito Boots Home Three, Eight to Go

HAVANA (AP)—Tony DeSpirito booted home three winners Sunday at Oriental Park race track to boost his total riding victories for 1952 to 321 and leave him eight short of a world record.

The 16-year-old Lawrence, Mass., apprentice jockey now returns to Tropical Park, Miami, where he has three more days in which to equal or break the record of 328 winners in a year. The mark was set by Walter Miller in 1906 and equalled in 1950 by Willie Shoemaker and Joe Culmone. The latter also rode in Havana in an effort to break the long-standing mark.

DeSpirito took the opening race aboard Mebob in a 5½-furlong spring. His other winners were with Khayyams Kid in the fourth race and Abergy in the sixth.

At Miami Saturday, DeSpirito rode two winners on the nine-race program at Tropical Park.

Bears Beat Bisons Twice in Row; Tied for Top

Hershey Bears took a pair of week-end American Hockey League games from Buffalo Bisons and moved into a first-place tie with Cleveland Barons. Hershey won 5-3 Saturday and 7-2 Sunday.

At Buffalo Sunday, George Sullivan scored three goals to pace the Bears' attack.

At Providence, Zellio Toppazzini scored two early and winning goals while his team was shorthanded to give Providence Reds an overtime 3-2 decision over Pittsburgh Hornets.

At St. Louis, the Flyers rolled to a 7-4 victory over Cleveland striking for three goals in 46 seconds early in the second period.

DETROIT (AP)—Elmer Lakso, 162, Youngstown, O., won a split decision over Ken Hohner, 163, London, Ont., in the main-event feature bout at Motor City Arena Saturday night. Dave Lattice, 143½, Detroit, won a four-round decision over Curley Moulton, 139½, Sarnia, Ont.

Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Meet the new Sonny Tufts.

The actor, once known as Hollywood's party boy, is back in town after spending 18 months abroad.

He says he's through with the party life and the elbow-bending that goes with it.

"Sure, I used to drink," he admitted, "but I did it just for the fun of it. I can remember executives who called me why I didn't do like some other stars did. When these guys wanted to get off steam, they'd take a couple of cases up to a far-off mountain cabin and have a bender.

"I could never see that. And I wasn't like some others I could mention who always started flights when they got loaded. My trouble was that when I got a couple of cocktails under my belt, I wanted to have fun. If I were at Hedrick's, I'd know all the boys in the band, and I'd get up and play the piano and sing. I guess this gave people the wrong impression."

"It was a series of bad pictures," he explained. "In fact, I had only one good picture while I was at Paramount. That was my first one, 'So Proudly We Hail.'"

Tufts' star hit a slack period after his departure from Paramount, but his career is getting into high gear again. This is largely due to the fact that he pulled up stakes and headed for England.

He toured the British Isles for 30 weeks in a play.

"It was a great experience," he said. "The play was too weak to go into London but the critics all made a 'personal triumph.'"

He also made an English film, "The Gift Horse," a big production by the Wolff brothers, who made "African Queen" and "Moulin Rouge." Sonny will return to appear in another film for the same producers next spring.

Meanwhile, he is resuming his Hollywood career. He is currently playing opposite Barbara Payton in "Run to the Hills."

Capsule review: "My Cousin Rachel" is a moody period study of evil and intrigue on the English coast. Reminiscent of "Rebecca" and "Suspicion," it piles event on event to a cumulative effect of suspense and intrigue.

There are some inadequacies. The ending does not fulfil the promise of the rest of the film, and the moviegoer must guess the secret of Rachel's death. It is well played by Olivia Dehavilland and Richard Burton, a dramatic find.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook is, according to the stars.

FOR TUESDAY, DEC. 30, 1952:

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Wise scope of fine configurations; excellent possibilities for you keen thinkers. However, take it sensibly easy for best results.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—With all your talents you should not neglect to thank God for all blessings. The world needs prayers, good people. Do your share.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—Abundance of good influences for business and personal interests; usual duties. A happier day if you start it with smiling disposition.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Avoid restless, over-anxious attitude this complex day. Make work more fun, not hard unpleasant duty.

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—A healthy outlook for all who act within reason, do their duty in honest, intelligent manner. Veiled lures of endeavor highly sponsored.

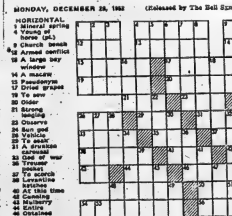
August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Your outlook spells fine opportunity to move forward to better income, higher class of action, attain what you have longed to achieve.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—There are prospects of much stimulus in day's forecast. But be on guard, control emotions, make every hour count.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Opportunity is knocking at your door this favorably inclined day. Good period for work you have been putting off, letters you were going to write, etc.

November 23 to December 22 (Sagittarius)—Opportune period to catch up with neglected obligations, promised favors. You may need some assistance, so seek it wisely.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn)—You may need at this time a change in activity, company, etc. Above all, don't do it irrationally.



January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius) — Encouraging for mental work, promotional and advertising activities. Study secretive activities from within and without before sanctioning. Day can really be a happy one.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — Ordinarily difficult tasks would confuse, cause anxiety; but your spirit, linked with favorable aspects, can overwhelm obstacles. Satisfying achievement should follow.

YOU BORN TODAY: Are generally full of ambition, vibrant and eager to "get going." Have high appreciation of true business or professional values; also of personal possibilities — before you, and will not hesitate to take advantage. You can succeed and reach great heights in any field of endeavor. Birthdate of: Alfred E. Smith, great N.Y. statesman; Rudyard Kipling, famed author.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop and ma were both opening Christmas cards at breakfast, on account of them all being addressed to Mr. and Mrs. William Potts, and pop said, all of a woman you hardly knew rushed up to you in the street and give you a big hug and kiss, how would you feel?

I'd be shocked and embarrissed, for long aakes, ma said, and pop said, they'd be, if I feel when I read some of these flowery greetings sized with strange signiance. Now this one for instance, "All my loving thoughts with you throughout this Christmastide." It's sized Marvella Grieg. Who the doose is Marvella Grieg? he said.

Oh, she's that freind of Maud Hewes. I think, ma said, and pop said, When you fling out dont tell me.

And he opened another one, saying, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Chidwick, Junior?

We met them at the Hintons, ma said, and pop said, I'm glad we met them somewhere, they hope all our wishes will come true in the mist of health and prosperity.

Oh dear, I hope we sent them one, ma said, and pop said, I hope we sent them half a dozen. Now here's one that I approve of, he said, and read it out. Its good wish, I'll read it to-you, he said.

Which he did being, We wish you well from head to feel, So till the year nay you'll look nice. As you saunter down the street. Well, it is quite a novel idea in an unconventional way, I suppose ma said. Who sent it to us? she said, and pop said, Why, it's signed, The Nobby Clearers.

And he let me oeen the rest and left for his office.

No Hunting Fatalities in Alta. For First Time in Many Years

By GRAHAM TROTTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta and Saskatchewan have closed the books on one of their biggest hunting seasons. A highlight of the Alberta season was that there were no hunting fatalities for the first time in years.

Although complete figures are not yet available, Alberta reports game hunting licences, except for non-resident big-game hunters, were sold than in any other year. Sale of licences to resident hunters alone will top the 40,000 mark. Only four years ago the total was 27,000.

In Saskatchewan, it is estimated there were about 50,000 resident and non-resident bird hunters and between 25,000 and 35,000 big-game hunters.

The over-all take in Alberta may be down because of the mild fall and early winter which produced little or no snow. This made birds and animals harder to hunt. Saskatchewan licences reported the same difficulty.

Biggest worry of Alberta game officials at the moment is the unusually large number of ducks still in the province because of this mild weather. If they stay too long many of the ducks may be too thin to make the long annual migration to the southern states for the winter.

Ideal breeding conditions resulting from heavy spring and summer rains helped swell Alberta's duck population. Brood counts—young hatched in the province—increased 50per cent over last year.

Fur Season Opens

Fur trapping is getting into full swing. Close to 200 trappers are following a network of trapplines covering a approximately 150,000 square miles in Saskatchewan's northland. Alberta has an estimated 3,000 trappers, who last year trapped more than 2,000,000 wild animals valued at $1,765,000.

There is lots of fur to trap in both provinces. Prices are reported attractive in Alberta although in Saskatchewan they are expected to hold up fairly well, with initial prices slightly above average.

A big muskrat salvage operation is in progress in Saskatchewan, aimed at harvesting a surplus population which has been frozen shallow waters unless harvested soon.

Pope Appoints First Cardinal From India

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican announced today that Archbishop Valeriano Gracias of Bombay in India has been made a College of Cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church.

He takes the place vacated Sunday by the death of Carlo Agostini, patriarch of Venice. He will be India's first cardinal.

The surprise announcement of his appointment emphasized Pope Pius' determination to bring the College to its full strength of 70 members at the consistory here tomorrow. The college has not had full membership in two centuries.

Agostini, 64, died in Venice after having been ill for some time with leukemia. He was to have received the traditional red hat of a prince of the Roman Catholic Church at a consistory Jan. 12 along with 23 other designated cardinals. One of these is the archbishop of Montreal, Rt. Rev. Paul-Emile Leger.

The Pope aimed at a "plenum"—full college—when he created 24 prelates in 1946, but the death of Pietro Cardinal Boetta two weeks before the consistory prevented it.

Doctors Discover 20-Inch Tail On Man's Spine

ANKARA, Turkey (AP)—Hasan Yildirim, 21-year-old Turkish army conscript, was under observation today by doctors who said they discovered a 20-inch tail growing from the base of his spine.

Yildirim, a native of Anatolia's Erzurum province, said he has had the tail since birth. Doctors are considering surgery.

Two pictures of Yildirim, displaying his 20-inch tail, were published today in the Istanbul paper of the newspaper Vatan in Istanbul.

Believe Commonwealth Plans Mark New Initiative Toward Solving Trade, Financial Ills

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Britain and the sterling countries of the Commonwealth enter the new year committed to a broad new program of economic development designed ultimately to put the pound sterling on equal terms with the dollar.

In one of the major developments of 1952, premiers and finance ministers from nine countries including Canada, gathered in London early in December for what was described as the most determined effort yet made to strengthen the financial position of the sterling area. After a two-week meeting, the conference issued a 2,500-word communique which included these pronouncements:

1. The Commonwealth countries agreed on a "plan" to create conditions for expanding world trade. Although the nature of the plan was not specified, the significant point was that the countries had agreed on expansion rather than further restrictionism.

Co-operation Sought

2. Efforts would be made to seek co-operation with other trading areas. This implied the belief that dollar-sterling balance must be sought in concert with the two other major trading groups, the United States and Western Europe. Plans for a world economic conference were mooted at the Commonwealth talks but little by December it was said such a gathering is unlikely to be held.

3. Commonwealth countries agreed to follow economic policies designed to curb inflation. This appeared to be in line with repeated Canadian appeals for sterling area countries to live within their means. Finance Minister Douglas Abbott, one of the leading Canadian delegates, was understood to have felt that the conference came closer to a realistic appreciation of the Canadian viewpoint than any similar post-war meeting.

4. Plans were outlined for an intensified drive for development within the sterling area, particularly in under-developed countries, to save dollars and increase dollar earning. Independently of the conference, a Commonwealth finance corporation was set up in London's financial district, with limited capital and borrowing powers, to investigate development projects.

Chairman of the committee organizing the corporation, closely supported by the Bank of England and leading London financial interests, is 81-year-old Sir Edward Peacock, a Toronto parson's son and native of Glengarry, Ont., who became one of the most powerful financial figures in London after quitting his teacher's job in Toronto just after the turn of the century.

Canadians Optimistic

The communique was in general terms, not easily summarized. But members of the Canadian delegation, headed by Prime Minister St. Laurent, were apparently united in their belief that the conference opened to mark a new initiative in Commonwealth financial affairs.

That is to say, the Canadian ministers and officials felt that in stressing sterling "self-help," progressive removal of trade restrictions and a desire to create the conditions for multilateral trade, the Commonwealth was supporting the right aims and principles.

In general, the Canadian thesis was that the sterling countries had decided to turn their backs on the tempting idea of a closed sterling area, protected by quotas and controls, and had thus escaped the danger of splitting the free world into hostile dollar and sterling blocs.

The December conference was the second major Commonwealth financial meeting during the year. In January, Britain called the "crisis" conference at which she and her sterling area partners applied severe import restrictions to try to halt a drain on the area's gold and dollar reserves.

Trade Declined

By these restrictions and related measures, the sterling countries sought to be in balance with the rest of the world by the end of 1952. This was achieved before the date set, but the dollars that flowed into the Bank of England were obtained on a shrinking volume of trade. Even then the gold and dollar reserves at year's end totalled only some $1,900,000,000.

For Britain, it was financially an uneven and confusing year. It opened with the dollar reserves draining away swiftly in an atmosphere of crisis. Then the import restrictions decided on at the January conference of finance ministers began to take effect, and by midsummer the run on the sterling area had practically stopped.

But there were some less encouraging signs. Industrial production dropped for the first time in the post-war years. There were pockets of unemployment in some industries, caused by the import cuts.

As the year ended the main problem remained—how to correct the strain on the sterling area caused by the financial pre-eminence of the United States.

Couple Plays Hide-and-Seek, Is Fatal Game

LONDON (Reuters) — Airman Jack S. Mahoney, 23, burned to death today in his apartment at a U.S. air base during a game of hide-and-seek with his young English bride.

The airman locked himself in the bedroom to hide from his 20-year-old Beryl. A few minutes later, she saw smoke coming from under the door.

She tried vainly to break down the door, crying: "Okay, Jack. Open the door."

A neighbor heard her cries, ran into the apartment and broke down the door of the flaming bedroom. But dense smoke prevented him from rescuing Mahoney.

FOUR DEATHS BY GAS

VANCOUVER (CP)—In a 3½-hour period Saturday four men were found dead in gas-filled dwellings and a fifth man died when a gas heater used up the oxygen supply in his room. Their deaths increased to 75 the number of gas fatalities in Vancouver this year, seven of the victims having succumbed during the Christmas holidays.

Close Liaison Between RCR And RCHA 'Abel' Battery Seen

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

IN KOREA (CP) — Another chapter was added recently to the close association between the Royal Canadian Regiment and the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery's "Able" battery.

The two outfits say they've fought together ever since they were first formed in the days of the Riel rebellion. The RCR says that every action it has fought throughout its history—the Boer war and both world wars — has been supported by "Able" battery, now commanded by Maj. Gerry Keeler of Winnipeg.

When Lt.-Col. Peter Bingham of Petawawa brought his 1st battalion of the RCR to Korea last April he drew the ties closer still by inviting the gunners to wear the RCR's cipher and crown on their guns and vehicles.

For months in the RCR command post, from which he directs his guns, Keeler has pressed Bingham to spend a day with the battery.

During a recent quiet spell Bingham accepted, set a day and it became the deadline for what battery officers describe as the most intense application of spit and polish in its history.

Knowing they were to be inspected by the C.O. of a regiment famed for its "shining height" brass, the gunners had everything tiddly for the event. Even thumb tacks on the map boards were polished.

While big guns roared in the background, Bingham inspected the battery. He inspected every man, fore and aft, then complimented them on the parade.

After going through the gun positions he fired the battery at a target described as "enemy movement."

The association between the infantry and the battery is strengthened every time exchanges police between them.

Almost every man in the battery has had a 24-hour period with the infantry in the line. Gunners relieve the infantry, who spend the same period in the gun positions. They get to know one another's job and their mutual dependence.

GARAGE, BARN BURNED

BRANTFORD (CP)—Loss was estimated at $5,000 in a blaze Sunday which destroyed a garage and a barn on the farm of B. M. Monroe, Brantford district. Most of the contents of the two buildings including 400 laying hens and tires valued at $1,000 were lost in the blaze.

SAVE CHOKING CHILD

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—A doctor and firemen used an inhalator for 30 minutes Saturday night to save the life of a seven-year-old boy who nearly suffocated during a meal. Paul MacPherson was eating supper when he suddenly gasped for breath. His parents called for help when they realized that food had clogged his wind-pipe.

Wish our Forests a Happy New Year
The beautiful forests of Ontario, which provide so much pleasure and contribute so much to the economy and welfare of our province deserve a New Year's wish and a New Year's resolution.
Let us resolve to keep forest fires in mind this coming year . . . and to keep them out of our forests. 80% of the forest fires are caused by human carelessness. Only by constant care, watchfulness, and training can we cut down this useless and costly loss.

Reeve Brown submitted the petition signed by the people of the north begging the company not to forget them. Godfrey looked them over, and was impressed. Curly Brown said that, as reeve of the united townships, he was prepared to offer the company a free site for its terminus, and in addition he would personally clear up any question of right-of-way.

"That, sire," he concluded, "is the sum total of what we have to offer you. We have no money, we cannot offer you a bonus."

President Godfrey listened attentively to Curly's proposition before answering.

"Gentlemen," he said in his most gracious manner, "I cannot promise you anything at the present time. You will lay your proposition before the board at an early meeting. You must fully understand, however, that as I have already stated, the purpose of this railway is to link the mines to the new docks at Bellevue. What it would cost us to extend our lines another thirty miles is something that we have not figured on. After our board meets and after we have discussed matters fully I will get in touch with you, and inform you of any decision we make."

On the way home the next day, so that three-man delegation Curly Brown was the most optimistic.

"The railway company is going to be a hard nut to crack," Banker Northcott was saying over and over again.

"Did you hear that?" Matt Hawkins questioned, "its going to be tough, real tough."

"That may be so," Curly spoke up, "but, there's a way to do it. I'll be back to county council next week and while I'm in town I'm going to be the board at the entrance to the fox's den, the wolf at the settler's door. I'm going to hound George Godfrey until he decides that the only way to get rid of me is to give me what I ask. Further, I won't say another word to him about his railway, if he wants to talk railway to me, I'll listen. And I'm going to convince him before I'm through with him that his company will be making the mistake of its very life if it does not build its line into the Depot. Yes, gentlemen, leave President George Godfrey to me, and to me alone. And I think I'm going to like it better that way."

Naturally the people of the north were much disappointed when the committee brought in its report. But among them was one man who wasn't going to let a little thing like that get him down.

In his Echo, Jack Halder reminded his readers that big things are not accomplished in a day. "One step won't take you very far," he explained, "but a series of steps might well take one around the world." The first step towards interesting the railway company in the Depot and district had been taken, other steps must follow.

"Leave it to Reeve Curly Brown," the editor advised, "Curly will lead the way. Give him time and he'll clear the way for all obstacles."

The morning that Curly Brown left for county council, the county road foreman informed him that his gang would be tearing up the village streets and putting in the drain pipe that day. And asked where were those posts for the street lights. Curly took him in behind Belanger's store, showed him the posts, told him where he wanted them placed. The lamps were already in Belanger's store and Billy Tough was to look after them and keep them locked up.

President Godfrey's office was on the ground floor in the corner of a brick block close to the county buildings in Bellevue. On the evening of his arrival in town, Curly accompanied his father-in-law for a stroll down town. And just in casual conversation, he learned a great deal of the life, habits and characteristics of the railway president that were to stand him in good stead later on.

Next morning, before county council opened its session, Curly dropped in casually to see the railway man. Godfrey, hurried from his desk, readily recognizing his visitor and invited him to sit down.

That was the beginning of several such friendly meetings during the next three days. But at no time during the conversation was the word "railway" ever mentioned between them. But they did talk about hunting and fishing, Godfrey puffing at his cigar the while.

"Speckled trout" Godfrey would smack his lips, "roll 'em in corn meal, fry 'em to a crisp, and what have you" or venison steak, smothered in onions, or partridge—by George, Mr. Brown —Curly, I'm just starving for a good feed."

As Godfrey talked, Curly was much amused. Was Godfrey just fishing him for a string of speckled trout, a piece of venison, a brace of partridge? But when Godfrey explained that in his younger years, he had been a keen hunter and angler but had had to give it up, on doctor's orders, he understood. This man was indeed hungry for the things that he used to go out and get for himself. And so Curly realized what he must do. It would take six months before he would be back in a meeting of county council, yet he must keep in close touch with Godfrey at all times. Very well, he would. And Hard Acres would help him. Now that he knew what Godfrey wanted above all things, he would see he got them and as often as he wanted them. More than that, he would bring George Godfrey to Hard Acres for some fishing and hunting.

Queen Mary Kept Indoors by Chill

SANDRINGHAM, Eng. (Reuters) Queen Mary, here for the royal family's annual Christmas celebrations, again is confined to the house because of a chill, it was announced today.

Two doctors came up from London to see the 85-year-old Queen grandmother. They phoned again this morning to check on her progress, and were told she was better.

Queen Mary caught cold last October, and it kept her at Marlborough House, her London home, until early this month.

She will stay at Sandringham until the present chill has gone.

The fact that Queen Elizabeth did not attend church Sunday prompted reports that she, too, had a cold, but Buckingham Palace denied them.

The royal family will stay at Sandringham until early in February.

Wild Driver Wrecks Home Grins Broadly

DETROIT (AP) — A reckless driver sent his car careening across a lawn and right into a house Sunday.

But although he had no driver's license and grinned broadly when he surveyed the damage, police didn't ticket him! The driver, Anthony Widby, is only two years old.

His father, Jack Widby, had left the toddler alone in the car for a moment. Anthony climbed behind the wheel, turned a key and pushed a couple of buttons, with results that were disastrous to the car and the home of Mrs. Helen Fattenaude. Anthony suffered only a bruised forehead.

Teeth Fillings Can Cause Electric Shocks

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Electric shocks from fillings in your teeth may cause pain and disease of the mouth, the American Association for the Advancement of Science was told Sunday.

Even a single metal filling can set up an electric current, sometimes of surprising strength, said Dr. William Schreiver, professor of physics at the University of Oklahoma, Norman, Okla.

A single filling of gold or silver amalgam can become a tiny battery or electric cell through contact with saliva and with fluids in the bones, he said. The saliva and bone fluid are electrolytes, and the metal filling acts like a wire between two electrolytes.

Four Immigrants Die in N.S. Fire

LIVERPOOL, N.S. (CP) — Four of the five members of a Danish immigrant family were burned to death early today when fire destroyed their home at Charleston, about 15 miles from here on Nova Scotia's south shore.

Dead are Mr. and Mrs. Villy Mark Hanson; their three-year-old daughter Mary Ann, and a three-month-old son.

Another son, Eric, 14, escaped from the burning two-storey wooden structure.

The father also made his escape but died when he re-entered the building in a vain attempt to rescue his wife and children.

The family came to Canada about three years ago.

Toronto Teacher Stabbed, Kicked By Three Youths

ST. LOUIS (AP) — James C. Strachan, a Toronto teacher, was reported in serious condition at City hospital today with stab wounds suffered when he was attacked by three boys who had demanded the price of a meal.

Physicians said, however, that Strachan, 40, should be able to return to his home next week, barring complications.

Strachan, here to attend meetings of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, said three Negro youths attacked him on a street near his hotel about midnight Saturday when, in reply to their demand for money, he said "Not tonight, boys."

The boys kicked him and stabbed him in both shoulders and the chest. They fled without taking anything when he shouted for help.

Strachan is head of the science department of Harbor Collegiate, a Toronto high school.

Says USSR Plane Output 5 Times U.S. In 5 Years

Now Equal Says Air Chief Sees Any Cut 'Catastrophic'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force chief of staff, said Monday Soviet Russia has produced five times as many planes as the United States during the last five years.

Declaring that any cut in U.S. plane production can be "catastrophic," Vandenberg said:

"Even today the Russians are equalling our production, or perhaps bettering it."

Vandenberg expressed his views in an article written for Planes, official publication of the Aircraft Industries Association.

The U. S. air force chief said that with the atomic bomb now in possession of the Soviet Union, "we are entering a period of increased tension and, in some parts of the world, of acute crisis."

"We must meet our air-power goals if we are to have the strength to counter the threat against our national security and the peace of the world," he said.

The goals can not be lowered to further. We dare not postpone them in the day of their attainment."

Vandenberg's call for full-speed-ahead in aircraft production came in the face of reports growing round the incoming Republican administration and the Republican-controlled 83rd Congress may seek to trim military spending in the drive to cut over-all federal expenditures.

Hit-Run Speeder Leaves Woman Lying on Road

TORONTO (CP) — A 77-year-old pedestrian on her way to early mass was struck down by an automobile today in east-central Toronto and left dazed and bleeding on the roadway.

Mrs. Anne Chorney suffered a fractured hip. Because of her age, her condition is considered critical.

Witnesses said police car appeared to be travelling 50 to 55 miles an hour when it hit the woman and that the driver did not slacken his speed before or after the accident.

"He was going so fast, the woman was hurled to the air and the front of her fur coat torn to shreds," said an investigating officer. "He was out of sight before witnesses could get his license number."

Police said there is no doubt the driver knocked his car against the woman, who was just stepping on the curb. The right side of the car, described as a black coupe, is torn.

TRUMAN TO ASK CONGRESS FOR $73 BILLIONS

Final Budget Subject To Changes by Ike

WASHINGTON (AP)—An informed administration source said President Truman will call upon the new Congress to vote about $73,500,000,000 in new appropriations next year.

He predicted government expenditures of "somewhat under" $80,000,000,000—subject to changes by the incoming Eisenhower administration.

Spending in the present fiscal year, the source said, will probably fall between $4,000,000,000 and $5,000,000,000 below the latest official estimate, due to lags in defence expenditures, but tax collections will be about what was previously estimated.

That would mean a $3,000,000,000 to $4,000,000,000 budget deficit at the end of the fiscal year June 30 in place of the present official estimate of $10,300,000,000.

Greater Productivity May Be Key to '53 Economic Advance Says President of C of C

MONTREAL (CP) — President Lewis W. Simms of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, in a yearend message today, said greater productivity may well be the key to ensuring Canada's economic advance in 1953.

Although there may be regional difficulties, barring unforseen circumstances, there doesn't seem to be anything on the horizon to mar Canada's general feeling that greatest economic news story of the last decade."

"Canadians can rely on competition and the flexibility of free enterprise to carry the economy through the stresses of 1953."

Democratic System Proves

The democratic competitive system has been a force in achievement of Canada's high standards of productivity, but "we must be careful not in pseudo zeal force by taxation policies which would kill the incentive of individuals and industry to produce."

It is important to realize that while almost one-half of our current tax burden is for defence-needed as insurance for our freedoms—welfare schemes were absorbing 20 per cent of our revenue. The time has come when we should consider whether we are now overtaxing for defence and whether we have reached the limit of what we can ask from government in the way of non-defence spending."

These highlights of the economic outlook were outlined by Mr. Simms:

Trade — Possible levelling off in over-all trade, with Canadian manufacturers likely to find export markets tough and competition keen.

Canadian dollar — Likely to stay at present rate for the first two months of the year and then show signs of dropping to par or below.

Cost of Living — Remaining fairly stable with a tendency to rise, but only moderately.

Employment — Seasonal unemployment will be relatively high, aggregate payrolls, however, likely to stay firm; part-time work would likely be slightly upward.

Industrial production — Rise moderately, remaining somewhat higher than in the first half of 1953.

Wholesale prices — Possibility of further down drift.

Farm prices — Might be slight decline, but over-all picture might pick up; re-entry of Canadian cattle into United States would be a factor in improving matters.

Capital expenditures — Public and private capital expenditures expected to equal those of 1952. A "considerable degree" downward trend started in latter half of 1952 expected to continue.

TWO SUFFERED BURNS IN BLAST, DIE IN HOSPITAL

Explosion Occurs In Cooksville Plant

TORONTO (CP) — Mrs. Betty Drury, 34, and Ronald Kivell, 17, died in hospital today from burns suffered Monday in an explosion and fire at the T. W. Hood Fire Works Company plant at nearby Cooksville.

Fellow workers at the plant said Mrs. Drury was working alone at the time in a small frame-and-stucco loading shop, one of many separate wooden structures at the plant. Kivell, a carrier, arrived with some explosives — cases in which explosives are placed to produce the type of firework which forms a star high in the air.

Low Rumble Heard

A low rumble was heard by others in the plant and bursts of smoke were seen rising from the shop. Mrs. Drury and Kivell were found rolling, on the floor, their clothing afire.

Today's deaths raised the plant's death toll to four since 1944. Two years ago four persons were hurt in an explosion. In 1944 a blast killed two others.

Mrs. Drury started working at the plant in October to help her husband save for a new home. The couple had four young children under 12 years of age. A seven-year-old son was drowned in a pond four years ago.

Bitter Encyclical Issued By Pope On Persecution

Addressed to Rulers Behind Iron Curtain

VATICAN CITY (CP)—The Pope today lashed out at Communist governments who, he said, had "unleashed a new tempest and seek to overthrow, devastate and destroy in misery flourishing Christian communities."

In an encyclical letter written in Latin to the patriarchs, archbishops and bishops of the Oriental Roman Catholic churches, the Pope declared:

"We consider your sorrows and your griefs as your own and there is nothing we desire more ardently than to bring some relief to your sufferings, above all by means of our prayers and those of every Christian."

"If it particularly condemned "Communist attempts to stamp out Catholicism" in Bulgaria, Rumania and the Ukraine.

The encyclical was directed specifically to the hierarchy and clergy of the Roman Catholic Church's Oriental rite, nearly all of whose members are in Communist-controlled countries.

Assails Persecution

His words, however, clearly assailed perfections in all Eastern Europe and the Far East against both the Oriental and Latin rite branches of the Catholic Church, both of which come under his authority.

Pre-war figures set the total of Oriental Rite Catholics in Eastern Europe at about 10,000,000, most of them in the eastern Ukraine and Rumania. Since the war, many of these have been transported by Communist authorities—some of them taken to Siberia.

Ruthenians in the eastern Carpathian Mountains was accounted for more than 5,000,000 of the 10,000,000 Catholics of Eastern rite. A few of them have fled in Canada and the United States.

50 Million Catholics

Hungary, before the war, had a total of nearly 200,000 Catholics of Eastern rite and Yugoslavia, in 1939 on the latest figure available here, had 49,638 Eastern-rite Catholics.

All Catholics in Eastern Europe, including both those of Latin and Oriental or Eastern rite, number about 50,000,000.

"We cannot pass over in silence," said the Pope, "those faithful of the Latin and Oriental rite, who, after being driven from their homeland and hearth, and deported into unknown and distant lands, now are deprived of their spiritual pastors, who could console, help and direct them, and extend to them the most only comforts of religion."

"In many regions where the Oriental rite particularly flourishes there has been unleashed a new tempest which tries to overthrow, devastate and destroy in misery flourishing Christian communities," he declared.

The Pope's letter especially mentioned the persecution of the church in Bulgaria where Bishop Eugene Bossilkov was put to death and three other priests recently were condemned to die.

Veil Fallen Unseens

The Roman Catholic Churches of the Oriental rite recognize the authority of the Pope but do not follow all the Roman customs and ceremonials. Some of them have contacted with the Greek or Russian Orthodox Churches.

Although the encyclical was addressed to the Oriental rite churches, its contents clearly indicated the Pope's criticism also was aimed at persecution of members of the Latin rite of the Roman Catholic Church in East Europe.

The Pope said that there are multitudes of the faithful in Oriental regions who weep bitterly at their sad fate because they be done or dispersed, or so impeded that they are unable freely to address their flocks, and, as rightfully they exercise over their sheep abandonment," the Pope's letter said.

The Pontiff ordered special prosecutions in Rumania and the Soviet Ukraine which he said were "depriving Christ's faithful" of the Oriental rite and those of the Latin rite.

President-Elect Eisenhower Meets With Senator Taft To Draft Legislative Program

NEW YORK (AP) — President-elect Eisenhower hopes to round out a preliminary draft of his legislative program at a conference today with Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio and other Senate Republican leaders.

The senators are those who will have a key role in the new general's legislative program gets to Congress. Besides Taft, one to become Senate majority leader, those scheduled to sit in at today's conference include:

Senators Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, president pro tempore of the Senate — its presiding officer in the absence of the vice-president — and Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts and Henry C. Young of North Dakota, members of the Senate Republican policy committee.

Eisenhower discussed Dec. 18 with Republican leaders in the House of Representatives the new administration's legislative program which he will outline to Congress after his inauguration Jan. 20.

Aides said much preliminary work already has been done on the program and that Eisenhower hopes the first stages can be completed in early January. Additional conferences with congressional leaders are planned for study of the final draft.

Eisenhower has said all conferences will deal with major foreign and domestic issues.

Eisenhower announced he will appoint Robert Cutler, president and director of the Old Colony Trust Company of Boston, as an administrative assistant to the President.

Cutler, 51, and a Republican, would be an adviser to Eisenhower during the election campaign.

Teachers Scored By Educationist On Prestige Loss

TORONTO (CP) — A leading Canadian educationist said Monday the teaching profession, the broader members of the 90,000 classrooms in the country the teacher could be replaced by "a mechanical parrot who could carry on just as successfully.

Dr. M. E. LaZerte, former dean of education at the University of Alberta, made the statement during an address to the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation.

He said that to the extent a group appears more interested in protecting its economic status than in improving standards of service, it loses prestige and public support, which places teachers in an unfortunate position, he added.

"Their financial position has never been secure. Their business is dishonest publicly before school boards, not privately. In order to obtain a living wage they have been forced to bargain and negotiate continuously in most provinces. This has led to many conferences with congressional leaders planned for study of the final draft.

Eisenhower has said all conferences will deal with major foreign and domestic issues.

Eisenhower announced he will appoint Robert Cutler, president and director of the Old Colony Trust Company of Boston, as an administrative assistant to the President.

Cutler, 51, and a Republican, would be an adviser to Eisenhower during the election campaign.

Giggle Habit Gives Bandit The Jitters

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — What the holdup man didn't know was that Ruth London has a nervous habit of giggling when she's excited or scared.

The bandit had his revolver into the window last night as Ruth, 25, sold tickets for a movie. He shoved a demand-note under Mike London.

"C'mon, put the money," he demanded.

Ruth tittered.

"I'm not kidding — this is serious," he muttered fiercely.

Ruth giggled.

"All right," he blurted, shoving $1.50 through the window. "Gimme a ringside seat." He grabbed it and fled.

British Bomber Crashes, Burns Midst Village

VALETTA, Malta (Reuters)—A British Lancaster bomber crashed and burned in a crowded village near here today after one engine cut out during take-off. All four crew members were killed and two women were badly burned by flaming gasoline.

The dead pilot was a young sergeant having his first flight as an aircraft captain.

The Lancaster mowed down two houses and burst into flames in the back gardens. Burning wreckage and gasoline flooded adjoining backyards. The two burned women ran screaming from the crash scene.

Bidault Steps Up Efforts To Gain Support for Govt. On New Taxes, European Army

PARIS (AP) — Premier-design Georges Bidault stepped up his efforts today to find wide support for a coalition government that would give France a tax reform at home and swift ratification of the European Army to bring German troops into the Western defence system.

After conferring all day Monday with leaders of France's major political parties, Bidault agreed to form a government. He must assure himself a strong majority in the assembly before he can be invested in the job vacated by Premier Antoine Pinay.

Bidault gave top priority to the European Army treaty, declaring it was necessary to bring the pact "out of the icebox." Both France and Germany have stalled in getting their Parliaments to ratify the pact, which would form a uniform international Western European Army to be attached to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Wants Big Majority

Bidault, leader of the right-of-centre Mouvement Republicain Populaire, said his aim was to form the widest possible majority in the assembly, adding:

"The government must have very large majorities, especially in financial matters."

The veteran politician, who already has served as premier twice since the war, is reported contemplating asking for a 15-month tax collecting system, an extremely unpopular measure in France. He also is said to seek constitutional reforms which would prevent the unseemly haggling that has occurred such as arose when Pinay resigned rather than face certain defeat on his 1953 budget.

Porter Claims He Was Attacked By Hairy Beast

By ADRIENNE FARRELL

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — A Sherpa porter on the abortive Swiss expedition on Mount Everest claims he was attacked by a shuffling, hairy "abominable snowman" and lived to tell about it.

Swiss members of the unsuccessful expedition said here Monday night they regarded the story of the fabulous creature—legend has it he can kill by glance of his "evil eye"—as "pure imagination" after reading and shuffling outside the tent at heights where no man lives.

The Sherpa told them a yeti—Tibetan name for a mystery—had visited him, but boosted away when he heard 14 other Sherpa tribesmen with the expedition were coming up the trail to his rescue.

The attack is said to have occurred just below Lhotse glacier, 28,000 feet up the 29,002-foot mountain, the world's highest peak which has never been conquered by man.

Sherpa said they had no other evidence to back the Sherpa's story. "It might have been the snowman. It might have been a bear. Or it might have been some freak of the mountain," he said.

The Sherpa porters are not so skeptical. One of them said he and his companions often heard the cry of the yeti at night.

He insisted that the mountain swear the "snowman" exists, describing him as a shaggy, six-foot monster.

British explorer Eric Shipton early this year published photographs of footprints taken 19,000 feet up the mountain in 1951. Impressions twelve inches long showed the yeti has only two toes with three toes and a thumb, which had bounded across the snowy slopes.

Grandma Bandit Admits Brief Crime Career

LOS ANGELES (AP)—"Robbing banks was fun," the white-haired grandmother going into a store and buying a loaf of bread.

That is the opinion expressed Monday by grandma the bank bandit, Mrs. Ethel Arata, 52, who has admitted a brief crime career including two bank stickups.

She told officers during a fingerprint session that her greatest regret was that she "ruined Christmas for a lot of policemen and investigation agents and police" who were kept away from their families by her brief career.

Earlier it was disclosed the grandmotherly type woman who says she really isn't a grandma was the daughter of a former New York City policeman.

Her uncle, Benjamin S. Catts, 76, a Hollywood real estate broker, has contributed her story that her father lost millions in the 1929 crash. Catts said she is obviously ill and he will instruct his lawyer to help her.

New Deputy Minister

OTTAWA (CP)—Kenneth W. Taylor has become acting deputy minister of finance following the death Saturday of William Clifford Clark, as finance department official said Monday night.

The official said that Mr. Taylor, as senior assistant to the late deputy minister, automatically moved up to act in his stead.

Much Chagrin Rewards Stand On 'Principle'

COVENTRY, Eng. (AP)—Norman Pickering was hopping mad today—and he's going to spend a fortnight in jail after all.

Pickering, 47-year-old motorcycle engineer, drew the sentence after refusing "on principle" to pay a nominal £2 fine imposed by Coventry magistrates Dec. 17 for parking his car without lights outside his dog and pigeon shop. He said he thought a warning letter should have been enough.

Today police told him an anonymous friend had paid the fine.

"It's a ruse-face-saving climb down for me," Pickering confirmed the frustrated Pickering. "I have been cheated of the Latin and Oriental rite, who, after being driven from their homeland and hearth, and deported into unknown and distant lands, now are deprived of their spiritual pastors, who could console, help and direct them, and extend to them the most only comforts of religion."

"In many regions where the Oriental rite particularly flourishes there has been unleashed a new tempest which tries to overthrow, devastate and destroy in misery flourishing Christian communities," he declared.

Cluck-Squawk Code of Chickens Is Real 'Talking' Scientists Say

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Chickens talk in a cluck-and-squawk code of real meanings, two scientists reported today.

They can say "hawk coming" or in a different sound "dear me dandelion greens." Baby chick says an equivalent of "hey, mom, I'm lost" and the hen can say "come hurry or you'll get scared."

The study of chicken language even suggests a scientific method of communication, that could come in a moment.

The sound signals of chickens were analyzed by Dr. Nicholas Collias, zoologist now at Cornell University, and Margaret Martin Joos of the University of Wisconsin.

The chicken "talk" was recorded by an electronic machine, the spectograph, which translates sounds into wavy lines on paper. The lines show the frequencies of the pitch frequencies and intensity.

Joos made the recordings, and Collias made the interpretations, described to the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Many lines show when a chick is chirping in pleasure, or in distress at being alone, hungry, cold or thirsty or hurt. The frequency or timing of the chirps is different.

The broody hen clucks as she walks, summoning her chicks to follow. She clucks about five times about two clucks a second.

When she has found some food, she clucks rapidly, about four clucks a second, to call her chicks to join the feast.

At night, when she roosts, she gives a purring sound, lasting about 1½ seconds, to bring all chicks under her wing.

If a hawk appears, chickens have an alarm scream, loud and raucous, that sends chicks running for cover.

And if it's danger from the ground, a dog or a man, the warning is loud, repeated calls at a different frequency. The hen also seems to give an alerting call, low and repeated, when a fox appears, makes chicks stop and freeze. This is a rapidly-pulsed tone.

At last the meaning of the various calls, the experimenters hope, will reduce or artificial sounds that showed the same spectograph lines as did different signal calls of real chickens.

Tapping a pencil on a wooden table or cardboard box was like the "come here" clucking call, and sounded much the same.

And that is your tip on how to proceed with some scientific chicken stealing.

'Acted Rightly' Scientist Says

LONDON (CP) — Alan Nunn May, British atom scientist released from prison Monday after serving a sentence for betraying atomic secrets to Russia, said today: "I think I acted rightly."

Nunn May's statement said he had no treasonable intentions when he supplied information to Russian agents during the Second World War.

"I was wholeheartedly concerned with securing victory over Nazi Germany and Japan and with the furtherance of the development of the peaceful uses of atomic energy in this country.

"My object now is to obtain as soon as possible an opportunity of doing useful scientific work in which I can be of some service in this country and to my fellow men. My love for my native Canada is over I can only wish for the same consideration and fair treatment which I received throughout a long period of my sentence from the prison officials and my fellow prisoners."

Mountbatten Seen as Power By Paris Paper

PARIS (AP)—The illustrated weekly Noir et Blanc (Black and White) told its readers Monday Admiral Lord Mountbatten is the "grey eminence" of the British court. The term was applied to Cardinal Richelieu's secretary in France and has come to mean a power behind the throne.

The magazine said Mountbatten has "predominant influence" over his nephew, the Duke of Edinburgh, who in turn influences the Queen. It said British conservatives are uneasy because "the whom some call King Louis Mountbatten has communicated to Philip of Edinburgh all his revolutionary ideas concerning establishment of a kind of popular monarchy."

West Huntingdon Boys 'Do Town' With Teacher

Seven boys and their Sunday School teacher from the community of West Huntingdon are in Belleville today "doing up the town."

Led by Arthur Wilson, who conducts a class of boys from the ages eight to 12 at the West Huntingdon United Church Sunday School, the group was composed of Bob Browning, Bernard Post, Paul Wilson, James Wilson and Reg McCurdy.

Their tour of the city started off this morning with a visit to the Ontario Intelligencer. Here they ran the course of inspection from the teletypesetter to the addressing of newspapers in the circulation department for the early mail run.

Later this afternoon, the boys conducted a short broadcast from CJBQ in which they extolled the virtues of their community.

Between times, Mr. Wilson added later, the group strolled around looking at points of interest—and eating.

Kaufman Off 'Show Business'

NEW YORK (AP) — Playwright George S. Kaufman has been removed from the broadcasting examination meeting to be called Wednesday, Dec. 31, by candidates for the school board. With five positions open on the school board, only ten candidates qualify following the nomination meeting Wednesday.

May Be Election

In Sidney township it appeared there would be an election for deputy reeve between Byron Easton and Carman Frost, two of this year's councillors. Reeve Harold Morrow stepped up to the office of reeve by acclamation when Reeve Lee Grills withdrew after being nominated. There will be no election for council with Harley Hanson, Basil Brooks and James Campbell receiving acclamation.

In Thurlow township Fred Mitchell, Cecil Ketchison and Harry A. Harrison received nomination for reeve, Mr. Ketchison was also nominated for deputy reeve along with J. T. Armstrong and Hubert T. Wickett, two of this year's council.

Nominated for council were Alfred Wickett, Harry Pound, J. H. Armstrong, Litchford and Campbell-Howard. An acclamation is expected for the first three named candidates for council and also for Deputy Reeve Ketchenson.

Garret Denyes, Coleman Townsend and Roy Baldrick received acclamation at nominations for the North Thurlow Public School Area and Jack Parrot and Harry O'Neil received acclamation as trustees for the South Thurlow area.

Reeve West Acclaimed

Reeve Ernest West was nominated for the office of reeve of Sidney but his present council is all in. West received acclamation when the others withdrew. Nominated for deputies for the reeve were Harold Wells, William C. West and Don Rodgers.

Nine were nominated for council including the four members of this year, Jim Hall, Don Rodgers, R. G. Bailey and Francis Jeffery. Others nominated are Earl Wannamaker, Bradshaw, David Duffin, Michael Bailey and W. J. Wills.

Nominated for school trustees were three retiring members for this year, H. R. Tompkins, W. H. Donnan and R. A. Patterson, with Charles Tyndinga elected would be for a two-year term. Harold C. Bird received acclamation as trustee auditor for a two-year term.

Nominations in Rawdon were: reeve, Verner Jones; deputy reeve, Theodore Cooney; council, Ernest Saries, Jr., Irving and Kenneth Bird, all by acclamation.

Tyendinaga reeve, Percy Moore; deputy reeve, Leslie McLaren; council, Charles Long, Marvin Doyle and William Welsh, all by acclamation.

Geo. Montgomery, Frankford, Harry Morrow, Sidney, New Reeves in '53 County Council

One election and five nominations were held in townships and villages in South Hastings on Monday, resulting in at least two new reeves being elected to office.

One of the new reeves is George Montgomery of Frankford who was elected reeve. He defeated ex-Reeve Preston Chase in the one election held in the district. The other new reeve is Harry Morrow of Sidney township, who stepped up from deputy reeve, receiving acclamation for the office.

Two of last year's township reeves, Percy Moore of Tyendinaga and Verney Heath of Rawdon, as well as Reeve Russell E. West of Sidney, were all returned by acclamation, the only doubtful municipality being Thurlow where there is a possibility of an election between Reeve Fred Mitchell and ex-reeve Harry Harrison, who was also nominated for the office.

Two Acclamations

In Thurlow and in Tyendinaga there were acclamations all around for reeve, deputy reeve and council.

In Frankford village Montgomery defeated Chase 340 votes to 196. Successful in the election for reeve were Carman Mildred, 259; Roy Osterhout, 317; Leonard Reid 313 and John Wilbur, 308. Vincent McAuley with 282 votes, was the one defeated candidate. Carl Gallagher received acclamation for public utilities member for a two-year term.

Frankford is not yet over electioning. Monday night's nomination meeting is to be called Wednesday, Dec. 31, for the candidates for the school board. With five positions open on the school board, only ten candidates qualify following the nomination meeting Wednesday.

District Woman Looking Forward To 106th Birthday on New Year's

TRENTON (Special) — How does it feel to be 106-year-old? "Not too bad," replied Mrs. Jane Millichell, who celebrates her 106th birthday on New Year's Day. She lives with her youngest son, Milton, Mitchell, 72, on a farm four miles north of Wooler. Her oldest son, Henry, 82, resides in Wooler while her third child died in August this year at the age of 80.

"Mother never saw a movie," related her son. Milton, "because when she was young there were no picture shows and when they came along she was too busy working on the farm and didn't care." Mrs. Mitchell was born January 1, 1825, during Queen Victoria's reign. She was 20 years old when Lincoln was elected president of the United States.

Mrs. Milton Mitchell said she recalled that her mother-in-law took sick with a pain in her stomach when she was 90 years old. The doctor figured she was too old to stand an operation then and put her to bed. She has been bed-ridden ever since.

Not a person to take much medicine, Mrs. Mitchell has had pain regularly for 16 years and when it becomes too severe she takes a pill prescribed by Dr. D. McMullin of Frankford.

The woman who claims to be the oldest person in Ontario has always been a good eater. She still can put away a fair sized portion of potatoes and meat and at Christmas has a helping of turkey and goose and all the trimmings. She does never touch an spirits or tea or coffee. She drinks milk and a glass of hot water every morning. She has never smoked.

Of Dutch-English ancestry, Mrs. Mitchell is the mother of Henry Mitchell, a pioneer settler from England who died 20 years ago. She has lived during the age of the telephone, the radio, the motorcar, aviation, the motor car, the airplane and jet-propulsion. She watched men build the railway, the transcontinental railway which passes south of the farm where she was born and raised on the 8th concession of Murray.

"Although mother insists she is 107, the records here in the family Bible show that she is only 106," her son Milton said.

Still alert mentally and able to smile for visitors, Mrs. Mitchell looks forward to her birthday party with her two sons and close relatives.

Woman's Wrist Cut by Flying Glass of Window

Struck by flying glass when the window of the fast passenger train was broken by a stone, Margaret Macdonald, of Roslin Ave., Westmount, Que., suffered a cut wrist early last evening.

Miss MacDonald was a passenger on the eastbound Montreal flyer, when as it entered the city a stone, presumably thrown by some boy from the overhead bridge, crashed through the window at her side. The flying glass struck her wrist and inflicted a cut which was later dressed by a Kingston doctor.

Canadian National Railways police along with a city police officer started a search of the overhead bridge but were unable to locate any person suspected of throwing the stone.

Police to Keep Sharp Eyes On Drinking Drivers

With New Year's Eve traditionally a night for celebration, city and provincial police will be keeping sharp eye open for drivers whose ability may be impaired by alcohol.

This was stated today by City Police Chief Walter Probert and Inspector A. McDougall of the Ontario Provincial Police, who said that traffic patrol officers would be going all out in an effort to keep accidents to a minimum.

Co-operation of motorists to refrain from driving their cars after drinking was urged by both police officers.

"If we can repeat our Christmas holiday record when only a few minor accidents occurred, we will be satisfied," the chief stated.

Factories To Be Paid Price Established by Exchange Commencing on January 1

Commencing January 1st cheese factories will be paid the price established on the cheese exchange rather than under the present system of prices guaranteed by the Federal and Provincial governments. This was announced today by the Ontario Cheese Producers' Marketing Board.

The Ontario Cheese Producers' Association Ltd. will support the price of first grade cheese at 22c, and 3rd grade cheese at 27c, all prices f.o.b. factory. In all cases the Cheese producers' toll of five cents per hundred pounds will be deducted.

The Association announcement went on to point out that it will not be responsible for the sale of cheese scoring below third grade, such sales to be made directly by the factory to whatever purchaser can be secured.

Under the present system of cheese prices guaranteed by the governments patrons did not receive the full amount when cheese sold at over 30c. In the future when the exchange price exceeds the suggested price the factory will receive the amount of the bid, less the five cents per cwt. licence fee. The purchaser of cheese will remit to the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association which in turn will pay the factory.

The arrangement and support price going into effect January 1st may be changed without notice, it was stated.

Count Blesbings Guest Speaker Tells Rotarians

The secretary of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association, Charles N. Heath spoke to the Belleville Rotary Club luncheon in the Hotel Quinte Monday. "I do not like to talk business," the cheese executive told members, "at this time of the season there are other things to be considered. Today I want you to pay yourselves a little talk to yourself about the things, that have happened during the past year.

"They say a man is never happy, but he stands pretty well himself, But, just this once, get away from business and count your blessings. Think of how fortunate you are to have lived in this glorious land, to be able to look over the literature, art and music of the world for years or so. Consider the advances in transport and communication."

Mr. Heath pointed out you are to live in a country such as Canada, a country with 4,000 miles from coast to coast and stretches to the north pole, such a country with concrete roads, food in plenty and some to spare, beautiful scenery, lakes, valleys and trees, a country that other people have learned to respect and have faith in, a country whose currency is rapidly advancing in value."

Have Many Freedoms

"In Canada," the speaker continued, "we have the freedom, the like of which is not always exercised in other countries. We have the freedoms of the press, of religion, of speech and others. While you count your blessings, think of the value of your own names. Think of what it means to be able to see the look on a child's face, when he sees the loaded Christmas tree, to see the hills as the sun comes up in the morning, or the countryside when the sun sets in the evening."

Mr. Heath read several of John Milton's poems. "There," he said, "is a man who sent half his life in the dark and yet wrote with a keen eye and a realization of what he had lost."

"Today I suggest you be satisfied. Think about Christmas and the New Year almost upon us and recall how it got to date. Remember the words of the prophet from the Bible. Look out on the world of today and its troubled state."

"It is wonderful to live in this day and age to live in Canada, where we should be able to touch the hand of a friend. Live in the faith of better things to come, that is my advice to you. I am sure, if you take time out to consider the blessings of the past year, you will go into 1953 with full faith and love in your heart, praising God."

The speaker was introduced by Dan Goodchild and presented with a memento of his visit by club president, George Campbell.

Committee Raps Immoral Comics

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House of Representatives committee said, today that "some of the most objectionable material spread to the salacious-minded" or to unsuspecting juveniles.

It rapped segments of the publishing industry for not taking steps to clean up its standards and for being guided too much by "the profit motive." It said censorship "definitely is not a practicable or adequate answer."

The committee was created last summer to probe "pornographic materials."

Morley F. Smith Given Contract At $65,500

Morley F. Smith was awarded the garbage collection contract for the city for the next two years at a special meeting of city council held Monday afternoon. The amount of the contract is $65,500.

Re-awarding of the garbage collection contract was made necessary when H. F. Bush, the lowest tenderer, when prices were called two weeks ago, failed to post the required surety bond. At their last regular meeting of the year held a week ago, the garbage contract had been awarded to Mr. Bush at $65,000 for a two-year period.

The recommendation passed by council yesterday gave the contract to Mr. Smith at the second lowest tenderer for the job.

Brief Discussion

A brief discussion was had by council members as to whether the intention of council had been to give the contract to the second lowest tenderer in case the first bond was not posted by the successful bidder.

Alderman Latimer asked whether it would not be advisable to call for new tenders owing to not accepting the second lowest bid. Alderman Latimer also referred to a communication from Rex Bridge, one of the bidders for the garbage contract, offering to take the contract at the Bush price of $65,000. Mr. Bridge had submitted the second lowest bid, when prices were called.

Alderman McNiven claimed the understanding of council was that Mr. Smith, as the second lowest bidder, was to get the garbage contract if Mr. Bush was unable to post the required bond. The bond was supported by Mayor A. M. Haig who said the committee had been largely unanimous that the second lowest tender should be accepted if Mr. Bush failed to post the bond.

"It would be mockery to do otherwise," he said.

Agreed as to Intention

Alderman Rollins agreed as to the intention of council and said he was not wavering from that intention. He did suggest, however, that in view of the heavy expense involved in securing the required garbage collection equipment that the period for which the contract ran should be more than two years. "Two years is too short a period considering an investment of $25,000 or $30,000," he said.

Alderman Hall said he was sympathetic to Mr. Bridge who, he said, had done an excellent job as garbage collector for the past two years. He said, however, it would not be fair to allow Mr. Bridge to have the contract at Mr. Bush's price of $65,000.

Figures Show 1952 Big Year In Stock Trading

By HARRY KINGDON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Contradictory trends marked activity on the Toronto stock exchange in the year now ending. But the exchange figures show 1952 was a big year for stock trading.

A leading Toronto financial journal calls 1952 "the most prosperous in our history." Yet none of the Toronto exchange's indices of market activity showed an advance over Dec. 31, 1951.

Industrials lost ground on the index in spite of the fact that Canadian companies paid more in dividends than ever before.

Western oils broke about even on the year, in spite of sharp third-quarter declines and a feeling among many observers that some oils were over-priced.

Golds closed almost unchanged in spite of widespread hopes for an increase in the price of gold. Increased government costs did made their contribution to the gold index.

Base metals met predictions of January, 1952, by declining during the year. The long was a reaction to lower prices for various base metals. Mining companies in general, however, distributed record dividends.

Listing Value Higher

Value of stock on the Toronto exchange rose from about $12,000,000,000 in 1951 to about $13,000,000,000 in 1952. Value of trading increased from $1,100,000,000 to about $1,300,000,000.

Some 30,000,000 more shares were listed in 1952 than in 1951—350,000,000 compared with 380,000,000.

Western oils started the year with a general upswing, sparked by news of discoveries in the west. Base metals followed, on general optimism. Industrials and golds slid lower.

About this time, the Toronto exchange was running ahead of the New York market, which usually sets the pace. Back in February, however, dips on the New York market were followed obediently by industrials, base metals and western oils.

Industrials on Toronto trading frequently ran ahead of New York. The two centres started to show "about the same long decline" set in at the end of August.

The Toronto indexes gave several lows for the year. Brief recoveries followed each two-month slump and a possible up-turn appeared toward the end of December, especially in western oils. But all sections failed to reach pre-September heights.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Base metals raced ahead in active early afternoon stock market trading today as other sections picked up.

Higher-priced base metals gained Hollinger 15¼, Mcintyre 54¼ and Consolidated Smelters added more than $1. Belleknno added pennies in the same direction as more than 119,000 shares and Aukeno, Ascot, East Rim and Sullivan Nickel traded actively for penny gains. Noranda, Sarvue and Steep Rock were among the lower losers.

Utilities, steels, refining oils and banks led the gains in industrials. General Motors and Trans-Mountain Pipeline added more than $1. Papers and foods slipped.

Prospects attracted interest in the golds list and pennies held Hirn, Gunnar, Chiboo, Graham Bousquet and Quesabe moved actively for penny gains. Junior producers held firm, and holding companies were firm.

Western oils balanced gains and losses with most leading issues rising. Canada Southern, Home and Stanwell led the gains.

Manpower Increased

OTTAWA (CP)—The Army increased its manpower in November for the first time in six months.

Recruiting figures released Monday day showed that the Army had 47,702 men at the end of November compared to 47,540 at the end of October.

That signalled the end of a drop which began in May.

New Year Will be Ushered In With Traditional Whoopee; Round of Gay Parties Planned

The winged cherub symbolic of the New Year will be ushered into a topsy-turvy world with all the whoopee, noise and celebration given his predecessors, unless prosperity and jubilee are barred.

More or less elaborate affairs ranging from formal balls, turkey dinners, to small private parties will give Old Man 1952 the merry heave-ho and extend the glad hand of welcome to the cherubic youngster at midnight tomorrow night.

Highlighting the major social events will be the formal parties of the 9th Anti Tank Regiment RCA (A.D.), the Belleville Club, and the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

The uniforms, black and white evening apparel and the gowns of the ladies will make the regimental affairs perhaps the most colorful of the festivities. The Belleville 9th Anti Tank Regiment will serve a turkey dinner at midnight following the grand reception to the New Year with dancing rounding out the night. Lt.-Col. Gordon Gilbert, M.C. and G. W. MacGregor, MC, commanding officer of the regiment, and Major Everett S. Fairman, secondin-command, with their ladies, will receive at least 200 guests in the well-appointed officers' mess.

"... And Be Merry"

The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will hold dinner dances in Picton and Madoc. On New Year's Day Lieut.-Col. R. Widdifield, commanding officer, and his officers and NCO's will hold "Open House in the Church Street Armouries. From 11 a.m. to 2.30 p.m. the affair will be strictly regimental and from 12.30 on the function will carry on with auxiliary members and their wives invited.

The Belleville Club will again be en fete for another gala affair. There will be dancing with a special orchestra and a buffet luncheon served during the later evening.

The Kinsmen Club will hold another of their gay parties at Thurlow County Gardens with special music favors and dancing and a turkey dinner.

The Keyette Club, of Belleville Collegiate Institute will be hosts t a large party of youthful celebrants at their annual "Rudolph Hop."

The Club Commodore will be the scene of another of its well-known celebrations with dancing, novelty-makers (both kinds) and refreshments

The Vanity Fair too, will be the party spot for another large crowd of celebrants with its usual colorful decor, whoopee and good time.

Then there are those who enjoy the smaller affairs. Several house parties have been planned, with preceding dinners at city establishments.

Parties Planned

In Picton, besides the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment function, the Canadian Legion branch will hold forth. On New Year's Day members will hold open house in the afternoon with a New Year's dinner at night.

Down Shannonville way, residents of that district will be able to celebrate at a New Year's Eve party, Trenton, Tweed and other outlying points centres plan similar celebrations.

For those who like their New Year's entertainment in a theatre-like atmosphere, nothing has been left undone to make their evening an enjoyable one. Managements of the Belle, Capitol and McCarthy theatres have arranged special film entertainment with the New Year being ushered in at midnight with the traditional noisemakers, hats, etc.

All-in-all it looks like a "Hot Time in the Old Town" tomorrow night.

Warning Note

And in more serious vein, remember—don't release the clutch of your car—and put it on a bottle. And vice versa Two dollars for a cab is much better than two years in the basket. A minute of carelessness may mean a lifetime of regret. And remember, too, there are a host of people alive tomorrow night, who won't be around the next day. You could be one of them.

Thomson Home 75 Geddes St. Damaged by Fire

Fire thought to have started from an electric switch box forced two families from their home and caused considerable damage to the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Thomson, 75 Geddes street. The blaze took place during the afternoon period.

Higher-priced base metals gained Hollinger 15¼, Mcintyre 54¼ and Consolidated Smelters added more than $1. Belleknno added pennies in the same direction as more than 119,000 shares and Aukeno, Ascot, East Rim and Sullivan Nickel traded actively for penny gains. Noranda, Sarvue and Steep Rock were among the lower losers.

Utilities, steels, refining oils and banks led the gains in industrials. General Motors and Trans-Mountain Pipeline added more than $1. Papers and foods slipped.

Prospects attracted interest in the golds list and pennies held Hirn, Gunnar, Chiboo, Graham Bousquet and Quesabe moved actively for penny gains. Junior producers held firm, and holding companies were firm.

Western oils balanced gains and losses with most leading issues rising. Canada Southern, Home and Stanwell led the gains.

Fire damage to the house was mostly outside as flames raced up from the switch box situated on a closet under the stairs. The front porch was gutted, while the heat of the flames melted the glass allowing the fire to get inside the house, Bedding was damaged by fire, while smoke and water loss was heavy.

The fire was discovered by Mr. Thomson as he went to answer what he thought was a knock on the front door. Half way down the hall he saw the flames through the window in the front door. "I yelled to my wife that the house was afire and called the fire department," he said.

Had to Leave

Shortly afterwards the smoke in the house got so dense that Mr. Thomson and his wife had to get out.

Firemen were on the scene before Mr. Thomson and neighbors could think of any furniture to get out of the house.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomson had been preparing for a visit from their daughter from Portage La Prairie and were airing bedding and mattresses in the living room. The fire damaged a number of blankets and quilts as well as two mattresses.

Labor Minister Gregg Says Workers Can Look Forward To Year of Continuing Progress

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian workers can look for a year of continuing progress in employment, wages and working conditions, Labor Minister Gregg said today in his yearend message to labor.

"In predicting what lies ahead of us in 1953," he said, "it must be recognized by all that it depends to a large extent on the international situation.

"But without further deterioration of the world situation, it would appear that we can expect a year of unlike the one through which we have just lived—a year of economic, and social advance for the Canadian worker against a background of continuing unsettled international affairs.

Situation Stable

"The economic situation appears generally sound. Many of the large resource — development programs will continue throughout 1953, and there is still a large volume of unsatisfied demand for housing.

"A high level of personal income is forecast, which should sustain employment levels in the trading and consumer-goods manufacturing industries.

"With favorable economic conditions, the Canadian worker can look for a year of continuing progress with regard to employment conditions, wages and working conditions."

During the year just ending, he said, Canada attained record levels of production and employment. The Canadian labor force passed the 5,400,000 mark—up 75,000 in a year. Canadian industry was able to absorb tens of thousands of immigrant workers with a minimum of unemployment. Wage rates rose, and the normal work week declined.

Confidence in Future

One of Canada's greatest assets, Mr. Gregg said, is the faith of Canadians in the future, and in this respect workers had a vital position. In the final analysis, they were the most important investors.

"Without this confidence in the future," he said, "organized labor in Canada would not be the responsible and indispensable institution that it is today.

"Organized labor has achieved and maintains its position because, in all its progressive programs, it has been with it a determination to believe in the ultimate high destiny of this nation."

China Mainland Attacks Claimed By Chiang's Son

TAIPEH, Formosa (Reuters) — Chiang Kai-shek's eldest son, Lt.-Gen. Chiang Ching Kuo, said today that Chinese Nationalist troops made numerous attacks on the Communist-held mainland of China this year, killing 41,727 enemy soldiers between January and October. Another 3,020 Communists were captured.

The Nationalist leader's son, who is chief of the political department of the national defence ministry, also said that Nationalist troops made at least. 21 forays on the mainland. They captured 330 villages and nine islands off the China coast.

Chiang Ching Kuo added that the build-up of Nationalist armed forces would be intensified next year to prepare for "counter-attacking on the China mainland."

Farm Forum News

Ways in which Canada could help bring about world peace were discussed at separate Hastings County forum meetings held recently at Brookdale, Foxboro and Hazzards.

Methods agreed upon included the feeding of starving nations, increased trade with other countries by setting an example by trading better with lesser known communities and by facing world problems fairly and without prejudice.

The Foxboro group felt that the establishment of a world government had merit although members doubted if the time was ripe for such a move.

The Hazzards group struck off the idea of a world government as impractical but agreed that at some future time the difficulties of language, currency and tariffs might partially be solved by such an agency.

Brookdale members were split on the issue the discussing group pointing to the growing power of hostile Asiatic nations. If representation according to population were accepted in such an organization, this group contended, that the cause of democracy would be seriously threatened. The other group upheld the idea of world government.

All three groups endorsed the United Nations as the most feasible medium for promoting world peace.

JOB FOR THE NEW YEAR

One of the problems earmarked for early consideration by the Belleville city council in 1953 is the chronic traffic headache. A tentative proposal before the new council is the establishment of a traffic commission which would include representative citizens as well as councillors.

Setting up a special body of this kind would appear to be a sensible approach to a problem which has already assumed overshadowing proportions and can be counted upon to become increasingly difficult. But whatever steps may finally be taken it is important that a thorough study of the local traffic situation be made.

At the very outset there must be recognition that no easy solution will be found in Belleville, no less than in every other growing urban centre on this continent, the traffic tangle is a culmination of conditions which have worsened year by year and at a rate which overstrides and renders ineffectual almost every relief measure adopted.

This has been the experience almost everywhere. Those urban centres which have taken extraordinary steps at great cost to cope with the traffic control problem have not been able to achieve any lasting solutions. They are constantly faced with new ways and means of just keeping pace with its growing proportions.

It will be seen, then, that any sort of program which may be evolved will be on a broad basis, looking toward long-term results rather than any immediate over-all solution. It should be based on careful, expert study of both future and anticipated needs.

There will probably be demands in certain quarters for immediate action to be taken in respect to some more spots. And there will be a good deal of controversy. This is to be expected. But there will be a good deal less contention and a good deal more progress made if all concerned realize that no effective control of traffic can be gained without considerable study and that we can believe that they have special interests which should be protected.

If a special study of the situation here is first carried out this is the only way in which any traffic control which will be revealed. The necessary steps toward effective control will be a surprise to many who feel that their particular rights should have prior consideration.

The citizens of Kingston — also plagued with the traffic headache — recently learned that the average citizen has many ill-conceived notions about means of solving the problem. They brought a research expert to their city to inspect conditions and discuss relief measures. He is Dr. R. G. Fleva, a professor at the University of Western Ontario who has carried out exhaustive studies of traffic problems, and heads London's traffic committee.

Dr. Fleva sets out a few basic principles which are bound to command much common grumbling protest. Subject to parking, he states that the function of streets is primarily for the movement of traffic of all kinds. The provision of parking space is a legitimate function, but is regarded as secondary insofar as most vehicle drivers are concerned.

It is his view that the usefulness of parking meters should be that their revenue would pay for off-street parking lots. Otherwise he regards meters as no better than mechanical pickpockets. This is a contention is sure, of course, to be no question of controversy. Off-street parking will become increasingly necessary and the revenue for it must come from somewhere.

Quite a few people will agree with Dr. Fleva on no doubt, in his classification of the economic rating of users of streets. The pedestrian takes top place because he wastes little in the use of streets, except valuable patience. The bus comes next. It accommodates a far vaster number, proportionately, than vehicles taking up almost half as much room, and it keeps moving on schedule. the taxicab is next on the bottom of the list is the driver of the private vehicle — the least economical user of the streets, in Dr. Fleva's opinion.

Dr. Fleva has quite a few other views on the traffic problem, of course. We do not present this brief outline of some of them with any thought that the city council here should regard them as anything approaching the specialist's carefully considered opinion. Rather, we point them out as an example of the sort of surprises which may be expected if a decision is made next year to approach the local traffic situation in a thorough-going manner with a view to working out the most effective kind of traffic control plan for this community.

The 1953 city council is not committed to anything. It may be content to go along with many other centres by attempting to meet the new demands for traffic relief as they arise and continue a "hit-and-miss" policy. But if realistic action is decided upon it is well to recognize at the outset that even the most scientific approach, with expert counsel and long-term goals in mind, will involve quite as many unpleasant concessions to convenience and quite as many headaches as the hit-and-miss alternatives.

Sir William Ferguson, eminent Scottish surgeon, who died in 1877, was the inventor of many modern surgical instruments.

A YEAR

We know how long a year will last,
We know the number of its days,
And like all others that have passed
Not one an extra minute stays.

Like every year that's gone before
We know precisely at the start
When ended are its seasons four
And one hour it will depart.

With all its final page must hold,
With naught to add and naught
to erase,
And, that last midnight bell is tolled
A young, new year will take its place.

Since men shape years by all
they do,
No bester will the new year be,
When it has run its twelve months through,
Than from the start to close are we.

'Thin Red Line' On Way Out

(The Edmonton Journal)

Another landmark of old-time British color, the scarlet coats of the soldiers—seems to be doomed. A debate in the House of Lords has disclosed that the War Office is changing the traditional scarlet uniforms of some of the household regiments to a dark blue. Bitter protests by old soldiers among the Lords have been over-ridden.

This is a sorry break with tradition. Even since Cromwell's day the red coat has been associated with the British Regular. Not so much so in fact that British soldiers were once commonly known as "redcoats", or, in less complimentary vein, as "lobsterbacks". The style has varied a good deal over the centuries, and from regiment to regiment, but the most cavalry and infantry units of Britain's regular army for the preponderant color .When combined—as in the case of the Life Guards, for example—with steel cuirass and white leather breeches and high jack boots, the effect was dazzling. Soldiers of famous regiments on guard or parade in their full dress uniforms have been one of the sights of London for centuries. They will be no more, perhaps even today—the prospect of wearing one is terrifying—and Australia was also one of the principal spots of recruiting.

Until comparatively recent times, the red coat was worn not only on parade but in active service. In old-time battles like Waterloo—fought with muskets at point-blank range, and in hand-to-hand—the bright colors were a distinct advantage. Officers and indeed helped to distinguish friend from foe. Even the use of high-powered rifles capable of killing at long range changed little in the first last conflict in which British troops wore scarlet—the small Egyptian campaigns was the South African War. There, it was soon found, the red coat made an irresistible target for Boer sharpshooters, and was quickly replaced by khaki-drab. The result was the general adoption of inconspicuous khaki for all ordinary wear. Today the red coat is worn only by officers of the Guards regiments on ceremonial use—and now even this last stronghold of tradition is threatened.

The reason given for the change is economy—scarlet cloth of the required quality is said to be 50 per cost three times as much as blue. No doubt the British Government has a long-term armament program to manage, has to watch its pennies. But is it said to me that the appearance of one or the few remaining spots of color in the modern world. It is to be hoped that the changeover will be postponed for many years. The Guards or the parade will lose much of its lustre.

Oatmeal Remedy

(Chicago Daily News)

Doctors are effective in treatment of the skin were told here this week that colloidal oatmeal, the gummy substance that softens and relieves skin irritation by alkaline soaps and water. This science could again vindicates an old wive's potion. Oatmeal has long been a popular old unofficial remedy for the winter itch.

It should be noted, however, that the suggestion for using oatmeal to relieve an itching skin should be applied internally to those getting along in life and most likely to be plagued by a dry skin. The old wives have noted long ago, instinctively apply the stuff externally and take it internally without medical advice.

Patience Advised

(Sudbury Star)

Sudburians may be interested in a news report from St. Thomas, which states in part:

"A new federal building will be constructed here next year, it was announced by Mayor Ross Allen at a cost of $35,000."

The new building has been promised for Sudbury in more than one general election campaign speech. We might inform St. Thomas that Sudbury is still waiting for the acquisition of the site.

However, two years or 10 years is but a measure of time in the eyes of a promising government.

In the time that Sudbury has been waiting for Ottawa to build a new federal building it has constructed a million-dollar civic building, a high school, a new of public library, and a number of elementary schools and private business buildings.

Which seems to point to a moral in the conduct of business at different levels.

Buffalo Robe Days Recalled

(Windsor Star)

The festive season automatically brings forth nostalgic thoughts. We remember those people and those things associated with the days of our youth. This isn't only true of elderly or middle-aged folk. Even teen-agers can remember the thrill of the toys and dolls Santa brought.

Christmas cards, depicting horse-drawn sleighs and cutters, reminded us of long drives through fresh and falling snow. They also recalled how difficult it was to keep warm, and what fun it was to keep from freezing. Naturally, we thought of buffalo robes.

These were the hides of the great beasts of the Prairies, warmly lined with their natural fur. If anything would keep the knees and legs warm, a buffalo robe would do so. The thick hide kept the cutting wind from the kept off the dampness of the snow.

It was a poor farmer who did not own a buffalo robe or two. They served a dual purpose, to keep the wearer warm during the drive and to keep the horses warm when tied in the cold shed. Thrown a horse-blanket over the horse's back, and a buffalo robe atop it, and he would be snug.

Many farmers, indeed, had buffalo skin coats (though the buffalo off had coon coats). The buffalo coat was shaggy but warm. It was a just like living for a long drive to town atop a load of grain or potatoes, or to warm on a cold day to an auction sale.

Nowadays buffalo robes or coats are there in existence in Ontario today? That is, apart from the coats worn by R.C.M.P. officers, some of them still have been issued to them. We doubt if there are many.

The thing tragedy in the slaughter of these huge animals by the Indians in the latitudes of buffalo hides contributed much to the comfort of an earlier generation in Ontario.

Pleasant Problem

(The National Geographic)

His Highness Abdullah as Sallen as Sabah, Sheik of Kuwait, faces one of the world's most pleasant problems—what to do with an income of $150,000,000 a year.

No income taxes cut into this princely sum. There are no restrictions on what he may buy—polo ponies or jewel-encrusted limousines or block-long yachts.

Bot instead, Abdullah Salim is wisely turning his sudden wealth into a far better way of life for 170,000 people in an ancient and neglected part of the world. A remarkable transformation is taking place in the tiny sunbaked Sheikdom of Kuwait at the head of the Persian Gulf.

Kuwait rests on a virtual ocean of oil. Beneath its sands are an estimated 9 billion barrels of black gold—a proved petroleum reserve roughly half that of the United States.

Tapping this pool at a tiftreut rate of 600,000 barrels a day the Kuwait Oil Company, Ltd., owned jointly by Gulf Oil Corporation and Anglo-Iranian Oil Company, pays the Sheikdom an even 50 percent of all profits.

By dynastic law the Sheik receives this money as personal income, and he alone decides what to do with it all. In the last few years, however, several decisions have given a once-backward country a new outlook. Besides a modern water supply, and an enviable position as potential banker of all Islam, Kuwait has:

Boom has come in no uncertain terms to Kuwait's capital, also named Kuwait. Shiny cars, trucks and giant earthmoving machinery have been brought busy bazaars among the mud-brick houses. Its teeming rabbit warren of narrow streets, mingle veiled Kuwaiti women, minaret and bulbous-dome Persian and Oklahoma and businessmen from Bombay and Beirut. Kuwait is in the tempo of Times Square transplanted to the desert.

There are many signs left of it's old way of life. While tankers ride the long ramp of a new pier extending into the Gulf from the new-born port city of Mena al Ahmadi, ancient shipwrights still shape teak logs with hand axes and build graceful dhows for the coasting, fishing and trading.

Behind the teak gates of Kuwait town, new cement-block buildings are replacing mud. with a handsome, tree-shaded streets A new 1,200,000-gallon-a-day distillation plant will make water from the Gulf, providing the city as well with its first major source of electric power.

A Third City At Lakehead?

(Fort Arthur News-Chronicle)

It is anyone qualified to know what is ahead for Sleep Rock Iron Mines Limited. It is the chairman of the board, Cyrus S. Eaton.

Eaton, therefore, he speaks of the future of Atikokan, which it almost 100 per cent dependent on Sleep Rock, he speaks as the highest authority.

The future prospects for Atikokan within a few-years a population of 25,000 people. All others of us has encountered in the activity of temptation in his life or here. From what he said in 1951, often, either in the jungle or along the highway of life, but the actualities of it must be pretty full of jeopardy. Temptations symbolized by the roaring lion are temptations almost beyond our power to resist—yet never entirely beyond that power.

Undoubtedly there are big things ahead for this district, not only for Atikokan, but for all in the same class as Port Arthur and Fort William.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ALWAYS WITH COURAGE

I wonder how far any one of us would get if we did not have courage? Without question, it is one of the most important of all requirements or equipment in life. All through recorded history we constantly come across the fact that unexpected things do happen.

Our pioneers and forefathers were constantly up against dangers. We of this later generation can hardly conceive or appreciate the hardships that took those brave people to the West, where they cleared the land, broke the mud huts, and went through privations that seared their very souls.

Emerson once said: "We must think in courage." Well, that is what the people did who worked and fought in this Western world, laying the foundations for a heritage that is ours today — with a challenge to us to carry on with even greater courage. These more complex times call for the rarest sort of courage. The problems of today are baffling the minds of men, ing our conception of their significance.

One of the most charming of books about a family in the early days of Quebec is that one by Louis Hemon — Maria Chapdelaine. It is difficult to secure in the United States, but many Canadians have been published in Canada. It first came out in an English translation in 1924. I am obliged to my friend Herbert West of Dartmouth College for a copy which he sent to me. It is an absorbing story of love, hardship and courage, and of the pioneer spirit that knows no defeat.

To me, one of the most inspiring of lives is that of Helen Keller, very satrickten deaf, dumb and blind in babyhood. Her wonderful teachers and friends encourage put her through Radcliffe College with honors, and accomplished it at the age of past seventy, her inspiring work in the world stands out as one of the most remarkable and influential of any woman of her time.

True it is that courage is a "red badge," but it is not worn upon outer garments, but upon the wall of the heart! Said William Shakespeare, "Let me wear down what excite and inspire us." Courage is the thing that carries us on!

HOW THE UNDERGROUND WORKS

"Nightmare" comes from the Saxon word, incubus, meaning an evil spirit, any thing or fiend that oppresses or burdens, by night.

Sometimes parents, without realizing it, oppress their children, by day. It should surprise no one to hear that children, as well as others, bitterly resent being discarding and oppressed. Thoughtless, irritable, hurried parents are quite likely to crush children's aggression.

Aggression is another interesting word, meaning to step or move forward. Any parent who drives in traffic will recognize that as forward movement is repeatedly interfered with, anger and resentment mount. This is particularly true in relation to immature persons whose reactions resemble those of children.

Let us pretend that you are an immature person. Every time you move forward, someone or something holds or pushes you back. Tals irks you. You grit your teeth and start forward again. This time the holding and pushing is accompanied by a threat or physical punishment.

It is as if when the red light stopped you in traffic, some hulking giant at the same time grasped your body and locked it tightly by thighs and warnings in your ear.

Do you feel calm? Wow! You jolly well are not going to stand for it. But what can you do? You can't fight this giant. You can't stop the lights, or erase the traffic.

You can't even yell back at the giant. You know from hard experience that if you dare sickbe back, you will be promptly punished into submission for your "impertinence." Nobody listens to your cause. And, if they do, you even wilder. There is no court of appeal. The giant is the judge.

So where do you turn? There is one lovely place where hard can get revege, — in your dreams! You can act the entire drama out. You move it forward to its inevitable conclusion. You can even imagine that you, dwarfed the traffic, and oh joy, kill the giant.

But wait! Not Oh, heaven, what have you done. This time you had no giant, — and you have killed your own father, or mother, or brother. Awful scream of terror, dread, guilt. You call out for your parents, forgetting that your children think of you as a giant, or as a sympathetic parent who expects them to be angry and bitter and hateful, some of the time, just as you have.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Two old friends of mine have lately died. The first was a man of action. He was born with a gun, the first as a flyer, the second as an army officer and he died in the thick of them both. Apart from the chances he took as a soldier he raked all the chances that life offered him as a sportsman. From his boyhood, he had hunted and fished all over Canada, in the mountains, on James Bay, living in the wilderness like a real Canadian native son, voyaging on little known rivers, hunting in winter, flying into remote territories in his self-opened reckless, and he was reckless. The sign, he said, was never sufficiently folly. He was a great man to know: but I didn't travel with him because I could keep up.

He died of a lingering illness that took long years to use him up. He spent nearly all of it in bed.

The other friend was a scholar who not only never took, he never supposed he would, a third class. I suppose he was more than 400 miles from his native city in all his whole life. He always travelled by day train, watching cautiously out the window of the coach to make sure his driver's eyes were on the road. He owned a car, figuring they were dangerous. He had no recreations outside his scholarships. Of his health he was so careful that he stayed in bed on time as religiously as he ate his meals on time, counting every bite, every mouthful. Of course he took no part in politics, for he thought they would ll never occur to him to join up. It would occur to no one else, he should. He would walk four blocks to reach a stop at which a street car, but never the street in safety. And even so, he never owned a green light. To watch him cross a street was sheer ballet. He was a sweet, shy, wistful little guy who lived in fear and trembling every day of his life.

When he died, bang! — it was by heart attack that smothered him out as instantly as an atomic bomb would have, with a direct hit. He was only forty. One other character, the gallant who took his chances for 40 years, hadn't had his boots on for eighteen months when he died.

TEMPTATION

"Thou shalt tread upon the lion and the adder: the young lion and the dragon shalt thou trample under foot" (Ps. 91:13).

There are kinds of temptation

First, the temptation which resembles a roaring lion. Every one of us has encountered the activity of temptation in his life or here. From what he said in 1951, often, either in the jungle or along the highway of life, but the actualities of it must be pretty full of jeopardy. Temptations symbolized by the roaring lion are temptations almost beyond our power to resist—yet never entirely beyond that power.

The adder type of temptation! This is the subtle temptation which lies in the adder, lying in the grass along the pathway. It is a sneaking, devastating temptation that poisons the fangs of this type of temptation.

Thirdly, there is the dragon. There is, of course, no such thing as a dragon. It is an imaginary animal. Many of our temptations arise from our evil thoughts, our cherished selfish, our grudges — our evil imaginings.

The lion, the adder, the dragon —only the grace of God can save us from the assaults of temptations of all kinds.

Christmas Concert

WHITE'S CHURCH S.S.

White's District—On Tuesday evening, White's Church held its annual Sunday School concert which was a decided success and both young and old joined in a happy get-together. The gaily decorated Christmas tree added much to the festive occasion.

The Rev. R. W. T. Middleton acted as chairman and called the gathering to order, which opened with a chorus, "Merry Greeting, We Love the Best." Miss Joan Shoemaker also added a welcome to the visitors and friends. Miss Joyce Curtis gave a comic reading, "So Was I." Peter Hunt and Curtis gave a reading, "Upside Down," with motions. Mr. Bruce Hunt favored with a piano solo. The Misses Joan and Barbara Shoemaker sang a duet, Christmas carols without music.

Famous People

A play entitled "Famous People" was nicely rendered by a number of children in costume, namely Richard MacKenzie, as "Jack Who Built the House"; Sylvia Bilham as "Old Mother Hubbard"; Heather MacKenzie as the "Dame Who Bought the Pig"; Gary Gingras as "Jack the Giant Killer"; Ronald Ferguson as the "Boy Who Was to a Monday Married"; Susan Hockaday as the "Woman Wee, Wee, Wee"; Audrey Bowers as "Little Dame who Owned the Goose"; John Hunt as "Blue Beard"; Ricky Hockaday as the "Little Indian Boy," and Dianne Dale as the "Woman who Lived in the Shoe."

The Rev. R. W. T. Middleton, Mrs. Middleton and Mrs. Gordon Middleton rendered, "On the Bonny Banks of Jack Lamond" and all joined in the chorus. Master Richard MacKenzie recited "Partial Payment" and little Miss Brenda Yeleman gave a recitation.

A play "Mr. World" was acted by Donald Bowers as old "Mr. World"; Sylvia Shoemaker as "Youth"; Sylvia Bilham as "Love"; Diane Dale as "Conscience"; Marilyn Bowers as "Truth"; Gail Gingras as "Work"; Audrey Bowers as "Joy"; Heather MacKenzie as "Honesty" and Penny Hockaday as "Purity." All joined in singing "Happy Days."

Miss Heather MacKenzie sang "Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer" unaccompanied. Little Miss Shirley Caves gave a Christmas recitation and her mother Mrs. George Caves sang very sweetly "Bless This House" accompanied by Mrs. Middleton. Miss Nancy Hockaday gave a piano solo "Away in a Manger." Mr. and Mrs. Barlow and Betty Sandercock recited "Good Night."

"A Christmas Carol and Candle" play, acted by Misses Joan and Barbara Shoemaker, Mrs. George Bilham and the Misses Marilyn Bowers, Gail Gingras and Marion Sandercock was well done. Candles were lighted and the carol was sung after each candle was lighted. This was preceded by the singing of "Silent Night" 2:1-20 by Mrs. Leonard Young.

"Bright Little Star" was recited by Miss Joan Shoemaker as teacher and Miss Sharon Jeffery as pupil. Mrs. Ivan Jeffery favored with a solo; "Star of the East" which was much enjoyed. Miss Gail Gingras recited "Christmas Shopping" which really was a warning to last minute shoppers. Master Ronald Ferguson recited "Christmas Bells"; Miss Joan Shoemaker sang "I Saw Mummie Kissing Santa Claus"; little Suzanna Hockaday recited "Christmas Doll."

Miss Shirley Meyers gave a reading "Awful Luck" a comic on the exchange of Christmas gifts.

"Star drill and Song" were well done by the Misses Audrey Bowers, Heather MacKenzie, Sylvia Bilham, Nancy Hockaday, Gail Gingras and Dianne Dale in costume and carrying a star wand. At the close they sang "The Glad Bells of Christmas are Ringing" with motions.

Mrs. George Caves again delighted with a solo "The Lord's Prayer" with Mrs. Middleton as accompanist. Mr. Bruce Hunt favored with a piano solo.

A pageant "The Great Light" a story of the Nativity added a touch of beauty and reverence to the finale of the program. It was portrayed by Mrs. W. A. Jeffery as "Mary"; Mr. Jeffery as "Joseph"; Masters John Hunt, Bobby Gooby and Gary Reid as "Prophets"; Mr. John Duffee, Mr. B. Westover and Mr. Albert Hockaday as "Shepherds"; Mr. Gary Jackson, Mr. Bruce Hunt and Mr. Donald Jones as "Wise Men"; the Misses Gail Gingras, Anne Sloag and Dianne Dale as "Wise Maids"; Miss Barbara Shoemaker, Master Donald Bowers and Miss Marilyn Bowers gave readings on the "Stars," "Bells" and the "Manger Scene."

The Misses Joyce Curtis and Margaret Sandercock told about the "Baby Jesus." The scripture was read by Mrs. George Bilham. The fairies were Misses Suzanne Hockaday, Nancy Hockaday, Heather MacKenzie, Audrey Bowers, Sharon Jeffery and Sheila Caves, who sang carols throughout the pageant. Work Stoppages Close to Record In U.S. in 1952

WASHINGTON (AP) — The year now closing brought more strikes and more idleness from work stoppages in the United States than any period since the industrial conflagration of 1946, the labor department reported today.

It said 4,950 stoppages began in 1952. This was close to the record of 4,985 set in 1946 when labor went after its "first round" of post-war wage boosts.

Thirty-four major stoppages, involving more than 10,000 workers each, were recorded. The biggest was the two-month strike of the CIO United Steelworkers.

AFL unions were involved in 17 of the major stoppages, CIO unions in 12, and independent unions in six. The industry most hit was construction; it had seven big strikes, five of them affecting projects of the atomic energy commission.

Strikes of all sizes outnumbered the 1951 total by about five per cent, but man-days of idleness more than doubled—an increase of 22,900,000 in 1951 to 55,000,000 this year. (A man-day is the time one man is idle for one day).

Some 3,500,000 workers were involved in this year's stoppages, as against 2,200,000 last year.

Economic issues, primarily wages, were the dominant cause of the large shutdowns.

Careless Rail Worker Sentenced to Death By Budapest Court

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — A Budapest railway worker was accused of causing a railway accident through negligence has been sentenced to death and Budapest newspapers reported today.

A brief report lifted the secrecy of the Dec. 26 railway accident which caused the deaths of "several persons" when two trains crashed in a Budapest suburb.

Imre Molnar, described only as "a railway man" whose "negligence and carelessness" caused the accident, had been tried by a court martial. He was executed Monday.

Dr. Clark Believed Canadians United 'As Never Before'

OTTAWA (CP)—Dr. William Clifford Clark believed that the impatient striving of Canadians for higher living standards, greater security and more leisure may present a "compelling challenge" for Canada's steadily expanding economy.

But the deputy finance minister also believed that Canadians are united "as never before" and whatever "the challenges may be, the Canadian people will rise to them with new confidence."

The 55-year-old financial wizard touched on the problems ahead in a 9,000-word speech which was to have been delivered before a Chicago conference of American financial and economic experts. But he died in Chicago a few hours before that meeting was held.

The speech, while reviewing advances in the Canadian economy in the last 10 years, actually was a summary of the second-half of Dr. Clark's 20-year career as deputy finance minister.

The Second World War, he estimated, cost Canada about $20,000,000,000, but Dr. Clark believed that the "first lurch forward" in the rapid expansion which followed the war came from the war itself.

But the growth sprang also from the Laurentian shield — the V-shaped area of rock which is Canada's geological backbone and probably "its greatest treasure trove of mineral wealth."

Coelacanth, Once Thought to Be Extinct 50 Millions Years, Caught

DURBAN, South Africa (Reuters) —A scientist radioed Monday night from the island of Anjouan, one of the off the Madagascar coast is a genuine coelacanth, a fish once thought to have been extinct for 50,000,000 years.

J. R. L. Smith sent the message from the plane on which he is flying back to Durban from the Comoro Islands. He said he was "elated" with the results of his examination on the little isle of Dzoudzi where the specimen was caught.

The creature is about the size and weight of a small man, with fins shaped like crude arms and legs.

The coelacanth is suspected to be the "missing link" between the stage when evolutionists say organisms crawled out of the sea and began living on land.

The specimen was caught off the Comoro Islands, between Africa and the island of Madagascar. Professor Smith, an ichthyologist (fish expert) from Rhodes University, made the hurried flight to reach the creature before it could rot.

His investigations may fit into place bits in the evolutionary puzzle which have plagued scientists ever since Charles Darwin came up with his then-revolutionary theory of evolution.

Scientists have long known such a fish once existed through their study of ancient fossils, but until 1938 they believed the species had died out about the time that land creatures first developed from it creatures—some 50,000,000 years ago.

It wasn't until 14 years ago that the first coelacanth was caught, off South Africa, and it definitely before Smith and other scientists could get a good look at it.

3-Year-Old Boy Burned to Death In Farm Fire

STRATHROY (CP) — A three-year-old Adelaide township boy, left in care of a baby sitter, was burned to death Sunday night in a blaze which levelled a large two-storey farm home a mile north of here.

Three rescue attempts to save the boy, Paul Gast, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Gast, were thwarted by flames and heavy smoke.

Mr. and Mrs. Gast and two older boys, Roger and David, left Paul in charge of a niece, Mary Lee Thompson, about 15, while they visited Thedford. Another couple occupying quarters in the same house were Mr. and Mrs. Len Canon, were also away at the time.

The Gasts returned to see their home a mass of flames. Mrs. Gast pleaded but believer her baby had perished and kept repeating: "Where's my boy? Where's my boy?"

The baby sitter was driven back by smoke when she tried to get upstairs to rescue Paul. She telephoned her sister, Alex Thompson, and a neighbor, Frank Sinclair. Sinclair twice tried to reach the child by using a ladder but smoke and heat thwarted him.

Workman Falls Into 100-Foot Coal Hopper; Killed

OSHAWA (CP)—Robert S. Pollard, 27, was suffocated Monday when he fell into a 100-foot coal hopper at the General Motors plant here.

Pollard, a stoker, either slipped or fell into the hopper. Fellow-workplant employees managed to get Pollard's head clear but coal continued to slip down on him.

Each time Pollard's head was brought up he was given oxygen, but finally rescue workers had to give up oxygen and concentrate on getting him out. He was dead when freed.

End Stalemate With Networks On TV Programs

TORONTO (CP)—United States television programs will be channelled into Canada as the result of the breaking of a stalemate over CBC programming, CBC and the U.S. networks, the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The programs will reach Canada over a microwave relay system from Buffalo to the CBC's Toronto television transmitter. Pending completion of a microwave hookup between Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal, probably next spring, the U.S. programs will be made available to Montreal's station CBFT by kinescope filmed recordings.

The only U.S. programs now televised in Canada are a few recorded programs from the Detroit area station.

First of the programs under the new arrangement is expected to appear on screens within range of Toronto's station CBLT next week. It will probably be Studio One, an hour-long dramatic program.

Working Time Lost Through Disputes Low

OTTAWA (CP)—Working time lost through industrial disputes in November was the lowest for any month this year, the labor department reported.

However, time loss for the first 11 months of 1952 was much heavier than in the same period last year.

Until the end of November of this year, strikes and lockouts caused the loss of 2,822,268 man-days. For the same period in 1951, the loss was 785,904 days.

Preliminary figures for November of this year, the department said, showed 22 strikes and lockouts involving 5,084 workers and with a loss of 44,176 man-days.

In October, 27 strikes in progress involving 13,322 workers with a time loss of 165,009 days.

Making Progress

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario is making progress in highway safety but 1,000 persons died and 22,000 were injured during 1952, Ontario Highways Minister Doucett said Monday.

In a year-end message Mr. Doucett suggested the following New Year's resolution: "Be alert and walking, let us use the simple Christian principle 'do unto others as you would have them do unto you.' This golden rule alone will save more lives, human suffering and dollar losses than any possible legislation, law enforcement or safety engineering."

Assumption Asks Full-Fledged University Rank

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—The first step in a program under which Assumption College will become a full-fledged university will be taken in a private bill to come before the Ontario legislature at its next sitting.

The bill, if passed, will "enlarge and increase the powers, rights, and privileges" of the college. Specifically, it will give the college the power to grant its own degrees, a power now held by the University of Western Ontario, of which Assumption is now an affiliated college.

Application for the private bill was made "with the full cognizance and approval" of Western, according to a statement issued Monday by Rev. E. C. Lebel, president of Assumption College.

Weddings

FRIDEN—POLLOCK

Before a background of evergreens and candelabra with white tapers, a lovely Yuletide wedding was solemnized at high noon, on Monday, December 22nd, in Wellington United Church, by the Rev. R. R. Bonsteel, when Doris Marcella Pollock, of Harold, Ontario, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Pollock, became the bride of Allan Raybourne Frigden, of Madoc, Ontario, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Frigden.

The wedding music was rendered by Miss Jean Wallace, of Campbellford, who accompanied the soloist, Miss Muriel Hogle, of Lakefield, who sang, "The Lord's Prayer" during the ceremony and "O Perfect Love" while the register was being signed.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in her floor-length bridal gown of white slipper satin with lace inserts, and trimmed with seed pearls. Her shoulder-length veil of embroidered net was held by a coronet encrusted with seed pearls. She carried an arm bouquet of gardenias surrounded by white pompons.

Mrs. Douglas Merrill, of Campbellford, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing a floor-length gown of turquoise embossed organdy with matching mitts and hat. She carried a Colonial bouquet of white chrysanthemums and Christmas holly.

Mr. Ted Pigden, of Madoc, brother of the bridegroom, was accommodated, while Mr. Jamey Pollock, of Harold, brother of the bride, was groomsman. Ushers were Eldorado, acted as ushers.

The reception was held at "Springfield Farm", home of the bride's parents. The bride's mother received with Mrs. Harry Shea corded rayon, with holly red accessories and corsage of white mums. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who was attired in black crepe with navy accessories, and corsage of white mums.

For the wedding trip to New York City the bride chose as her travelling ensemble, a two-toned brown dress of worsted tweed, with matching accessories, bright green accessories, and topcoat of brown camel's hair with corsage of bronze mums. Charlotte Whitton, Ottawa's Mayor, 'Woman of Year' For Second Year in Row

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

A woman mayor who keeps in the headlines is Canada's "woman of the year" for the second time running.

Charlotte Whitton of Ottawa headed the list of outstanding women chosen in a Canadian Press survey by women's editors of Canadian daily newspapers.

Others high in the voting include Lois Marshall, Toronto soprano who thrilled reviewers when she sang in New York's Carnegie Hall and who now plans a three-year concert tour of Canada, the United States and South America.

CP asked women's editors to choose the year's outstanding women — on a basis of news interest, service to community and art; stage, screen and radio; music and public affairs, and to add one "human interest" person of the year."

The result: public affairs and politics of the year, Miss Whitton; sport, golfer Marlene Stewart of Penhill, Ont.; literature and art, Gabrielle Roy, Toronto novelist; stage, screen and radio, Ottawa-born Succession Duncan and Marshall.

Mayor Whitton has been given more space in Ottawa newspapers than any six other mayors. Two years ago she was the subject of the biggest vote any controller ever received in the nation's capital. When Mayor Grenville Goodwin died a few months later she completed his term and a year was elected in her own right.

For some months in 1951 she waged a friendly feud of words via the newspapers with Mayor Allan Lamport of Toronto. The two buried their differences last October at a Whitton-inspired prize match at Carp, Ont., for mayors only. Mayor Lamport was first and Mayor Whitton third.

"Next year if we girls have to have a woman to head the team should have to wear kilts," was the latest comment.

Another contender in both women-of-the-year and public affairs categories was Mrs. Tillie Rolston, 65, first woman cabinet minister in the Canadian Legislature. Mrs. British Columbia's Social Credit government named her minister of labor.

So was Mrs. Pauline McGibbon of Toronto, prominent Dominion Drama Festival official and first woman president of the University of Toronto Alumni Association.

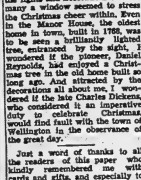
Kate Aitken of Toronto, radio commentator and world traveller, was given votes in public affairs and stage, screen and radio.

Others mentioned in the theatre group included Shirley Douglas, daughter of Tommy, at C. Douglas of Saskatchewan, now studying drama in London; Pat Mackenzie, Montreal-born radio singer; and Toby Robins, CBC television actress.

Suzanne Cloutier, who got most votes, is the daughter of Queen's painter Edmond Cloutier. In the past year she has gained international fame as an actress.

Mazo de la Roche, internationally known author of a quarter-century for her books about the Whiteoaks family, headed the literature and art class. Miss de la Roche's latest book, "A Boy in the House," was published in 1951.

Close contenders in this category were two French-language authors, Gabrielle Roy and Mrs. Germaine Guevremont. A year ago Mrs. Guevremont won the Governor-General's award with "The Outlander," Miss Roy's "Where Nests the Water Hen" appeared in English translation in 1951.



Votes also were given to Marianne Macdonald, 18-year-old McGill University student who recently published her first book, "Black Bass Rock," a suspense novel for children.

Marlene Stewart, 18-year-old golf wonder, was chosen leader in sports for 1952. Miss Stewart won the Canadian Ladies Close championship and is a member of the seven-member team to compete in British open and international contests in 1953.

Wellington on the Lake

CHRISTMAS TIME

WELLINGTON, — It was the night before Christmas, and the town of Wellington with its colored lights and illuminated Christmas trees made a scene like fairyland. Out-door Christmas trees made a pretty picture and the lights and decorations seen in many a window seemed at times like Christmas cheer within. Even in the Manor House, the oldest home in town, built in 1788, was to be seen a brilliantly lighted tree, entrancing to sight, I wondered if the pioneer, Daniel Reynolds, had enjoyed a Christmas tree in the old home built so long ago. And attracted by the decorations all about me, I wondered if the late Charles Dickens, who considered it an imperative duty to celebrate Christmas, would find fault with the town of Wellington in the observance of the great day.

Just a word of thanks to all late readers of this paper who kindly remembered me with cards and gifts, and especially to those readers who from time to time express appreciation of "the column." A Happy New Year to the editor and staff and to its many readers.

THE NEW YEAR

An untried path before us,
A way we cannot see,
That leads us ever onward
To the day when we
The way, though dark and dreary,
And the heart unknown,
May prove all bright and cheery
Since God walks with His own.

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP)—Radiant Nancy Oakes, who will inherit a huge gold fortune was married Monday night to Ernest Lysaard von Hoyningen Haene, young German baron, at a brilliant wedding service in this British colonial town.

The candlelight ceremony took place in the Anglican church of St. Mary the Virgin and was performed by the Lord Bishop of Nassau, Rt. Rev. Spence Burton.

A glittering society crowd from the Bahamas, the United States, Canada, England and Mexico packed the church and hundreds stood outside during the ceremony. The first part was in the centre of the church where the nave and chancel meet. After the bishop pronounced the couple man and wife, they moved up to the altar rail where they recited the Lord's Prayer and were blessed.

The church was decorated with gladioli, hibiscus and white carnations.

Governor Attends

The governor of the Bahamas, Gen. Sir Robert Ross Neville, with Lady Neville, attended.

Lady Eunice Oakes, mother of the bride, was present with her son, Sir Harry Oakes and Lady Oakes.

After the ceremony, a reception was held at Jacaranda House, Lady Eunice Oakes' home in Nassau.

The couple will honeymoon in Europe before going to Mexico, where the baron is completing languages and economics studies.

The bride wore a pale pink beige evening dress and jacket and a head covering of old Irish lace. Her only attendant was Countess de Premio (nee Lascelles McClure Cockerell of Montreal), who wore a light blue crinoline-skirted evening dress.

The Baron Yuru von Hoyningen Haene, brother of the groom, was best man and represented the family.

Born In Toronto

Nancy is the eldest daughter of the late Sir Harry and Lady Eunice Oakes and was born in Toronto.

It was Nancy's second marriage. Her first marriage to Alfred de Marigny was annulled by the New York Supreme Court in 1938.

Alfred de Marigny was accused of slaying Sir Harry Oakes, Canadian gold millionaire, in his Nassau home in 1943. Nancy stood by her husband during the trial and he was acquitted. The murder was never solved.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Certainly remarry—and make sure it's to the right man

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a divorced woman of 32, with two fine children of school age.

Do you think a woman in my position should remarry? If so, are there any Lonely Hearts clubs or Pen Pals clubs for women like me? I am the quiet type, and don't go out too much, so can't seem to find a good mate.—Mrs. H. H.

Dear Mrs. H.H.:

Certainly I think you should remarry, provided you find the right man. But you're not going to find him through clubs dealing with you know what, and it would be more unwise for you to try. Keep on the safe side and make friends only in the conventional way, by being properly introduced. You run entirely too the risk of another marital failure, do you not?

Try joining some club or other organization which is properly sponsored, such as, for instance, some community group, one of the clubs which you will find in almost any church, or a club at the Y.W.C.A.

I suggest that you inquire both at your church and at the Y.W.C.A. by your city's social work clubs. I am sure it will be easy to get in touch with one where you will find both new interests and new acquaintances.

Her boy friend deserted her—What to do?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a high school sophomore, and until recently was going steady with a senior about whom about I am crazy. All of a sudden he stopped writing me, and I can see no reason why he should do so. All his friends say he has no other interest, and that I should wait until he changes his mind again. I can't figure out what I did wrong, if anything, and I am confused and worried.

Should I date a boy I used to date last year, and who says he'd like to go with me again, or should I wait for this senior?—R. A. C.

Dear R.A.C.: I wonder if you haven't noticed among your friends, many instances of boys and girls going together for a time and then, all of a sudden, and apparently for no "good reason," ceasing to be interested and calling one or the other, or both of them, going out with someone else? I'm sure you must have observed this often, since young people have varying degrees of heart in their teen-age romances —which is only normal and well. Even though a boy or girl is likely to feel hurt for a time when this happens, it is really all to the good. For to know many friends well, helps both boys and girls to develop judgment about people, and so enables them as they grow older, to be wise in choosing "for keeps."

It isn't likely that you "did anything wrong" to make this boy stop dating you. What is more likely is that this senior has simply gone through one of those abnormal phases I've been describing, where he feels like changing girl friends. It wouldn't put too much faith in what his friends say about His having "no other interest."

So it would be smart of you to be ready to take on a new friend yourself, instead of sitting around mooping and wailing, in the hope the other one will come back. Maybe he will and maybe he won't, but he's much more likely to have his interest in you revived if he sees you're a popular girl who can get another boy friend easily; and doesn't waste her time and emotions over the one who's gone.

So go out with all the boys you can, including the one who would like to go with you again, and you will find that, even though the one you now think you like best doesn't come back, you'll have so many other dates as you won't miss him for very long.

THE station wagon set and the city dweller will both go for this very British looking greatcoat. Since the weather man predicts long cold winter ahead, a topper will be a boon and a joy to many of us in Canada.

Very tweedy, very smart, and very warm, it is London tailored with flared back, deep pockets, rounded collar and cuffs and a low slung martingale in back for a new and interesting touch. Made to fit over suits or heavy sweaters, choose one of the beautiful mixtures of green with brown, red with brown, and blue with brown.

There is an increasing influence being felt in fine silk satin and this glossening fabric turns up constantly in dressy afternoon and evening mid-season and early spring collections. Satin is used for a luxurious afternoon or little evening dress. A good choice for either the youthful or more mature figure. Below the wide-open V neckline, the sleeves are cut in one with the bodice. The flared skirt is set into slanting seams over the hips, and is lined with its own taffeta petticoat. Pearls and rhinestones twinkle here and there on the scroll braid trimming.

GOOD MANNERS

Here is a three-easy-steps pattern for your Christmas thank-you notes

At Christmas time your friends made their kind bows to you. . . gave you presents. Now it's your turn to make your kind bow to them. . . write them nice, prompt, enthusiastic notes to thank them for their Christmas thought of you.

So let's get pens going now. Now, it's fun to write, a prompt, thank-you note, for fresh and bright is the giver's kindness to you, as well as your joy in receiving the thought and the present. Cast with your friends as informally on paper as you would face-to-face. The thank-you letter we all like to receive is the letter that sounds just like the friend who wrote it.

Want a simple pattern for your thank-you notes? Here's one. . . in three easy steps.

First: Thank for the thought behind the present. Your note will have a charming send-off when you show appreciation for the thought that prompted the present. Too, too many notes begin with the colorless "Thank you for the lovely handkerchief," or "I love the book you gave me for Christmas." Here's too much emphasis on the thing, not enough on the spirit of the gift. Now, on the other hand, such a simple conversational beginning as "What a wonderful friend you are—to make me so happy at Christmas time!" gives a right-hearted upbeat to your note. You're on your way.

Second: Thank for the present itself. With enthusiasm, certainly. With gusto, if possible. Naturally, the more enthusiastic your words, the more your friend will welcome them, cherish them. Mention the present by name. . . then (saying (and maddeningly, to the giver) write about "your present." Best way, I think, is to say the present in front of you as you write. . . then give with your alert words. Just writing how "beautiful" or "lovely" or "pretty" the present is won't do. You can do better than that. Be definite. Chat enthusiastically about special features or the gift. Have you always longed to have that kind of compact? Your friend will be enchanted to be told this happy fact. Is the gift a charming color, perhaps happily your favorite color? Your friend will be thrilled to be told this. Will it have a special usefulness in your life? Then, slightly comforting fact to tell the giver. Or show your taste and discrimination by commenting on the interesting design, the handsome material. . . or perhaps the exquisite or dramatic marking or ornamentation. And suggestion, these, to help you to make your friend happy and proud that he or she chose just that present.

Third: Your closing thought is a propitious way of greeting to your friend, and high-hearted salutations and good wishes for the New Year. "Dearest love to you, dear, dear, and every thanks for your Christmas goodness to me. And may all your dreams of happiness come true in the New Year!"

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Pleasing voice an element of charm

Europeans seem to follow the same formula when speaking of Uncle Sam's daughters. They say that American girls are appealing in that they have slender figures, wear chic clothes, have nice feet, hot-and there's the rub! They say that they have shrill voices or no intonation. Well, of course, that is true of a certain type. It does not apply to all of us, by any means.

The woman who has a pleasing voice and who speaks in softly modulated tones, enunciating clearly and concisely, is usually a woman of poise and self-control. It is characteristic of her nature and upbringing.

Shouting is something that a nice woman doesn't do. She doesn't bawl out her children in a loud voice. That sort of thing is not in accord with good manners. If you yell at the kids, the first thing you know they'll be yelling at their playmates, even yelling at you.

There are homes in which loud talking goes on all the time. You'd think the members of the family were all hard of hearing. It makes for confusion, a disturbed atmosphere, and nervous tension.

Few voices are unpleasant by nature. If they are not pleasant, it is because there is too much volume used or the tone is pitched too high.

Some individuals talk too fast, running their words together and causing the listener to be on the alert to understand what they are saying. Others twang away on a single note. Then there are mumblers, who are constitutional to open their lips and permit their words to sound out clearly and crisply. Words should be carefully enunciated.

A pleasing voice is gentle, yet vibrant and expressive. We are judged by our voices, to a certain extent. The high-strung, nervous girl is likely to speak in a jerky manner, with a sort of breathlessness. Or she puts unnecessary emphasis on certain words.

If one is in doubt about one's speaking voice, professional training can be had, and it is worth the investment.

Square Dancing Advocated By Woman Teacher

NANTON, Alta. (CP)—A former Vancouver teacher is providing a physical education course to more than 50 children in this Prairie town 50 miles south of Calgary.

Mrs. Gale Armstrong emphasizes square dancing in her physical education classes attended by more than 20 children between 6 and 11 years old.

The children have just about taken over the cedar-log home she and her husband, Frank Armstrong of Nanton store proprietor, are building.

Four days a week the energetic housewife, who came to this town 18 months ago, has classes in the basement. Every living room is a temporary gymnasium.

A few months ago Mrs. Armstrong, once a P.T. teacher in Vancouver and an exchange teacher in many parts of Europe, decided she would like to teach children the square dances she and her husband were enjoying as members of the square square-dance club.

Swimmers, Too

In the summer she conducted a swimming class. There was no water handy so the students practised on boards raised on barrels and boxes. Then she took the class to the lake where the first day 12 of the 25 were able to swim. But the polio epidemic halted her swimming instruction for this year.

In the square dances, the children are dressed in western costume, the girls in long blue flowered dresses and the boys in cowboy outfits with holsters and guns. One of the routines the children like most gives the boys an opportunity to shoot their cap pistols.

Frank Armstrong met Gale Vick at a YMCA discussion meeting at Camp Elphinstone near Vancouver.

New Year's Dinner Features A Noble Standing Rib Roast of Beef

By Mary Moore

Since I found my soiz seated into them 2 beaten egg yolks, then beside a doctor friend of ours cold in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites. who is a capable cook when he is Pile into buttered casserole, brush up north on vacation—and a top with butter and bake at 325 treeshorman the other—I said deg. Fahr. for 40 minutes or until to him, "Say, what is your idea puffed and golden. of the perfect New Year's dinner?" He turned to look straight at me and answered I'm of English extraction, you know Mary. I want a big standing rib roast of beef. After that anything goes—but a heavy dessert. I lean to shellsets or light things like that." My brother echoed this—and I do too. What about your menfolk? Would they like this menu for New Year's dinner?:

Seafood Cocktail
Prime or Standing Roast Ribs of Beef
Horseradish Brown Gravy
White Potato Puff
Broccoli with Hollandaise
Lettuce and Onion Salad with Roquefort French Dressing
Mince Pie or Strawberry Sherbet
Old Cheddar Cheese Nuts
Assorted Christmas Cookies
Coffee

SEAFOOD COCKTAIL

Mix together lightly flakes or bite-size pieces of shrimp, lobster and crabmeat, and add salt, pepper, 1-2 teaspoon grated onion and green onion tops, up to 1-4 cup finely chopped celery. Have this ice cold. When ready to serve, spoon into small lettuce cups in sherbet glasses, pour over about 2 or 3 tablespoons

COCKTAIL SAUCE (for seafood)

1-2 cup chili sauce, 1-3 cup catsup, 1-3 cup prepared horseradish, 1 1-2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, and, if desired, a few drops of tabasco sauce.

To roast the standing rib, wipe with damp cloth, dredge all over with salt and pepper and paprika. Place on open pan; do not add water, do not cover—and do not baste. Have oven preheated to 325 deg. Fahr. If meat is taken directly from refrigerator these are the times for roasting: 2 or 2-1/2 hours—rare 20 minutes to the lb.; medium 33 minutes per lb.; well done 37 minutes per lb. Most cooks overroast beef. This means when it is sliced cold later it is hard and tasteless and the flavor and life have been baked out of it.

WHITE POTATO PUFF

Make Fluffy Mashed Potatoes—rather molster than usual. Beat into them 2 beaten egg yolks, then fold in 2 stiffly beaten egg whites. Pile into buttered casserole, brush top with butter and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 30 minutes or until puffed and golden.

HOLLANDAISE SAUCE

Don't make this if you are in a hurry—you must be calm, because it is the aristocrat or all savory sauces and requires all of your attention. Do not have water boiling—and cover it in top of double boiler melt 1-2 cup butter. Gradually stir in four beaten egg yolks, stirring constantly. Slowly stir in 3-4 cup boiling water. As soon as this is thick and smooth remove from heat at once—as it easily separates. Add juice of cayenne, 1-4 teaspoon salt, and 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Carry to table in warmed pitcher and pour at table. Do not pour this over the hot broccoli as I have seen it done when it comes to contact with the boiling hot vegetable.

STRAWBERRY SHERBET

Milk may be used instead of cream in this recipe if you wish.

Soften 1 teaspoon gelatin in 1 tablespoons cold water, then dissolve it in 1-4 cup boiling water. If using fresh strawberries (or raspberries) add 1-2 cup sugar to 3-4 cup of them crushed. If frozen fruit is used, add only 1-2 cup sugar. Also add 1-4 cup lemon juice. Let this stand 2 hours, stirring it once or twice. Then whip to stiff froth. Add gelatin mixture to fruit and fold in whipped cream. Pour into freezing tray and freeze to a mush. Remove to cold bowl and beat with rotary beater until creamy and frothy. Whip 1-3 cup heavy cream until stiff. Fold into it an egg yolk beaten until very light and a stiffly beaten egg white. Fold the beaten fruit mixture into the cream mixture carefully, return to tray, freeze until firm stirring occasionally.

I hope this is a happy dinner for you and yours. Tomorrow, being the last, day, of the year, I will receive and reminisce.

Australian Tennis Stars Whip Americans To Cl inch Famous Davis Cup

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

There wasn't much wrong with that Oshawa Truckers-Glen Keys senior "B" battle last night, outside of the fact it could have ended as a hospital note with the Glens on the long end of the score. However, fair-thinking fans will not begrudge the Truckers their victory. They were opportunists of the first water and it doesn't pay to blame them for their flying finest lines shot on a goal-rattling rampage. Their passing plays were a treat to watch and their defence would gladden the heart of any coach. They backchecked like fiends aiheit their shooting when close in was somewhat awry.

However it was one of the better senior "B" tilts played here this season, and the victory could have gone either way right until midway through the third period when the Truckers slammed home two lightning goals that turned the tide of victory in their direction.

It was lightning-fast hockey from whistle to whistle with both sides "laying it out" without mayhem or intent. The checking was hard going both ways and both squads scintillated in this department with the Oshawans having the edge.

All three Glen lines turned in sterling efforts with that of Dorsey, Peter Keese and Sammy Mulholland starring especially for a penalty-killer role. Sammy's goal was a honey and the best executed of the night.

The victory gave the Truckers a three-point margin over the Stouffville Clippers, who do not see action until Friday night when they visit the Peterborough Petes. The Clippers hold 17 points with the Kingston Goodyears one point behind and the Glens two farther back. The Glens meet the Goodies in Kingston on Friday night in what should be a diller of a thriller in the Limestone City Community Centre.

Up in Peterborough last night the Petes struck hard for victory, turning back the Orillia Panthers 9-6 in a well-fought game. The Petes vaulted into the Panthers to bag this fifth place and turn over the dangerous department to the western squad.

COME-BACK!

Up in Cobourg the junior "B" Hawks cut loose with a characteristic third period splurge, scoring five times in the goal assault to snatch victory out of defeat. The Cobourg youngsters had the bulge on the Hawks for two chukkers but Don Barrett's crew hiked up their hockey britches, and started a steady lamp-lighting parade. The win gives them a six-point lead over the second-place Peterborough Triple Links, who, by the way, will be the guests of the Hawks in Memorial Arena next Saturday night. The Petes kids handed the Hawks a fancy goleg-over up in Peterborough a few nights ago and the victory has given the Oddfellows crew'fill the'confidence in the world. It should be a good junior tilt.

A GOOD ONE!

Eddie Shore tells of the "best fight" he ever took part in, in a hockey game. It happened on Christmas Day in Regina when Eddie's club was playing Saskatoon. Says Shore:

"Lawrence Scott of Saskatoon, gave Abby Newell, of our team the butt end of a stick coming down the ice. Newell availed his chance, as all good hockey players do, to give it back to him. The opportunity came in the early moments of the second period. He dug the stick deep into Scott's midsection. Bob Scott, later a New York American star, and still later coach of the Eveleth, Minn., clubs, back in the mid-30's, quick as a flash brought his stick down on Newell's head.

"Red" McCracker, who was our goalie under and a great scrapper, jumped out of the pen and over to the Saskatoon bench. Taking off his gloves, he challenged the entire team. One by one they came off, and McCracker knocked them cold. Members of both clubs then got into the scrap. Five spectators jumped on the ice. Chairs were swung. Five hockey players and a spectator were taken to the hospital."

McGregor, Sedgman Triumph Over Trabert, Seixas to Win Famous Mug 3rd Year in Row

By GAYLE TALBOT

ADELAIDE (AP) — Australia's great combination of Frank Sedgman and Ken McGregor whipped Vic Seixas and Tony Trabert 6-3, 6-4, 1-6, 6-4 in the deciding doubles match today to clinch the Davis Cup for the third year in a row.

The U.S. 2oss in three straight matches will go down as one of the most one-sided in cup history.

Numerous times teams have dropped the first three matches in the challenge round but research fails to unearth when one side was able to win only one set in two days.

Seixas and Trabert really never had a chance against the brilliant Aussie pair today. Even the lanky Trabert dropped his opening service to give the Aussies a 3-0 lump it was obvious to the capacity crowd of more than 15,000 that they were sitting in on a slaughter.

For the second straight day McGregor played probably his most brilliant tennis of his career. He so dominated the court that there was no place for the Americans to go but out.

Sedgman managed to break Sedgman's service twice in winning the third set with Trabert got to the long-legged partner.

Some expert opinion held that the U.S. disaster was mostly attributed to Seixas' failure to win points from the right court and give Trabert a chance to go for winners from the left court. However, such talk was highly technical and all it boiled down to was that Tony and Vic just didn't have the guns to match those of these terrific Aussies.

Only in the first set Trabert was setting the ball and Seixas was knocking it out. In the second set, they reversed the pattern with the same sad results.

In those two sets Sedgman and McGregor scored clean winners—the majority of them on McGregor's service. In these two sets the Americans scored only nine placements—six of them by Seixas.

Trabert's erratic form might be largely attributed to the exhaustion he suffered in losing his singles duel with McGregor in Monday's killing heat.

Eddie Sawyer Ex-Leaf Manager Quits Baseball

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Eddie Sawyer, fired last year as manager of Philadelphia Phillies, announced today he is quitting baseball in favor of private business.

Sawyer, former Ithaca, N. Y., college professor, who directed the Phillies to the 1950 National League pennant, was removed in mid-season this year as manager and given a job in the club's front office. He was succeeded by Steve O'Neill.

His retirement from baseball after 18 years in the game in both the minor and major leagues disclosed rumors that Sawyer would succeed Fred Haney as pilot of the Hollywood club in the Pacific Coast League. Haney recently was named manager of Pittsburgh Pirates, a post for which Sawyer also had been mentioned.

No Minor Job

"I wouldn't be interested in a minor league job," Sawyer said at his home, where he is recuperating from a grippe virus attack.

Sawyer was in the first year of a two-year contract at a reported $35,000-a-year, plus bonuses based on attendance, when he was dismissed. He has at least $70,000 coming to him under the contract even if the bonuses are withheld and that he expected to reach an amicable adjustment of the contract with Phillies president Bob Carpenter.

Sawyer left his managing job with Toronto Maple Leafs to pilot the Phillies in 1949, succeeding Ben Chapman. He resigned when the club was floundering in last place. He directed the team to a sixth-place finish that year. In 1949 the youthful Phillies "zoomed as the Whiz Kids," finished third.

The kids surprised everyone and on the verge of a hot mid-season streak, won the 1950 senior circuit flag in the windup. They lost four straight games to New York Yankees.

The slump that overlook them in the last month of 1950 was carried right into the 1951 season and the team dropped to fifth place. When the club started poorly in 1952, Carpenter removed Sawyer in favor of O'Neill. The Phillies finished third last season.

Red Wings Hold Comfortable Margin At Top of National Hockey League

MONTREAL (CP)—Waiting confidently for the new year and the second half of the season, Detroit Red Wings hold their most comfortable lead in the National Hockey League race since they took over Dec. 11.

Early in the season, the Red Wings held first place briefly and then sagged, but never too far off the pace.

The NHL's official statistics, released today, show clearly why Detroit is sitting on top with a six-point margin.

The Wings last lost a game Nov. 23 when they were shut out 3-0 by Chicago Black Hawks, then the bosoers. The Wings were in fourth place, four points behind Chicago.

Since then, they have gone unbeaten in 15 games—eight wins and seven ties for 23 points.

The Wings are the first team to pass 100 goals this season. They have 111 and have been scored against only 87 times. Terry Sawchuk leads the goalies with a goals-against average of 1.97, including three games with substitutes in the Detroit net. The nearest to that is 2.15 for Gerry McNeil of Montreal Canadiens.

Behind the Red Wings and their 53 points it's still a dog-fight for the next four places. During last week's play, Chicago crept ahead of Canadiens for second place with 37 points. Canadiens have 36, one more than Toronto Maple Leafs, who displaced Boston Bruins for fourth place but hold it by only two point, New York Rangers remain in the cellar with 30 points.

Detroit's Gordie Howe now has a five-point lead in the scoring race after last week he has fallen rolled up four goals and two assists for a 21-20 count of 41 points. His 21 goals leads the league in that department. His 20 assists are tied by Wally Hergesheimer of New York, Maurice Richard of Montreal and Alex Delvecchio of Detroit.

Hergesheimer clung to second place in point-scoring behind Howe, getting one goal and two assists. He now has 36 points.

Below them the positions underwent changes. Detroit's Ted Lindsay, with three goals and four assists, jumped from fifth place to third and is on Hergesheimer's heels with 33 points.

Richard, with nary a point, dropped back to fourth place. He has 32 points.

Paul Ronty of New York moved ahead of Delvecchio for seventh place, now having 27 points to Delvecchio's 26.

A trio with 23 points each follows. They are Sid Smith of Toronto, Red Kelly of Detroit, highest scoring defenceman in the league, and Cal Gardner of Chicago.

Behind Sawchuk and McNeil in the goalies' standing come Jim Henry of Boston with 2.33; Harry Lumley, Toronto 2.65; Al Rollins, Chicago, 2.66, and Chuck Rayner, New York, 3.07.

Toronto is the most penalized team with a total of 463 minutes. Red Wings' Ted Lindsay is still the most penalized player. He has sat out 70 minutes.

Equalization of NHL Team Strength Reason for Injuries Says Smythe

By MEL SUFRIN

Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (CP)—Conn Smythe predicted Monday night that the National Hockey League will have a "casualty list a mile long before the season is over."

The managing director of Toronto Maple Leafs, in New York for a few days before heading south for a Florida vacation, commented in an interview on the host of injuries suffered by NHL players this season.

"Closer competition" was one reason he gave for the increased number of players sidelined with injuries.

"The teams are so evenly matched you've got to fight like a demon every night," he said. "There isn't a chance that you're going to win every game and not get injuries."

It used to be, Smythe said, that a team could occasionally rest some of its players in games against weaker teams in the league. But now, with the clubs so closely matched than in years, every game is a crucial one and coaches are sticking as much as possible to their first-string talent.

The result is that a coach often takes a chance on a player with a sore knee and ends up with a full-fledged casualty.

Smythe's Leafs and the Rangers, whom they meet here Wednesday night, are among the clubs hampered by injuries.

Toronto is without Max Bentley, George Armstrong, Rudy Migay and Howie Meeker.

The Rangers had their trouble earlier in the season, losing goalie Chuck Rayner, centre Don Raleigh and defenceman Leo Reise for various periods.

Detroit casualties have been hurt by the loss of Elmer Lach and Billy Reay and Detroit Red Wings, though they lead the league with a 15-game undefeated streak, are likely to feel the loss of goalie Terry Sawchuk, who suffered a broken bone in his leg.

Jack Cooke Given Honor

TORONTO (CP) — Jack Kent Cooke, owner of the Toronto Maple Leafs baseball club, Sunday was named minor league executive of the year by the Sporting News, a baseball periodical.

Selection of the 39-year-old Cooke who bought the Leafs July 4, 1951, was based on the fact that during the last season the Toronto club's first-division club for the first time in seven years, and set an all-time Toronto attendance mark of 469,000.

Last month Cooke was asked to address the minor leagues' convention in Phoenix, Ariz., on methods of increasing attendance. Cooke's methods of the last season included new-ear giveaways and vaudeville stunts on the ball field.

The Leaf attendance last season was ahead of the pennant-winning Montreal Royals, who drew slightly more than 300,000.

Oshawa Truckers Edge Glen Roys 5-3; Junior Hawks Defeat Cobourg 8-6

Strike Swiftly in 3rd Period With Two Goals to Grab Win In Hard-Fought Senior Battle

By GEO. M. CARVER
(Sports Editor)

Giving ample evidence of why they lead the group, the Oshawa Truckers scored a 5-3 decision over the Glen Roys in a rousing packed "29" battle there last night.

The victory consolidates the Oshawan's hold on top spot and holds their point total to 30, three better than the second-place Stouffville Kilgore.

A sixteen-second lapse on the part of the Glen defence in the third period swept the tide of victory to the Motor Citizens' crew. With the score tied at three-all, Samolenko drove Peter's rebound into an open net and sixteen seconds later Tony Parisi "struck out" on Thaler's blue-line drive to put the visitors two up.

It was one of those "fit" games played here this season and 1373 paid pewsters thrilled to a speedy hard-checking game that up to midway through the third heat could have gone either way.

Goalie Was Good

At that the Glens poured attack after attack at the Oshawa goal in the second half of the third period but Naylor in the Oshawa nets smothered every close-in drive. The Oshawa front lines were always dangerous and on not a few occasions the fine back-checking of the Glens thwarted what could have been goals.

The Glens spotted the Truckers a goal in the first thirty-three seconds of play and then burned on the fury of their attack to ring up three markers in a row before Oshawa whittled the margin to one with five minutes to go.

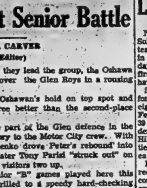
The second period produced the best hockey of the night with the clash and fire of the front lines and the hard-hitting but clean-checking bringing the spectators to their feet at times. Oshawa scored the only goal of the heat, and Vern Goyer drew the only penalty.

Play picked up where it left off in the third. Both teams whipped up add down the ice in speeding forays and both goalies came up with outstanding exhibitions. Then Oshawa staged a ganging attack. Peters drove in hard and Parisi kicked out his shot at an angle. He was straight off balance and Samolenko tobbed the rubber into the open net. Sixteen seconds later Thaler drove a waist-high liner from the blue line that Parisi whiffed on, and that was that.

Oshawa's passing plays were clicking nicely at night but they missed at times from close in with their shots. The Glens' defence hit 'em hard and often and vice versa, but Referee Bill Reason kept the game well under control although the crowd did not agree at times with his decisions.

Hard But Clean

He handed out seven penalties all told five of them going to the Glens. Brian Mulvihill drew a misconduct in the third period when he disputed the officials decision on a play.



Wilson opened the scoring in the first period after 33 seconds of play when he drove in with Samolenko on a neat passing play. Four minutes later Wilson got the gate for interference and Sammy Mulholland scored the prettiest goal of the night. He drove down the ice with Red Dorum and Peter Jones, took a rink-wide pass, cut in sharply across the goal mouth and fired the rubber home.

The game was held up for some minutes when Parisi was cut over his eye with a flying puck and had to retire for stitching replies. He had recovered somewhat when the Glens ganged the Oshawa net and "Nobber" Day put them in front from Deslardin's pass.

Four minutes later the puck rolled out from a free gang foray and lay there for a second or two unnoticed. Mulvihill picked it up and drove it past Naylor for the Glens' third counter in a row.

Nicolls tied it up midway through the third period when his screened drive from thirty feet out went past Parisi. It was the only score of the period with play being lightning fast.

Wardhaugh and Hooper got the two-minute seconds of each other but no damage was done. Then came the two sixteen-second goals and Oshawa was tucked in the Oshawa bag. The Glens smashed attack after attack at the Oshawa goal but Naylor smothered everything they tossed at him. Parisi came up with some fine work as speedy Oshawa front lines ripped in from breakaways and neat passing attacks.

DeSpirito Rides Four Winners; Three to Go

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Apprentice jockey Tony Despirito, driving to break the world's riding record of 388, brought in four winners in seven races at Tropical Park Monday and pushed his total for the year to 385 after the first half.

The nervy little Lawrence, Mass., boy drew thunderous applause when he came whirling home to win the first, second, fifth and the seventh events. Then he had two mounts in the third and fourth, finished out the money in the sixth and eighth, and was third in the ninth.

"I think I'll break the record now," Despirito said, "If I can just get the mounts."

His agent, Norman Sudduth, said that he has seven for today. "And I'm taking all the horses I can get."

Despirito was a tremendous favorite with the big week-day crowd from the North he forged ahead on Tedlin in the first race and won by six lengths.

Stage Five-Goal Rally in 3rd To Snatch Last-Minute Win; Score Four in Nine Minutes

By JOHN GOODFELLOW

Belleville Black Hawks last night staged a five-goal third-period rally to come from behind and defeat Cobourg Cubs 8-6 in the latter's arena.

It was a win of vindication for the Hawks who were bottled up for most of the 60 minutes. It was a heartbreaker for the losers who apparently had the key to the Belleville sheet of success, only to have it under the back porch in the dying moments.

Davey Jones led the winners with two goals and a pair of assists. Pat Casey scored a hat trick and Hull with two goals and one helping hand while seven other Hawks shared varying roles in the scoring.

Scores Four

Don Boswell added a feather to the hat trick by ringing the last four tallies for the losers. Frank McIvor picked up two goals and two assists, and Ted Campbell was right in the swim with four assists.

Cobourg opened the scoring at 21 seconds of the first period, McIvor taking Campbell's pass from behind the Hawk net and sifting a low shot past Barclay. Boswell came back to count the second from dead in front after being set up by McIvor and Halford.

Jones cut the score in half by batting in a belt-high pass from Gilmour. Hull started the play but Boswell was back on his mark with it 3-1 as Barclay was unable to smother successive rebounds from McIvor and Campbell.

John Casey cut the second Belleville goal at 1:25, backhanding a high shot past Lingard following a pass from Ray Hermiston.

Gilmour made it a new game at 1.10 of the second canto, waltzing in from the wing to tie up. The ever-present Boswell was indeed present four minutes later. Standing right in front, as McIvor's shot bounced off his chest and fell at his feet, he rapped it past Barclay.

Boswell again put the crowd in stitches at the start of the third, sliding a shot in from the edge of the crease after passes from Campbell and Halford.

Gilmour made it 5-4 at 7.35, sinking one from just inside the Cobourg blueline following a pass from Hank Therrien. Two minutes later McIvor strolled in and beat Barclay unassisted.

Hawks Ignite

At this point the Hawks caught fire. Hull got them back on a striking distance, tallying on a power play with Jerry Goyer and Al "Available" cane right back to tie it up at six-all as he moved in from the rivet and lifted a high backhander to the far corner.

The Jays weren't through-a Hull were back to stay a Cobourg break away. But Hermiston sank the Associated hopes on beautiful shot from 20 feet out with Casey and Hull assisting.

At 19.10, George Jacklin put the game high on the shelf, polishing off a fine play with Jones.

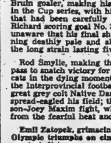
The Hawks played a fancy game in the final 20 minutes, knowing they could still score goals in clusters after the 10-day Christmas layoff. Cobourg fans still feel their club is out of its class in this company. But the Hawks' attitude still entitles it seems to be unfounded.

Despite the relatively high score, both goalies turned in excellent efforts—an indication that Cobourg and Stones haven't travelling in reverse. There was enough hockey thumping to satisfy a sadist.

The teams:

Belleville: Goal, Barclay; defence, Green and Goyer; centre, Jones; wings, Therrien and Gilmour. Alternates, Hermiston, Casey, Halstead, Jacklin, Lingard and Stones.

Cobourg: Goal, Lingard; defence, Dawe and Cavanaugh; centre, Campbell; wings, Halford and McIvor. Alternates, Halford, Bolkin, Hesson, Stuart and McBride, Bowen.



Referee: LeCompte; linesman, Case.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

If I could re-rail the film of 1953, these are some of the things I'd like to see:

Terry Sawchuk in the Detroit Red Wings net's, playing any one of those incredible performances he put on in Stanley Cup series; Sugar Jim Henry, the Boston Bruin goalie, making his last gallant stand against Canadiens in the Cup series, with his nose broken, his eye lids nasty cuts that had been carefully pried open before the game. Rocket Richard scoring goal No. 525 for a new National League record, unaware that his final shunt had sent the puck rolling in, turning deathly pale and almost fainting as he realized that the long trials lasting five games, had ended at last.

Rod Smylie, making the 25 yard run after taking a 36-yard pass to snatch victory for Toronto Argonaut's over Hamilton Tigcats in the dying moments of the third playoff game to decide the Interprovincial championship. The record is within the great grey colt Native Dancer, 2-year-old champion of the year, spread-eagled his field; the fantastic ending to the Ray Robinson-Joey Maxim fight at Yankee Stadium, our weighed, collapsed from the fearful heat and his own exertions.

Emil Zatopek, grimacing and shadow-boxing his way to three Olympic gold medals and a world record champion has the greatest distance runner of our time; coach Casey Stengel of the champion Yankees juggling to make those amazing pitcher changes, in the last game of the world baseball series; Joe Black, tall, gaunt, self-possessed Negro pitcher starting the opening game of the Series and winning it.

Big Jean Beliveau, giant Quebec Ace, and most-sought amateur by professional clubs, completing the circle of his great free-wheeling rushes, then roaring along to score as the Quebecers blazed their trail to the Alexander Trophy; Milt Schmidt of Boston Bruins, one of the greatest of modern ice stars, whistling home goal No. 200, the mark of Maurice 'Rocket' Richard and Bobby Bauer of the immortal Boston Kraut line of Schmidt-Dumart-Bauer, returning for one glorious night in the Big Time, to score a goal; George Genyshaw, Hamilton 17-year-old trap-shooting star from Saskatoon, with ice-water in his veins, winning for Canada its only gold medal at the Olympic games against the best shots in the world.

And the film of 1953 wouldn't be complete unless you were sitting on the 36-yard line when Edmonton Eskimos overcame a 19-point deficit and went on to eliminate Calgary Stampeders in the western football race and a week-later, after losing the opener of the two-of-three final right in Edmonton to Winnipeg, took the final game to give an assessment of everybody except Frankie Filchock, who called the shots all along.

What a film all that would be. I'd like to see it and so would everybody else.

Tables Tabbies Equal 'Loss' Record, Drop 26th Straight to Sarnia 3-2

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Tigers tied a record Monday night.

The Mountain City boys now can claim to have lost as many games as any team in the history of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series.

The Galt Moose Club of 1939-40 was previously single holder of the dubious title. Hamilton tied their efforts by dropping No. 26 as Sarnia Sailors came through with an overtime goal to win 3-2.

No Excuses

The Hamilton executive offers no excuses. They are in the process of rebuilding their club and are using several players who performed last year with Hamilton Aerovox Junior B team.

With the exception of Ab Conlick, Nick Pidsodny and a few others, the fabulous "old men of the Mountain" who made the Tiger name synonymous with championship, have departed.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. Greyhounds pulled back into a first-place tie with Sudbury Wolves by downing North Bay Trappers 8-3 in a scheduled Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior southern group game.

Hamilton gave the Sailors a good battle, 7Bill McFarlane scored the overtime winner. Others were by Don Emms and Ollie Haddon. Ab Conlick and Doug Smith tallieg for the Tigers.

Lorne Watters scored three for the Greyhounds and Doug Towers added two more. Singles were by Joe Bumbacco, Terry Biocchi and Mat Mateich. Reno Elik notched two for the Trappers and Frank Ringler, George Gosselin and Dan Wilkes potted the others.

Stratford Indians travel to Owen Sound tonight for a game that will decide first place. Stratford can push away to a three-point lead or drop one point behind the Mercurys. No NOHA games are scheduled tonight.

AT THE BELLE—Dashing John Payne and beautiful Arlene Dahl are starred with Sir Cedric Hardwicke in Paramount's Technicolor romantic adventure saga, "Caribbean," showing today and Wednesday, with a Warner Bros. Color Cartoon, and other festurettes.

This Is To Introduce . . .

"MY PAL GUS"

I am so proud of MY PAL GUS as of any picture I have ever shown in the Belle Theatre. And even a little prouder, because this is one that has my whole family, biz and little, cheering with, delight.

As a Theatre Manager, I would match its quiet beauty, its poignant honesty, its human warmth and laughter against the most lavish of spectacles, or the most breathtaking of adventures.

As a father, I consider it an epic of the heart, in the rich tradition of CHEAPER-BY-THE-DOZEN.

Its simple story belongs to everyone, for it touches each of our lives.

Richard Widmark, Joanne Dru, and George Winslow, a wonderful kid with a feature value, bring it to the screen for all of us to cherish.

Histamine, Bad Boy of Allergies, Tracked Down in New Studies

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The bad boy of allergies, histamine, is being tracked down in new studies at Washington University Medical school.

It's histamine that raises Cain when you breathe in pollens or eat foods or get anything else (allergens) that give you allergies. The pollen or other allergen damages some body cells. The damage by histamine escape from its prison within these cells to cause the sneezes, sweatings, hives, or other troubles of allergies. Allergic people take anti-histamines to counteract the histamine.

How and why histamine gets into certain body cells is not known. Nor is it known how pollens or foods or other allergens manage to damage such cells in allergic people.

It is not known exactly what cells carry most of the histamine. To learn this is a first step in the histamine studies directed by Dr. Helen Tredway Graham, associate professor of pharmacology.

Using sensitive methods of measurement, her team has learned that most of the histamine in blood is carried by two kinds of white blood cells. One is the basophil which are rich in histamine, but few in number. Second is the neutrophils which have 1-20th as much in histamine as their neighbors the basophils, but outnumber them more than 30 to 1 in normal blood.

Basophils account for only one per cent of the white cells in healthy persons. Two other kinds of white cells, eosinophils and lymphocytes, also carry some histamine, Dr. Graham determined.

The amount of histamine normally in the blood is low. Much more is carried by cells in body tissues, and detecting these cells is the next step.

Histamine is famed mainly as a trouble-maker. Whether it is also a trouble - shooter, serving some useful purpose isn't known. It can dilate or constrict blood vessels, and one guess is that it helps regulate blood circulation to body tissues.

MARMORA Community Centre Rink Nearly Free of Debt

MARMORA — The annual financial statement of Marmora District Community Centre, recently published, is the best I must since the erection of the rink.

Owing to generous grants from various sources, the rink is now almost free of debt. These grants include $1500 from the Provincial Grant, $500 each from the municipalities of Marmora village and Marmora and Lake Township, besides $200 from Marmora Branch No. 370 Canadian Legion.

Instead of giving a cash donation, Marmora Agricultural Society did considerable work on the grounds and buildings, besides erecting a fine fence along the front of the grounds which adds to its appearance and usefulness. It is estimated that the cost of their work is over $1,000.

The statement, however, shows operating receipts to be insufficient to cover full operating costs so that support is needed from other sources.

Prospects are bright for a good hockey team this season.

Freight Rates Undergoing Greatest Upheaval in History As 1952 Comes to a Close

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada's freight rates, fundamental to the nation's economy but among its most controversial problems, were undergoing their greatest upheaval in history as 1952 came to a close. A huge house-cleaning of the outmoded rate structure was in progress. Apart from this, there were implications of a possible general boost in rates across the country.

Aside from a new series of rounds in the running six-year battle between the railways and a group of provinces, two developments stood out.

Royal Rates

First was an order of the railway-regulating board of transport commissioners directing the railways to set up an equalized scale of class rates—the basic tolls—between the Pacific coast and the western border of New Brunswick. The four Eastern seaboard provinces were exempted.

This was the major step in implementing the national policy of freight rate equalization laid down by Parliament in December, 1951. The board order of last Dec. 12 is to become effective tentatively Jan. 1, 1954.

The implications of major freight rate changes were contained in a proposal to the board for a radically-new method of establishing freight rates, separate from the equalization scheme.

This was from the Canadian Pacific Railway, which for years has been the "yardstick" for establishing rates on the basis of its current financial needs from time to time. The CPR now wants the board to revamp the rate-making set-up to let the company earn a six-per-cent rate of return on its investment in railway property.

This suggests giving the railways authority—though they would not necessarily use it—to jump tolls by about 30 per cent. In a separate application pending the board decision on the over-all principle, the railways ask specifically for a rise in per-cent boost on the rate-of-return principle.

More Changes

That application is distinct from the railways' application for a nine-per-cent increase—about $43,200,000-a-year—to cover new wage rates, which the board granted in December. The two rate-of-return cases are to be heard by the board early in January.

On the normal—or fighting—freight rate front during 1952, there were both wins and losses by the antagonists.

A major victory for the provinces was a decision by the transport board to throw out a railway application for an increase of eight per cent in the fall. It was their first clearly-defined win in six years, though they had managed to shave down the amounts sought by the railways in some earlier cases.

In the earlier cases, the railways first asked 30 per cent and got 21 (in 1948), asked 30 and got all of it, between 1948 and 1951, and asked 22 and got 17 between 1951 and 1952.

The increases won by the railways—with the last nine-per-cent hoist—add up to 65 per cent above rates in effect before 1948 on the traffic to which they apply. This is about half of the carriers' $1,000,000 freight revenue.

L. Norman. In his sermon with text, "There Was No Room in the Inn," Mr. Norman arrested attention and gave food for thought and reflection. The Christmas numbers of the choir were appreciated.

Youth Brigades Ordered Purged Of Enemy Elements

By TOM REDDY

BERLIN (AP) — Communist masters of East Germany Sunday ordered their youth brigades purged of "enemy elements."

The order by the party central committee was published in the newspaper of the Free German Youth, (FDJ), which said the purging process will start in Feb. The brigades now have 3,500,000 members, including the "Young Pioneers", who range in age from six to 14.

The purge order contained a surprisingly frank admission that the Communist regime cannot even trust the core element on which it has been leaning most heavily — the indoctrinated youth.

In the last three years, the East German regime has shoved many other groups aside to butter up the youth. They have been given special vacation priority on sports equipment, free entertainment and trips to Berlin.

900,000 Brought In

In 1950, more than 500,000 blue shirts were brought to the Soviet sector of Berlin for a giant Whitsuntide rally. Thousands who sneaked into the West sector went back to the Soviet zone with the clear impression capitalism seemed to have something more to offer than what they had.

A year later, the world youth festival in Berlin, sponsored by the Kremlin, attracted 1,000,000. Again there were large ranks of youth exposed to Western ways.

The central committee's purge order stated that the FDJ must "weed out the enemy elements from its ranks and sharpen the class fight."

Asiatic Seamen Seize Freighter For Red China

HONG KONG (AP)—A mutinous crew of Asiatic seamen seized the Norwegian ship Rostro last month and sailed to Communist China, the ship's agents reported today.

Wallem and Co., quoting a Canton newspaper, said the Rostro's skipper, Capt. Adolf Buhre, 74, died of shock while his ship was being pirated.

The newspaper, Nanfong Yatpo, confirmed previous reports that the Rostro had been taken to the Communist mainland.

The freighter disappeared mysteriously in pre-dawn darkness Nov. 14. It had no clearance papers, no cargo and little fuel.

The Nanfong Yatpo said crew members seized the ship because they wanted to cast their lot with Communist China. The Rostro was taken to Whampoa, the dock area of Canton. Buhre's body was examined by a doctor who said he died aboard ship of natural causes, aggravated by seizure of his ship.

The paper said Buhre was buried in Canton.

Sunday's on Formosa, the Nationalist Chinese ministry of communications announced it had taken over the Norwegian freighter Rider also owned by Wallem and Co., after its Chinese crew mutinied on a voyage to Japan.

No reason for the mutiny on the Rider was announced. Nationalist sources said her Portuguese captain, Pirtes Marques, would be given transportation to Macau, a Portuguese colony west of Hong Kong.

EYE ON HORSES

OLD THRAFFORD, England (CP) — Members of the Lancashire County Cricket Club here were asked to wear binoculars—on horses —at the club grounds. Complainants charged that club telegraph booths were monopolized by members betting on horse races.

Parking Authority Receives Offer To Build Garage

TORONTO (CP) — The Telegram says today in a newspaper story the Toronto parking authority has received an offer for construction of a $6,000,000 parking garage under the proposed civic square.

It says the offer is from Civic Garage Co. Ltd., subsidiary of Garry Carter Inc. of New York.

The project would be built on a 99-year lease at 16 per cent gross income.

The paper quotes Carter as saying Square development. "Affording access to four downtown streets, it would accommodate up to 2,000 short term and long term parkers daily.

Parking problems led to formation early this year of the parking authority, a three-man non-political board of taxpayers by former mayor Ralph Day.

Hard Acres

by

Harry Meldrum Moore

Curly returned to the Depot to find the street lights burning, the pipe line in and the streets ready for grading. Peter told him that Belanger's running mate had not arrived from Toronto—behind a freight wagon and that she was stabled at the track. Danger Signal, her jockey, was getting his supply for the Doncaster celebration.

That night at Hard Acres, Curly asked first if she had ever done anything about having her milk drawn made out. When Hazel said she had not, Curly said, "I think you'd better. You invited George Godfrey to be our guest some week-end and I want him to see you at your very best."

"The railway president coming here?" Hazel asked, "Curly Brown, you're the limit! What will you be up to next?"

"Goodness, I'm not getting pretty well acquainted," Curly said. "I have been invited around Hard Acres and see if I can find it."

"Yes, Curly," the banker agreed, "I think you better do some digging—it might even pay you to do a lot of digging."

But once out of the bank, Curly forgot all about the Count and buried money. That was one story he just couldn't believe!

In its front page story of the week's Echo, Editor Joyce Price-Smith held in conjunction with the official opening of Belanger's Track Field, the Echo paid a high tribute to the foresight and generosity of the man who made such things possible.

Mr. Belanger," the Echo pointed out, "is not only a man of exceptional business ability, but he is generous to a fault. His philosophy of life appears to be the more one gets, the more one should give.' His sports field will long redound to his credit. Incidentally, we can visualize now the time when it will become the sports centre of the north, the annual gathering place for countless thousands of people in search of entertainment, excitement, or just to meet in friendly greeting."

Of the program itself, the Echo said:

"Tuesday afternoon's program ran the gamut of sports events for everyone, from the very young to the very old. The district school teachers and their pupils, the sports committee, and just plain every day folks, formed a parade that was a delight to see. The clowns—Butcher Kane, Barber Brown and shy little Billy Peagle—were in their element and added much to the success of the long, but not too hot, afternoon. The horse race, if we may be pardoned for saying so, was most disappointing. It is altogether too much to expect farm horses, ridden by farm boys, to compete successfully against a thoroughbred horse, ridden by a professional jockey. It is possible that farm folk anyway are not running horse conscious, that they prefer a horse-and-buggy race in which they might compete with some hope of success.

"However taken by and large, the whole thing added up to a momentous event — a cracking good celebration for a first try. And to the program committee —Jules Belanger, Principal Harry Young, Postmaster Ferguson, Banker Northcott, Father Flanagan and Mrs. Butler and Miss Lottie Sweet, not to forget Reeve Curly Brown, who christened the sports field and officially declared it open in an all-too-brief speech; Constable Hugh Maitland, who brought the celebration to a fitting end without a incident or accident to Peter Blair, who started the horse race. Hats off to you all. Many thanks to Mr. and Mrs. John Public. Take a bow, folks, you did well!"

In another column the Echo carried the names of the winners of the various sports events. The best Peter could do was to win a second place in the boys' race, but Percy had made amends—for the glory of Hard Acres. The ex-lacrosse player from Toronto had shown his heels to all comers in the one hundred and two hundred and twenty yard dashes, and he had likewise outsprinted his fellow teachers in the same distances.

MADOC

School Concert

MADOC — Rupert's School, Madoc township, held its annual Christmas tree on Thursday evening. The school concert was filled with parents and friends of the pupils.

Miss Hughina Clarke, teacher of the school, welcomed the visitors, especially the parents, on their interest by their attendance. Cecil Robinson acted as chairman for the evening with the pupils presenting a varied program of recitations, songs and dialogues. After the program Santa Claus arrived, much to the delight of the children, and each one was presented with a gift of candy. The room was nicely decorated with colored lights and Christmas decorations.

Christmas Services

Christmas services were held in Madoc churches on Sunday. At St. John's Anglican Church a special carol service was held in the evening at which the combined choirs of St. John's Anglican and Bannockburn, under the leadership of the organist, Ronald Robertson, rendered a beautiful music.

U.S. Import Curbs Bring Angry Talk Of Retaliation

National Dairy Council Calls Act 'Deplorable'

OTTAWA (CP)—New United States restrictions on imports of Canadian dairy products have brought angry talk of retaliation from dairy officials.

The curbs Tuesday on Canadian powdered whole milk and buttermilk were "most deplorable," said the National Dairy Council, which represents Canada's dairy industry.

The council's executive secretary, W. K. St. John, suggested that any Canadian retaliatory action be taken against the heavy flow of U.S. vegetable oils—mainly soybean oil—which go into margarine, the dairy industry's biggest competing product.

A government trade official said the new restrictions are "deeply regretted." But government sources suggested that outright retaliation is another matter.

Considered Breach

When earlier U. S. restrictions were placed on imports of cheese, butter and other dairy products more than a year ago, the Canadian government made it clear it considered them a breach of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, and reserved the right to take retaliation against American products.

But officials said Tuesday the government may treat the latest curbs carefully, at least until the U.S. embargo on Canadian cheese, stock and meats is lifted next March 1.

The U.S. agriculture department's announcement caused surprise in Ottawa. The new curbs were opposite to the promise made by Canadian government delegates to a GATT conference last fall that he would seek to have the clause curbs carefully, at least until the U.S. embargo on Canadian cheese, stock and meats is lifted next March 1.

Quotas Increased

Quotas under those restrictions were increased slightly last July, but Canada and other dairy countries considered the action insufficient.

Then, St. John said the new restrictions are "a further blow to the prosperity of dairy producers in Canada's dairy industry had large surpluses which it had to export if it were to stay alive.

About 10,000,000 pounds of butter and 5,000,000 pounds of cheese were sent to the U. S. this year, he said, and Canada had "record high" stockpiles of dried milk.

Driver Facing Drunk Charge After Accident

Thomas Woodcock, about 25, of R. R. 6 Belleville, will be charged with drunken driving as a result of a two-vehicle collision near the Trenton city limits on Number 2 Highway about 6 p.m. Tuesday, Ontario Provincial Police at Belleville said today.

According to police, a car driven by Woodcock rammed into the rear of a tractor-trailer owned by the St. Lawrence Starch Company of Port Credit. The impact was so severe that an acetylene torch was used to pry the vehicles apart.

Woodcock suffered a head injury in the accident and spent the night in Belleville General Hospital. He was released this morning by the body of police and at mid-afternoon was still in Hastings County Jail pending arrangements for bail.

City, Provincial Police Combine In Making Arrest

Police claim that Yearwood drove his car out of an alley on Front Street and as he swung north his car collided with a southbound vehicle driven by Marilyn Ann Frost Sheet.

The licence number of the car was secured and when it turned out of the city on No. 14 Highway provincial police were notified. Provincial Constable Tod caught the car at Foxboro and returned Yearwood to Belleville where he was turned over to city police. Only minor damage resulted to the vehicles.

Happy Ending to Tragic Accident In Which Young Visitor Lost Eye

The final phase of a tragic accident which took place in this area last summer is now known. On August 1, a young child of Mrs. McClatchie of Delhi, holidaying with her parents some miles north of this city, was rushed to Belleville General Hospital, the victim of a fishing accident.

While in a boat, fishing in company of her father and brother, the little girl was caught in the eye by a fish hook which penetrated deeply into the orb. When the girl reached the hospital an emergency operation was done and the hook removed.

For days it was not known whether the girl would retain her eye, let alone her sight. A report from the attending physician at the time of the accident indicated it would be some time before the damage done to her eye could be judged. However, both the sight and the eye were lost as a result of the accident.

Dr. Van Blaklee, the physician who attended the girl explained today: "Although the child may have been fully realized, it was noted the vitreous fluid secreted in the posterior chamber of the eye between the lens and the iris, had drained away by the 36-mile rush to the hospital. This fluid, the doctor said, does not regenerate itself and thus after the girl's eye was damaged eye threatened to cause trouble for the good eye, he was removed.

But there is a happy ending to the story. The other day, Dr. Blakelee received a letter from the girl's father. The eye was also removed an artificial eye of plastic was put in its place. And now eye resembles the other good one exactly. An artist painted the artificial eye to match.

The father explained in his letter "the difference between them was not noticeable. He added, "Ann is going along in every place of worth and play with little colors. She attends school and joins in games with the other children. The accident has not interfered with her school work (Grade 2)."

Dr. Blaklee commended the little girl. "She was a grand little trooper," he said. "She is now in everything worked out all right for her."

IN MEMORIAM

SEWARD. — In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away December 31, 1950.

Nothing could bring back the past when your years were best,
Nothing could make the world of sorrow
To a memory of eternal rest.
Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by wife, Inez.

SEWARD. — In loving memory of our children father, Milton, who passed away December 31, 1950.

Nothing could bring back the past
The love a heart holds dear,
No one can realize the pain
Of those who linger here.
Sadly missed and always remembered by daughter Gladys Marker and family. p 1931

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP)—Base metals pushed steadily higher today in early afternoon stock market dealings but industrials and western oils faltered after an early gain. Golds made little headway.

Base metal gains ranged from pennies to about 75 cents. Barvue, Consolidated Smelters, Eastern Metals and Steep Rock were strong. Textiles and milcellaneous issues drew most industrial support. Papers, utilities agriculture, steels, food and manufacturing companies showed strength.

Western oils posted a mixed list of moderate gains and losses. Britalta, Dome Explorations, Gridoil, and New Superior were strong.

Senior golds drew scattered support. Secondary issues edged upward.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Cattle trade was dull today at the Ontario stockyards and sales were too few to establish a market trend. Receipts: cattle 80; calves 50; hogs 2,100; sheep and lambs 30. The holdover from yesterday was 900 cattle.

Choice weighty steers sold at 24-24.50 with good at 22-23.50 and common to medium heifers at 15-20. Good cows brought 13-14.

Choice veal calves were at 27-30 and medium at 20-26.

Grade A hogs were at 26 and dressed sows at 17.

Good lambs sold at 25.50.

Business and Financial Outlook for 1953

By Roger W. Babson

Roger W. Babson

1. Business will start the year 1953 in high gear. The pace will slacken, however, as the year unfolds, with total business volume for 1953 smaller than for 1952. The powerful supports of the Great Boom — construction and automobiles — will lose strength as the year advances.

2. Barring World War III, 1953 will find business operating under less government control than any year since outbreak of the Korean War. But don't expect removal of price controls to help profit margins.

3. Salient economic feature is the fact that our productive capacity has now been expanded to the point where, barring World War III, output can take care of both arms and civilian needs.

4. The handwriting is on the wall against inefficient operators. Their days are numbered. The successful businessman next year will be the one who can control his costs and stay out front in his market.

5. 7-strongly urge my business friends to get out and sell, and sell hard next year; but hire the best cost accountants you can for the back office. "Order takers" will find fewer jobs as 1953 moves along.

War and Peace

6. My forecasts for 1953 are made on the assumption that World War III will not strike during the year. However, I want to make it clear that "the fat is off" the day Stalin dies or retires.

7. The H-bomb gives us another lease on time. Our first lease, from Hiroshima in 1945 to the Russian A-bomb explosion in 1949, was fritered away in idle bickering. This time we will have another "breather". It may be our last chance.

8. 1953 will be most important in the struggle for World Peace. We will need more than an H-bomb to win the peace. We shall need a great rise in spiritual strength, which is not now evident.

No New Business Boom

9. The long business boom following World War II was beginning to run out of steam when the Korean War gave it a new lease on life. However, the stimulus of defence spending is already fading. Barring further international troubles, defence activity in 1953 will be a flow under, and not a new stimulus to, business activity.

10. Capital expansion will move into a readjustment phase sometime in 1953. This has been in outstanding economic force behind our long period of good times. Nevertheless, I do not now anticipate any sharp break in business. If a slide starts it should be gradual, not steep.

11. Big credit expansion has been a powerful agent in the arm for business during the past two years. I predict that in 1953 loan requirements will become more important than new credit creation. This could handicap over-all business unless advertising expenditures are substantially stepped up.

12. Under an Eisenhower Administration, I do not look for expansion of our money supplies as a result of increased deficit financing. Those expenditures, largely for Europe, another stimulating force will be absent next year despite the better confidence following the Eisenhower landslide.

More Conservatism in Government

13. Although General Eisenhower ran far ahead of his ticket, there has been a considerable gain in the conservative complexion of Congress. The margin in favour of conservatism is not measured by the slight excess of Republicans over Democrats. It results from the fact that several Democrats can be counted in the conservative column. The conservative will be on purifying Bureaus and Commissions.

14. All government departments will be at the service of the Republicans after January 20. Never before in the history of the United States has a conservative government had such a powerful bureaucracy at its finger tips. In 1953 we shall see the use or these bureaus to aid rather than handicap business.

Hang Onto Your Job

15. Unemployment will be no problem for the workers of the nation during the early months of 1953. Demand for and the supply of labor seem to be in good balance. Later, however, unemployment will increase, reaching its highest point toward the end of the-year.

16. While employment runs high during the first part of the year, strikes will continue to plague management. Unions, however, will be cautious so that they will not bring down on their heads the legislative wrath of a conservative Congress.

17. During the early months of 1953 amendments to the Taft-Hartley Act may be passed. The Great labor turmoil would surely result in severe restrictions on labor being read into the Act. All in all, I forecast a decline in strike activity in 1953.

18. Looking to the year 1953, I am urging my friends and their children to work more diligently at their jobs. They should not be fooled by present high demand for labor. Early 1953 should be used to "dig in" and work harder. Drifters will be the first to be let go.

Price Forecasts

19. Barring World War III and another drought, the supply of most raw materials, farm products, and manufactured goods promises to be adequate during 1953. Even the so-called invisible inventories in the hands of consumers are high as a result of heavy buying since the outbreak of the Korean War. I anticipate few shortages next year.

20. Do not forget that there is always a big IF in the supply situation with regard to farm products. Severe drought could cause havoc. One is already long overdue. Scan closely weather reports from the nation's "bread basket."

21. The demand for goods will be stronger in the first half of the year than it will be during the last half. Disposable income will hold close to record high levels during the first half of 1953.

22. Total pay rolls will hold well, with prospects favoring a slight drop during the late months of 1953.

23. Farm gross income will strengthen along seasonal lines during the first four or five months of 1953. If we then avoid drought, I look for a lower farm income during the second half of the year.

24. The trend of wholesale commodity prices will remain in a basic long-term downswing. Look for temporary price recoveries in many groups during the early part of 1953, but go not let them fool you.

25. Unless more international troubles or drought strike hard, living costs should average some lower in 1953 than in 1952. Here again, the tapering-off will occur late, not early in the year.

Retail Trade

26. Over-all trade in 1953 will be close to 1952 levels as far as physical volume is concerned, with a moderate decline in dollar totals. The most attractive merchandising investments should be: (1) Supermarket groceries; (2) Variety chains; (3) Mail order stores; and (4) Department stores, securing a few in the largest and most congested cities.

27. Speculative capital goods will hold strong during most of 1953. A definite slowdown, however, will take place at some time. 1953 sales of consumer durables should about equal 1952's total sales, which were restricted by the steel strike.

28. Movement of soft goods during 1953 should be about the same as during 1952. Some freshening of demand in the early months may be offset later by a renewed lull.

Real Estate

29. Barring World War III, rent controls will be a thing of the past in most areas by the end of 1953.

30. Home building will be less in 1953. Prices may weaken during the latter part of the year. Building costs should edge lower. Only small new houses will be in demand.

31. In my opinion, the cost of mortgage money will trend somewhat higher during 1953.

32. Construction of municipal and public works should rise moderately in 1953 as compared with 1952. There may be stepped up sharply late in the year if business falters. There may be a surplus of tax-free bonds.

33. A moderate slide-off in the urban commercial income properties can be expected. No bad break, however, seems likely in 1953.

34. Population trend is away from the big cities. Fear of possible bombing and automobile overcrowding will continue as a drag on city realty values. Continued migration from the urban to the suburban will help income properties.

35. For those who plan buying new homes in 1953, I strongly urge the purchase of acreage in suitable suburban areas. Surely, the H-bomb experience should quicken the trend toward subsistence farms.

36. As public housing programs are far behind schedule, the new Congress will not promote such in 1953 unless the need for pump-priming becomes much greater. The Ewing Will be Slight

37. Tax relief will come mostly from expiration of present laws rather than from a new enlightened tax program. Barring further international problems, the present corporate excess-profits tax will be permitted to expire at the end of June 1953.

38. If the need for new taxes continues high, after expiration of the excess-profits tax, the new Congress may consider additional excise or manufacturers' sales taxes. They may also serve to discourage consumer spending. If the war danger becomes acute.

39. State and local taxes may be increased moderately here and there during the year 1953. However, I do not look for total advances in such to be so great in 1953 as they were in 1952.

40. There will be no increase in capital gains taxes. Barring 1953; but read paragraph 46 below. Increased dividends received.

Foreign Trade Outlook

41. Exports will fall again in 1953. The drop in imports will be much less than in exports. The new Administration will be urged to promote foreign trade instead of foreign aid. Only by buying our products can foreign lands get them off the relief rolls. To save ourselves, we must help them more abroad, although this will be hard on some United States manufacturers.

42. I look for no change in the official United States buying price for gold. We won't "monkey with" the mint price of gold until the nation gets really "hard up". Conclusion: Profits Prospects, Stocks and Bonds

43. For the year as whole I look for business profits to be slightly lower than in 1952. Earnings will be better during the early months with a decline coming later in the year. Profit margins will be cut by stiffer competition from both domestic and foreign sources.

44. Recently upped wages, plus some additional 1953 boosts, will help put broader cost pressure on profits.

45. Some companies that have been hard hit by excess-profits taxes may show improved earnings when the excess-profits tax expires June 30.

46. There will be a cushion under falling profits provided by the current very high tax rates. If profits slide, Uncle Sam will share the heavier loss. This very fact, however, will make it difficult for Congress at redruce the rate of taxation.

47. Stocks are high historically. We are approaching the end of a long period of prosperity, much of which is based upon artificial measures. Therefore, sometime during 1953 I forecast lower stock prices than exist today.

48. Yet, do not forget that the stock market was at about the same price point when President Hoover began by a landslide in 1928. With business prospects good for early 1953, conference might again cause a temporary boom. If an "Eisenhower bull market" develops, I strongly urge readers to take profits and build up reserves. Within 13 months after Hoover entered the White House the Industrial Averages fell 100 points.

49. New Administration will not favor "soft money" policy. Therefore, some further rise in interest rates seems probable. For this reason favor high-grade, short-term bonds, rather than long-term.

50. Finally: Wise investors are taking no action unless prepared to follow a carefully planned and supervised investment program. The keynote of this program will, in 1953 as in 1952, prove to be a policy of diversification and selectivity. Among those groups which offer safety and good yield are certain fire insurance stocks, bank stocks, variety chain store stocks, food processing companies, and telephone companies. Even these may fall us unless our nation has a real spiritual awakening. This must include both you and me.

Lemay was held Tuesday by automobile for Florida, said he was turned back at the border by United States immigration officials. He said he couldn't understand why as he had sufficient funds, has certificate and other identification papers.

THE OLDEST HOLIDAY

In the calendar of history there is no more ancient festival handed down to the present day than the celebration of the New Year. It is as far back as records tell us, at the Babylonian festival of Marduk, before 3000 B.C.

It is traced with an affinity of observance to the ancient Jewish Purim and the Roman Saturnalia. The New Year began in Babylonia in the spring with the vernal equinox; in Egypt, Phoenicia and Persia, with the autumnal equinox; in Rome, with the winter solstice until Julius Caesar advanced the date to January 1, taking the first day of the month sacred to Janus, the god of beginnings.

To this day the Jewish New Year occurs near the first of September; Chinese between January 21 and February 19, in Russia, Greece and other countries where Julian the calendar is still used, on January 13 by our calendar.

But whatever the system of reckoning recorded history of mankind shows that the beginning of a new year has been treated with some special observance. In the early Christian Church the celebration of the day was at first forbidden but later it became a Christian festival although celebrated on different dates even in Christian countries for centuries afterward.

It was not until 1752 that January 1 was declared by the Parliament of Great Britain as the opening day of the year for British people.

While men since ancient times have maintained this special observance, its traditional spirit of celebration has remained essentially unchanged in contrast to changes in important holiday festivals of religious character. Mark-ing the New Year is mankind's time honored occasion for joy and happiness.

It is a challenge to new beginnings with new resolve and new hope. It is no other time in the future faced with happier assurance and greater expectation. For the time being the page has been turned upon the past with its failures and disappointments. In its place we start to write the highest promise of those hopes which are, after all, the mainspring of life and, indeed, the unique possession of man.

It is this unfailing stimulus of the New Year that ushers in 1953 on a brighter horizon, for all this the year ending has been marked by universal strife and tragedy, by war and the dying sacrifice of the battlefield. People looked upon grimmer days and withstood greater ordeals with much less hope and yet seen hope fulfilled.

Courage and hope are the watchwords today, have occasion to greet the New Year with greater joy than misgivings and with greater expectations. The grim picture of today's troubled world is not erased or blotted out by the burning of the page but by Canadians it must be regarded against a background of manifold blessings which rank us among the most fortunate of the world's people.

Canada has become a great and rich country. Only the stark reality of another war could diminish the promise of the great things that future holds out. While we enter another year no closer to universal peace, at least it is faced with the knowledge that in growing strength a world of peace has been won in the free world, and with gathering of greater strength the year ahead holds fewer fears than the one we have passed through.

Scarcely more than a decade ago a few obscure lines of a forgotten poet were heard for the first time by millions of people in their homes as the voice of peace in existence. They were perhaps never so apt as when they were made part of the Christmas message of the late George VI in 1940. Perhaps they are not inappropriate today:

And I said to the man who stood at the gate of the year:
"Give us a light that I may tread safely into the unknown."
And he replied:
"Go out into the darkness and put your hand into the hand of God.
That shall be to you better than a light and safer than the known way."
— Minnie Louise Haskins.

IMMEDIATE OUTLOOK

Businessmen, almost unanimously, believe that the United States will not escape a moderate post-defence recession—but most of them do not expect a sliddoff in business before 1954 or 1955. These are the chief conclusions drawn from a questionnaire circulated to readers of the N.Y. Journal of Commerce. Moreover, the survey revealed that the vast majority of American businessmen are convinced that the fight against any post-defence recession—if and when it strikes — will require co-operation and co-ordination of business and government policies if a deflationary spiral is to be prevented.

YEAR'S END

I shall stand smiling at the door
To let the old year out
And welcome, as so oft before,
The new year, with a shout.

But for the moment quiet there
I'll watch the old year go.

No cap of peper will I wear,
Me horn of din I'll blow.

Then when the bells once more
Their greetings say begin,
Through the wide-open door
I'll let the new year in.

Cassowaries Color of Worry

By Ed Reed

(The New York Times)

It was disturbing to learn in a dispatch from Australia the other day that the inoffensive individual had been hospitalized as the result of an encounter in a cassowary—or rather two cassowaries. It was disturbing because to the peaceful hazards of modern life seemed now to be added the hazard of being assaulted by an animal that looks, at least from its picture, as though it had been built from extinct commissaries ago.

It seems that an unsuspecting native lover or bird watcher climbed into an enclosure of the bird to get a better look at them. Two cassowaries resented this intrusion, and, though they were not particularly large specimens (only three feet tall, the dispatch said), it they attacked their visitor, knocked him down and proceeded to kick, beat and peck him severely.

While the general impression that this incident will leave on the American mind with respect to the cassowary's personality will doubtless be unfavorable, we feel we find on investigation that such an impression should be modified. We feel that we have reason to offer this rather foolish-looking creature a junior relative of the ostrich, as pugnacious, and the event in Sydney would seem to bear us out. Yet, in all fairness, certainly more charitable explanation is possible. The cassowary is so shy, indeed, so easy to take alarm, that when strangers appear it is quite very apt to launch a sudden attack with the thought that it is attacking in self-defense. It is hardly necessary to labor the fact that this state of mind is not fully confined to the cassowary. The fact remains that our cassowary is a timorous fellow and wants to be alone. Yet it's a trait wholly to be deplored? Many persons wish that now.

In appearance not unlike its relatives, the rhea, the emu and the ostrich, the cassowary stands on exceeds five feet in height. It has strong, powerful legs and its three-toed foot, the inner one of which is provided with a sharp claw, the strength of limb and keenness of claw are what make the cassowary a formidable antagonist in combat. Moreover, the bird has small, strong wings concealed beneath its black plumage. While useless for flying, these wings are powerful bludgeons. The peak of a cassowary is also a thing to be reckoned with.

At the same time, it must be firmly maintained that the cassowary is not a chronically belligerent, wholly-unlovely fowl endowed with lacking, fighting and pecking. Quite the contrary. When treated with kindness and love the cassowary can be kept as a pet or for the purposes any other fowl. It may also be useful for leather, its feathers for decoration.

Many persons who know the cassowary well are quick to point out that the bird has a number of commendable social and domestic qualities. For one thing, cassowaries are notable for their harmonious home life, and the male dutifully spends a large portion of his time tenderly the eggs his spouse has laid.

While the cassowary is not one of the most delicate members of the family of bone and sinew, it is nevertheless quite susceptible to certain diseases. The cassowary "will swallow whatever comes its way"; there is no evidence for any this includes the intruders or any other sort of man. But although it will swallow by the cassowary, like the ostrich, is noted for gulping down such things as nails, bolts, rocks, even coins and watches. Yet this habit has its advantages, for it is quite conducive digestive function. And the gastric juices of the stomach of the cassowary—extending to bolts, fruits, small animals and the like—will be found to be considered a democratic virtue.

All in all cassowary is a good, courageous cassowary, good nature, usual domestic fowl, hearty eater, and long-lived fowl. It does not demand him to those with an open mind, but it is a good bird for the moment, on the basis of the news from Sydney, would seem to be a bad press.

Letter to the Editor

Go-Slow Policy Advised

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

I found the following information interesting and revealing, in the course of a recent address delivered on your editorial page to Owen Sound Sun-Times and titled "Three Million Ontario Statistics" show, however, that it requires the output of 3,000,000 cows on 455,000 farms throughout the land to make these "dairy" essentials available to the general "consuming public" also, "More than 2,000,000 friends have left the land—indeed seven of our population, depend on the industry for their livelihood."

If the above is a factual picture, and to this citizen's ears it has the authentic ring of truth, one wonder just what is the reason for the "Government's go-slow" if not irresponsible — fashion, as though there were no dangers involved: "There are symptoms that dairy business, even, is not known it. on the way out. It may take a few decades to accomplish its demise; nevertheless, it is on the cards ing when pasture lands and dairy herds will become a thing of the past. The dairy business is going out for the same reason the binder and the horse and buggy have passed into history. Better methods push all the laurels from the scene, and better methods of producing butter will push the dairy business from the face of the earth when it is profitable and a great business should start now to adjust itself to the changing conditions." (By W. H. Colclough, in Stratford Beacon-Herald.)

The reasoning in the above writing is so fallacious that it is not purely avocal interests of the market-place are not motivated by any other concern than activating the latest idea or technique, in a given industry, to produce it more quickly the mostest for the leastest, and in the easiest and speediest way! Not a thought or attention will be given being clear as to just who is "pushing" whom.

That picture by your Owen Sound contemporary suggests the idea that there is a "push" element involved in the above problem, which is called "pull" in the "selling" remembering — i.e., if the road to the future is to be paved with progress and not with the "push and pull" oversight, and it seems to me that the "go-slow" policy is more stupid — to attempt to make-over the basic dairy farming industry in a hurry!

Pollsters Feel Better

(Milwaukee Sunday Journal)

If the "wrong again" election pollsters have been standing in the corner long enough, we suggest that they relinquish the dunce caps to the Cabinet-picking predictors.

For weeks, some columnists, columists and magazine experts have been announcing just who was to be tapped by Gen. Eisenhower for Cabinet posts. They did not qualify their prophecies as much as the pollsters did, they made it sound as sure as if they had had a chat with the General.

Of course, most of them were wrong. One magazine didn't make a single guess.

A leading predictor of things to come did little better. He had Governor Dewey as Secretary of State, Senator Lodge as Secretary of Defence, newspaper Warren as Attorney-General, Harold Stassen as Secretary of Labor. He was right on only one Cabinet post: Postmaster-General.

Wrong on eight out of nine, that gives him a batting average of .111 in the crystal ball league. Over the whole league, this seems to be a pretty good average, at that.

Arctic Lifesavers

(Peterborough Examiner)

The men who fly over this continent's northern frontiers have a speedy death if they're forced down and don't know the tricks for keeping alive in the Arctic.

For that reason, the U.N. Air Force has begun sending its flyers to the School of Survival maintained by the Royal Canadian Air Force. Half of the three-week course is given at Cambridge Bay 30 miles inside the Arctic Circle on treeless Victoria Island.

The flyers are taught to build igloos and snow caves—and they live in them during their training. They are taught how to recognize and prepare for eating about 30 different types of edible plant life and 50 types of animal life found under the snow or under the rocks in the Arctic.

Dishes the flyers are taught to whip up include such gourmet delights as "boiled mice and woolly housewort stew." It's a concoction of Arctic mice — which can be dug out of their nests deep in the snow — plus tht root of the woolly lousewort plant.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

PATHS OF PEACE

Paths well trodden are evidence that they lead to destinations well worth while. Paths of thought that were a shortcut to school, to the favorite swimming hole in one's youth, paths to a neighbor's home, and paths through the forest that led to a favorite fishing stream.

Nature's paths are nearly always full of charm and a sense of anticipation. How many times, as a boy, a group of us would go to the woods and there at which would presently itself, we would say: "Let's see where this path leads to." And that was the way of life. We keep coming to the end of our imagination, and we wonder whether to take them or not.

The brain is a mass of paths through which thoughts are forever coursing their way. Paths to things of beauty, to friendliness, to wisdom, to knowledge, to higher objectives—to peace of mind and heart. I think of that poem by Robert Frost, "The Road Not Taken" coming to the meeting of several roads — and "took the one less travelled by, which made all the difference."

The path to constructive living is laid through honest toil and nature. The path to personal happiness is laid through kindness, understanding, tolerance and love. There are people who so clutter up their minds that there is hardly a single path there that can direct them to a place of peace and happiness.

People complain most who have strewn their daily paths with the sour bitterness toward others, jealousy and a lack of consideration for the feeling of those about them, or with whom they come in contact. On the other hand, those who, through choice and selection, choose a path with purpose and direction discover themselves on the way to new meanings and hopes for happiness never dreamed of.

Said William James: "Be not afraid of life. Believe that life is worth living, and your belief will help create the fact." Select the plan as a path and it will lead to peace.

INSTEAD OF DYNAMITE

Dynamite is good medicine, or its active principle is. Dynamite is nitroglycerin absorbed in a porous material. Nitroglycerin was discovered by Sobrero in 1847. Use of it for blasting proved disastrous and some countries prohibited it. Nobel discovered in 1866 that when mixed with an infusorial earth called Kelselguh nitroglycerin was less dangerous to transport and handle.

Pure nitroglycerin, the "soup" of the safe-cracker, is not used in medicine, but a 1 per cent solution of it in alcohol is used, under the name of Spirit of Glonoin, in the dose of one or two drops; also tablets, each containing 1/100th of a grain or 1/200th of a grain. Because of its volatility medicinal nitroglycerin must be kept tightly stoppered, and if in tablet form, freshly-made tablets should be used lest the medicine lose its strength in standing.

Nitroglycerin relaxes, dilates, opens up the muscles of arteries (not capillaries), unlike upon miles of them throughout the body, and so lowers blood pressure. Under its influence the heart beats faster, the arterial blood pressure is lowered, but it is a mistake to regard nitroglycerin or any other nitrate (amyl nitrite (banana oil), sodium nitrite) as a heart stimulant.

Within a minute or two after one swallows a drop or two of spirit of glonoin or dissolves a nitroglycerin tablet under the tongue, the effect may be noticed. Acceleration of the heart beat, throbbing in the head, amounting to headache in some instances, flushing of face, pounding of heart beat, throbbing in temporo parhaps dizziness or fainting. These effects occur so quickly that it is well for one taking the first dose of any nitrite to take it sitting or lying down. The effects last for only an hour or two at the longest. Because of the fleeting action of such medicine it is necessary and advisable in many cases to repeat the dose every two or three hours or several times a day.

There is no habituation to fear. Many good physicians advise patients with colic or another heart or artery trouble to carry nitroglycerin tablets in pocket or purse and take one whenever distress or threat of it occurs. In my booklet I tell you how to use nitroglycerin to relieve "restless legs" — if you don't know what this means, never mind. Many thousands of current issue readers have reported that they have found nitroglycerin tablets more satisfactory than 1/150th or 1/200th grain nitroglycerin. Same are more expensive, of course, but less abrupt, milder and longer sustained.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

For most of us, the study of history means the impression that the people, our own people, 900 years ago, were quite unlike and drastically different from us. Not merely did they have none of our equipment, such as radio, running water, electric light, kitchen gadgets, motor cars, breadmen, the milkman, the postman. They somehow lived odd, stilted lives. They had their own odd, formal, stiff little manicottes.

But when we get back 2,000 years to the Romans, we lose many of these illusions. We find people who are not unlike ourselves. We see them in the arts. In their arts we see, now, kings, rulers, priests, warriors, and in their sculpture, that only the top layers of society get into the arts. Now, as now, kings, rulers, priests, warriors, and in their sculpture, we look at Egyptian carvings, we think what strange people the Egyptians were. Viscount Massey in his cocked hat and vice-regal costume, some bits and blankets in the museum, and a couple of local regiments in their dress uniforms and their back for their annual procession, nobody would ever guess that you and I had been here at all.

But people like you and me have been here all along.

RETROSPECT

The last day of the year!

Maybe it was good or maybe it was not quite so good—for maybe it was very bad. But anyway another year has gone. Perhaps some of these lines made some mistakes during the past twelve months.

Perhaps one of us has superimposed some triumph, had some joy, experienced some real achievement. Or maybe not much bad fortune, some good at least was mixed in.

We are all twelve months older than we were this time last year. This means growth in some direction. We should be wiser, for away back in the Garden of Eden our original parents decided that the real fruit of life by the trial and error method. So we are bound to that pattern.

The nation went crazy for a period of down-right fear of not electing a president. Now it is all over, and we have a new president and a new Republican party. Democrat have been pushed down into the second bracket, bringing up the word American has been put at the top.

The best advice ever given on the matter of maintaining a right attitude toward the units those things which are before, I press on toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

Here is common sense, wholesomeness of mind and sound religion wrapped up in one impressive and classic utterance.

4 Canadian Soldiers, Loading Up on Rum Killed 3 Chinese On Mission But Land in Pokey

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

IN KOREA (CP)—Four Canadian soldiers who loaded up on rum and started their own little war in no man's land killed at least three Chinese, suffered wonderful intoxication—and landed in the pokey when they got back.

The wandering lads' story is hazy and a variety of other technical offences, a corporal and three privates of the 3rd battalion Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry are undergoing punishment as the field detention barracks in Seoul.

Their breach of discipline was considered by Lt.-Col. Herb Wood, their commanding officer, who could not stand for soldiers setting off on their own to engage the Chinese virtually single-handed. But the results of this impromptu effort were appreciated by higher formations.

The "patrol" is officially credited with:

1. Killing the two Chinese manning a Communist outpost.

2. Killing a third of three Chinese manning another.

3. Locating an unsuspected enemy gun position.

4. Locating a suspected enemy mortar.

5. Discovering the bodies of three United States Marines and recovering a sizeable automatic pistol.

Rivals in Sequence

Taking events in their sequence, the quartet were among Patricias sent to rear headquarters in reserves and clean-up Dec. 18. While there they visited the pleasures of some rum.

Back for the line they argued about patrols. The corporal, who had been over here two years ago with the 2nd, Patrolled and knew.

"This here do is different from what it was with the 2nd battalion. We were always on the go. We moved in daytime and stayed put at night. The fellers here say you can't patrol in daytime with the Chinese artillery looking at you. So I decided to show them."

His buddie decided to go too. Only Pt. Ira says he was just squiffed enough "to want to get me a chinaman."

After they'd left the word got around. Two others of the half-inebriated shower parade decided to go, too. All one of them remembers is falling on his face about 100 yards out, and then waking up hours later back in the lines again.

His mate went along to give "covering fire" but acknowledged it wouldn't have been very effective.

Did not Work Together

Although the two pairs were out at the same time they didn't work together.

The significant "operation" was the corporal's.

A shocked brigade headquarters learned during the afternoon that an artillery observation officer reported "Canadian climbing a Chinese position".

An exchange of shots was heard, the Canadians moved on. Presumably that was when the first two Chinese were killed.

They moved unhurriedly several hundred yards to another position, a tall hill, were seen to climb about one-third of the way up, pause, and then move around for another approach. That was when they spotted the two previously-reported gun and the mortar. Both were later verified by air photographs.

Climbing the same hill frontally, they were seen to reach the Chinese system of outpost crawl trenches. Shots were heard exchanged. Apparently that was where one of the three Chinese was killed.

Busted for Home

Then, said the corporal, "we busted for home."

The corporal's 21-year-old companion, excited by the occasional swigs of rum from a bottle they'd taken along, and his nerves frayed by the excitement, became hysterical.

"He just went berserk," said the corporal. "I had to hit him on the jaw and knock him out to bring him in. Every time he came to I knocked him out again."

The artillery officers' description of their return to the lines is a classic, with the corporal apparently alternating between trying to benumb the soldier's senses with applications of rum and knocking him senseless.

They and the third, who moved independently, were placed under close arrest immediately. Their platoon leader went out after the fourth man, still in his alcoholic coma.

The colonel's reactions were divided between admiration for the corporal's accomplishment and unqualified scorn for his discipline.

"If he'd been ordered to do the job might have been worth a Military Medal," he said. "But we can't have soldiers personally defeating how the war is going to be run.

Messed Up Plans

"Further, this effort messed up our patrol plans for the next 10 days. The Chinese were made more alert and it made the job so much tougher for everybody.

"I would like to see the taxpayer about $10,000 to lay down the artillery and mortar fire we sent in to protect their withdrawal when we saw them returning."

The colonel, for one, had a good idea what was ahead when interviewed by The Canadian Press. Each agreed Army discipline could not tolerate such breaches.

"If," said the colonel, the corporal, "I wanted to prove to plenty of people that you could do fighting patrols, where the advantage of being able to see things outweighs the disadvantage, I could do it, I guess. You can always take cover.

"I don't think I would have let me go out if I'd asked to go. So I didn't ask. I just took the bull—which is a foolish thing to do."

'52 GOOD BUILDING YEAR

TORONTO (CP)—Building contracts in Ontario totalled $1,000,000 in 1952, Earle L. Shepherd, president of the Ontario Association of Architects, said Tuesday. In a year-end statement Mr. Shepherd attributed no building decline during the next year.

WOMAN DIES OF INJURIES

PORT ERIE, Ont. (CP)—Mrs. Mazin Schewid, 35, of Flint, Mich., died Tuesday of injuries received in an automobile accident in nearby Bertie township. Mrs. Schewid was a passenger in a car driven by her husband, Leland, which collided with another.

OLD-ORANGEMAN DIES

MINNEDOSA, Man. (CP)—Mathew Wilcox, an Orangeman for more than 70 years, was buried Tuesday in this town 30 miles north of Brandon. Mr. Wilcox, a retired farmer, was a member of the Black Preceptory, one of the highest degrees in the order. He died Dec. 27.

Labor Willing To Co-operate Say Leaders

OTTAWA (CP)—Organized labor's willingness to co-operate with other elements for the general good was a common note in year-end messages released Tuesday by the heads of Canada's two biggest labor organizations.

The statements were issued by Percy R. Bengough, president of the 325,000-member Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, and A. R. Mosher, president of the 379,000 member Canadian Congress of Labor.

"Organized labor," said Mr. Bengough, "will be only too pleased to co-operate with industry in maintaining and improving production during 1953. We desire to co-operate with our various governments to maintain Canada's tax-paying building and insurance, as this is the soundest possible way that better and happier lives can be enjoyed by all of the people."

Mr. Mosher said the labor movement "takes very seriously its obligations as well as its rights." Even making progress in various activities aimed at "promoting the general welfare of citizenship and advancing the general welfare."

Mental Breakdown Occurs Occasionally In Childbirth

LONDON (CP)—Mental breakdown occasionally follows childbirth but occurs rarely in as extreme form, it was indicated in a survey published in the British Medical Journal.

All women in Bristol who had a child in a 10-year period ended in mid-1948 were studied. Of some 14,000 cases, 1,000 were investigated, 1.4 per thousand went to a mental hospital afterward.

Of those who had breakdowns about 30 per cent recovered normal health.

Dr. R. L. Hemphill, who conducted the survey, expressed belief that mental breakdown may often be the result of some endocrine (glandular) exhaustion rather than purely mental causes.

He observes that pregnant women are surprisingly resistant to physical illness. They appear to be insulated by their condition against severe psychological and social stresses, such as housing difficulties, bombing or bereavement.

Many Fields of Activities Saddened by Death in 1952 Of Prominent Personalities

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Many fields of Canadian activity were saddened by deaths of prominent personalities in 1952.

Within a space of three weeks last spring, the Royal Canadian Air Force lost two of its greatest administrators, Air Marshal Harold Edwards of Montreal, 54, wartime overseas chief of the RCAF, died at New York in February and Air Chief Marshal T. A. Bresnder, 58, died at Boston in March.

C. C. Clark, adjutor finance minister known as one of Canada's greatest civil servants, died suddenly on arrival in Chicago Dec. 27 to fill a speaking engagement. The 63-year-old chief assistant to the last five Canadian finance ministers had helped shape more than a score of budgets and played a decisive part in framing Canada's fiscal relations with provincies in the Second World War.

Famous in Canadian politics and journalism, Henri Bourassa died in Montreal Aug. 31. The 85-year-old French-Canadian nationalist founded the Montreal daily newspaper Le Devoir in 1910.

Titled Senator

Senator Sir Allen Aylesworth, former Liberal justice minister and the last titled member of the Canadian Senate, died at 97 last February. The upper house at Ottawa also lost Senator T. J. Bourque, New Brunswick Progressive Conservative, and Senator James Gordon Fogo, Ottawa, former president of the National Liberal Federation. Two members of Parliament who died were R. H. Hatfield (PC—Victoria - Carleton) and H.J. Gosselin (L—Bonne - Missisquoi). Almost noted figures in the Canadian Judiciary, Chief Justice W. R. Howson of the Alberta Supreme Court died last June at 69. Others included Mr. Justice Valmore Bienvenue of the Quebec Supreme Court; Mr. Justice J. J. Kelly of Winnipeg; Mr. Justice Clement Genest of the Ontario Supreme Court and Justice J. D. Bertrant of the Manitoba Supreme Court.

The Roman Catholic archbishop of Halifax, Rt. Rev. J. T. McNally, died at 81 and Archbishop Philippe Desrosiers, 69, of Sherbrooke also died. The Anglican church lost Rt. Rev. H. J. Hamilton, 89, a former bishop of Mid-Japan, and the veteran Canon H. P. Plumptre, 82, of Toronto. A leader in the Baptist church, Rev. H. P. Whidden, former president of McMaster University, died at 86.

The Canadian newspaper world and the community in general mourned the death Aug. 2 of George McClelland, 67-year-old Toronto publisher of the Globe and Mail and of the Telegram.

James Curran, veteran publisher of the Sault Star, died at Sault Ste. Marie aged 87. Another pioneer publisher, J. B. Barnett of the Charlottetown Guardian, died at 81, and L. H. Dingman of the St. Thomas Times-Journal and the Strathroy Beacon-Herald died at 87.

Newspaper circles also lost Alex Hunter, 54, managing editor of the Winnipeg Rupert Daily News and Kenneth Wilson, 48-year-old Ottawa editor of the Financial Post (Toronto), who was killed in a plane crash at Elizabeth, N.J., last January.

The distinguished author and rally-cry publicity man, Stephen Morray Gibbon, 77, died July 2. The Toronto Star's veteran drama and music critic, Augustus Bridle, died late in December.

Two men long familiar on the Canadian sports scene died in 1952. Major F. H. Wright of the Ontario Jockey Club died last January. Fred Steel, long secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada and later Ontario athletics commissioner, died at Christmas time.

MANY JOBLESS ON COAST

(CP)—Not a single vacancy for male employment was registered at the Prince Rupert office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission Tuesday as officials faced the greatest number of end-of-week benefit claimants in several years as a result of a shutdown this season of the herring fishery. The office counted 1,200 applicants for work and 1,000 claimants of unemployment insurance during the week ending Dec. 24.

CHINESE TORTURE PRIEST

HONG KONG (Reuters)—Chinese Communists chained a Roman Catholic administrator to a wall for five months and interrogated him up to 24 hours a day, it was learned when four expelled Belgian priests arrived here. The administrator, Father Godfrey van Wyert, and three other priests arrived in Hong Kong border under armed guard.

Congress May Give Atom Job In Civilian Life

By STERLING F. GREEN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress may give the atom a job in civilian life.

Within two or three years, officials estimate, a small pioneer "package" atomic plant could be producing limited quantities or electric power for industry.

In five years or less, a large central atomic plant could be generating energy by the millions of kilowatts instead of thousands, and also turning out plutonium for atom bombs.

But today there are no plans to build either.

Industry is not ready to risk money in experimental plants. The atomic energy commission is not ready to divert the money or resources from defense.

These proposals and others, however, are almost certain to be heard early in the new year before the joint congressional committee on atomic energy.

It may require anywhere from 10 to 20 years, according to expert estimates compiled in a report this month by the congressional committee. Right now atomic-generated electric power can be made cheaply enough to compete with energy from coal, oil or water power.

Pressure is building up on Congress and the AEC to work out some kind of industry-government partnership which will enlist the driving force of private competition in atomic development.

Where cost counts little, as in matters of a national security, wonders are possible. An atomic submarine is on the way and an atomic warplane may be in the air within a decade. These could lead to commercial ocean liners, air transports and even locomotives.

But atomic reactors are bulky and costly.

They present enormous problems in the conversion of heat to power and in disposal of radioactive wastes.

Even if the government gave away power generated from the atom, the consumer of electricity could expect a saving of not more than 25 to 30 per cent on his electric bill.

That is because the reactor produces only heat. To make electricity requires heat-transfer equipment, turbines, generators and the same type of distribution system used in conventional power plants.

The coal, oil and gas industries therefore are not making in their books—even though a ton of uranium holds energy equal to 2,800,000 tons of coal.

AEC wants to be sure there is industrial participation in the atom and not, as a congressional wit has observed, "industrial participation in the United States treasury."

Industry's interest in an atomic electric power plant has grown and numerous proposals have been advanced. Most of them rely on the fact that a reactor can be built to produce both energy and a new supply of fissionable materials for sale to the government. By paying enough for the latter, the government could, in effect, absorb part of the cost of power.

It is quite possible that England will show America the way. Britain is reported to have plans to start next year the world's first nuclear power plant to provide power for industry. The electricity is expected to cost about three times what high-priced power costs in this country.

Governor-General to Hold Traditional New Year's Levee

OTTAWA (CP)—The people and the governor-general will get together Thursday.

In the traditional New Year's Day levee, every man from cabinet minister to ditch-digger is welcome to shake the hand of His Excellency, dip into his buttonhole and eat a piece of cake.

It will be Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Massey's first of these historic public receptions since taking office early this year while they will be following out the custom of his predecessors, Lord Alexander is departing from practice in "one way."

He is switching the levee this time from the pillared corridor of the main Parliament Buildings to Hall of Fame to the red-carpeted bend corridor where he opened Parliament twice during the last year.

An aide said there was no particular reason for the change, except that it was the governor-general's house-keeping suggestion. Lord Willingdon did the same thing in 1929, but others followed suit thereafter.

Women will be allowed in the Senate chamber, the governor-general will stand for privacy-lacking, from noon to 1 p.m. EST, beside the Speaker's throne. There, all who are able to file by Mr. and Mrs. Massey can meet him.

The levee is a hand-down from the days of the kings of France, later carried on in Canada by the French governors, who would give an official on hand for that purpose, lest in the governor-general's household says anyone without cards can just forget this part.

Our Many Blessings...

The Old Year now coming to its end has been good to us all. Record crops, new oil and mineral discoveries, greater industrial activity, flourishing trade and commerce — all these have brought many blessings to Canadians.

Let Us Resolve to maintain our efforts that have brought about these benefits and made our country an example to the world. And let us resolve to work together in developing and using our national and human resources wisely — so that Canada may grow even richer in the social and moral values that make a country great.

"New Year"

By John F. Moment

How burn the stars unchanging in midnight skies,
As on the earth the old year dies!
The lines then before the storm-haste our lives away;
Eternal God, to Thee we pray.

For all Thy mercies past we lift our hearts in praise,
Thy care that crowned our fleeting days;
Our follies and our sins, O Lord, remember not,
Lost hours when we Thy love forgot.

From age to age Thy love endures; Thou art our God.
Send now Thy flaming truth abroad,
That with the New Year's dawning right may conquer wrong,
Grief yield to joy, and tears to song!

May we take this opportunity of wishing you and yours, health and happiness in 1953 and to thank one and all for your valued past patronage. We look forward to serving you again throughout the coming year.

Weddings

FLANAGAN—NEAL

Mountain View United Church was the setting on Friday a.m., December 26, for a very double-ring wedding ceremony when Flight Lieutenant D. G. Madill, R.C.A.F., Petawawa, Ont., became the marriage, before a background of mauve and white chrysanthemums in tall standards, interspersed with ferns and greenery, Pearl Marguerite Neal, youngest daughter of Mrs. George Neal, Mountain View, and the late Mr. Neal, to A/C 2 Warner Olan Flanagan, R.C.A.F., Uplands, Ottawa, only son of Sergeant Henry Flanagan, R.A.M.C., of Ottawa and Mountain View, and Mrs. Flanagan.

Mrs. Ben Anderson rendered the wedding music and accompanied the soloist, Miss Yvonne Post, who sang before the ceremony, "The Lord's Prayer" and during the signing of the register, "O Perfect Love".

The bride, given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Ernest Weese, of Westbrook, was charming in her bridal gown of white, imported lace over nylon net and heavy slipper satin. The fitted bodice featured a jewel neckline accentuated with iridescent sequins and long, sheath-like sleeves ending in lily-points over the wrists. The straight full skirt, which fell in graceful folds, ending in a court train, was carried by Tony Smith, of Picton. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a halo of orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of red and white roses tied with white and silver-embossed ribbon.

Mrs. Jack Smith, of Ottawa, the bride's only sister, was matron of honor, gowned in pale green nylon net over satin with brocaded lace inserts and lace jacket, matching mitts and dark green feathered Juliet cap. She carried a basket of mauve and white mums, with matching streamers, and wore silver shoes.

Mr. Emmett McPanlin, of Trenton, was groomsman, while Lloyd Neal, of Mountain View, brother, Rockcliffe, was usher.

Following the ceremony, the wedding breakfast was held in the bride's home, where Mrs. Neal, the bride's mother, received the guests, wearing a navy blue silk dress with white lace and navy accessories, corsage of red roses, and fern, with silver ribbon bows. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Flanagan, who chose a dress of navy and mustard silk, gold colored hat, with corsage of milk roses, maidenhair fern and silver ties.

For the wedding trip to New York, the bride chose a Lindsay plaid suit, with navy accessories, grey fur topcoat and grey feathered hat.

Out-of-town guests were present from Ottawa, Rockcliffe, Trenton and Westbrook.

The bride was the recipient of many gifts, from an English sconce wallet; to her mentor of honor, Miss Margaret Ann Hodgins, a three-piece rhinestone set; to the bridegroom's gift to his best man, who served. Misses Audrey Weaver, of Kingston, and Nellie Hodgins, boys and escorts.

The bridegroom's gift to his bride was happier.

A telegram of good wishes and congratulations was received from the bride's Uncle Roy, to London, England.

During the signing of the register, Mr. Seymour Hamilton, presented to the bride, on behalf of the Sunday School, a beautiful white Bible.

MARION—MADILL

A pretty wedding ceremony was recently solemnized at Trinity Church, Shannonville, when Margaret Joan Madill, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Madill, Hallaway, became the bride of Thomas Leon Marion, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Marion, of Shannonville.

Mrs. M. Brant rendered a solo accompanied by Mr. Thomas Brant at the organ.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her ankle-length gown of blue nylon tulle over taffeta. She wore elbow-length mitts which came to a tapey over the wrists, and were of matching blue taffeta. Her headdress was a matching Juliet cap and her flowers were red roses.

Her only attendant, Miss Beverley Foote, of Belleville, was charmingly attired in mauve taffeta in pink. She wore a matching feather headdress and a corsage of minute pink roses.

Mr. George Marion, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman. The ushers were, Mr. E. Brant and Mr. H. Marcie.

The reception was held at the home of the bridegroom's parents, where the bride's mother received the guests gowned in navy crepe and lace, wearing a corsage of white carnations. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother, who wore green with a corsage of white carnations.

For her wedding trip, the bride chose a navy blue suit, wine velvet coat and matching accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Marion will reside in Hamilton.

Out-of-town guests were present from Deseronto, Hamilton, Niagara Falls, Buffalo, N.Y., and Belleville.

Queen Mother and Princess Seen Shopping in London

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Two shoppers seen happily mixing with Christmas crowds were Princess Margaret and Queen Mother Elizabeth.

Mother and daughter have always preffered personal Christmas shopping to choosing gifts from a selection sent yearly to Buckingham Palace. "I'll spoils half the fun," Princess Margaret is reported as having said in younger days.

One Decoration was made at tea-time to a London department store. The royal ladies one in black and the other in coral, circled the gift counters laughing and talking and giving orders. They spent much time examining fine glass wares.

Although royal presents bought for the family circle are a personal secrecy, secrets will out. Among those known to have been purchased are an exquisitely-carved antique box bought by the Queen Mother for the Queen. Princess Margaret bought her sister a small jade ornament and matching jewelry.

The Duchess of Kent bought most of her Christmas presents in such places as Hong Kong during her recent tour of the Far East. One gift to the Queen is believed to have been a colorful length of Chinese silk to wear as a scarf. For Princess Margaret there was a carved ivory figure holder of unusual design and Prince Charles received an Oriental dancing toy—several little men dangling from a pair of sticks.

Princess Margaret is said to have fought for Prince Philip as they check set in a miniature steering wheel—and the Princess Royal sent him the prints of two old sailing ships set in narrow black frames.

Neighbors' Aid Holds Yuletide Party

The Avondale Neighbors' Aid held its yearly Christmas party in the home of Mrs. K. Bird, which was gaily decorated in keeping with the Yuletide season. There were 35 members present and the president presided.

Following a brief business period, Mrs. G. May led in the singing of Christmas carols with Mrs. Bird at the piano.

The devotional period was in charge of Mrs. C. Holmes, who read the Christmas story from Luke. A lovely Christmas prayer was read in unison, after which "Silent Night" was sung. A solo, "Away in a Manger", by little Richard Williams, concluded this part of the meeting.

A program of amusing games and contests, which had been arranged by the members, living on Holmes Road, followed and was heartily enjoyed by all present. Mary received prizes for Dad's efforts.

The highlight of the afternoon was the exchange of gifts, from the gaily decorated Christmas tree. This exchange had been arranged in a most interesting manner. Each member drew a slip of paper, on the back of which was the name of an item, served at a Christmas dinner. The gifts had been tagged with corresponding names, and as the item was named, the person holding that ticket received the gift. It was a most enjoyable dinner!

After the gifts had been opened, refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by the executive.

The Year in Retrospect

By Lavonia Stockelbach

As we sadly say goodbye to the good old year 1952 and hopefully welcome the new 1953 with all its possibilities of happiness, it might well to remind ourselves that each day is to each of us a New Year's Day; a very special gift to use as we will. But is it usually at this time of the year that we are inclined to recall the immediate past. Most of us realize that we are going through a splendid revolution and notwithstanding all the horrors it seems definitely for the better.

Harold Nicolson pointed out in one of the last Spectator's that "as the formalities or etiquette are discarded, good natural manners are improving. I have observed that the younger generation of today are much nicer to bags and dotards than we were in 1910. Unlike they are, duly they may become, but how considerate, how beautifully instilled in the old!" As one of the older generation I most heartily agree.

Is the world in a greater turmoil than it often has been? It is not that the radio, the daily papers make us more immediately acquainted with what is going on? Is not all social growth a turmoil and are we not in the worst trouble than, say, in the 1840's or almost any period that we could mention somewhere in the world.

The obe great difference is that nowadays none can live to himself. There is no getting away from the strife, not for any one of us. Tomorrow I may never be fighting in Malaya and what do you know about Malaya? or he may have to struggle against a Communist China and what do you know about it? Are you not part outlook of those millions of Chinese? What is the root cause of the disturbances in Africa? Are we willing to study each situation to know the truth and not sire to know the truth and not to jel by self interested motives who speak with such loud mouth that for the time being Truth is silent?

We cannot take in much of truth at a time, a little fact here, a little fact there, is all that our brains permit us to hold. We are most of us very ignorant and that cannot always be helped for we have only many lifetimes to learn. But of one thing we must be ashamed and that is to be proud of our ignorance or to brag of our indifference to what is going on in the world. The greater our ignorance, the more we are missing in this so full world. And of all things we must never run the risk of not making a friend or a friendly acquaintance.

The pleasantest way to do that is to have a few interests in common. You like stamps? You have a special fancy for those that have slips on them? What a comradely feeling you have for those who share the same delight, and enjoy with you the beautiful or British stamp with its excellently drawn ship and clear background. Or you have a fancy for good designs on coins? With what sentiment you share the adorably perky wren on the British farthing; all the animal drawings on the coins of Siree; the charming scenes on the bills of Algeria; our own good Indian piece with its well engraved beaver, though it is the most difficult of all creatures to draw well; and could there be anything more attractive than the pitcher-plant on the Newfoundland one cent piece? That in itself ought to make you like any New-fie you ever met.

It might not be the best of place to speak of the appeal of a hockey match!

The gathering of a bouquet of wild flowers as one climbed a hill in the Canary Islands and the trying to classify them began a friendship with a Dublin girl in the search for a very tiny flower on the edge of the desert at first unsprayed, then amused and finally aroused a genuine interest in my Arab chauffeur, my earnest effort not to be scared of a camel won the camel driver's approbation, the camel was amused (though it may be just as well that I never knew his opinion of the Casablanca cigarettes given him.

So many trifles one recalls, and can never follow through and see results.

Listening to a young Arab translating the Lord's Prayer into English in a group with Arabs who had never heard it before caused me to remember that I had often forbidden efforts to convert them and the dangers of misunderstanding. Also when I was asked to repeat one of my prayers for them. Their word for God is Allah but it is the same Divine Being. There could be no greater joy than the pleasure with which they absorbed the prayer we so often listen to so unheedingly.

Now that travelling becomes easier with the golden dawn of air over to those North African countries, I hope some of us may be fighting in Malaya and what do you know about Malaya? or he may have to struggle against a Communist China and what do you know about it? Are you not part outlook of those millions of Chinese? What is the root cause of the disturbances in Africa? Are we willing to study each situation to know the truth and not sire to know the truth and not to jel by self interested motives who speak with such loud mouth that for the time being Truth is silent?

Offers Life as Sacrifice for Baby

Mrs. Jean Garrett, the young mother who willingly faced death to give birth to a baby, smiles happily in a Los Angeles hospital as she holds her infant son, delivered by Caesarian section. A sufferer from incurable Hodgkin's disease, Mrs. Garrett had been warned by doctors that the surgery might be fatal. Her condition was reported "fine" considering the nature of the operation. — Central Press Canadian.

Eric Parsons was accepted. Mrs. Parsons is leaving the branch shortly to join her husband in France.

Arrangements were discussed for the annual meeting which will be held in the last week in January.

The nurses' report for November was read by Miss Dorothy Connor, nurse in charge.

In November 216 visits were made to a total of 80 patients, of whom 51 were admitted for care during the month. This is an increase of 20 admissions in comparison to October. The increase in admissions was under the classification of maternity and newborn. The total number of patients admitted for care to date this year is 486.

Under the classification of special activities, a total of 41½ hours were spent assisting the local Department of Health, at St. Michael's Academy, Holy Rosary School and the Child Health clinics at the Kiwanis Centre.

Two half days also were spent at the Canniffon school. On the first visit the nurse assisted the school medical officer at the immunization clinic which was held at the school.

The New Year

We have bade good-bye to the year now past
The dear, dead days that have been so fleeting.
Through sunshine and shadow they hurried fast.
The wonder of dawn and dusk repeating;
There were days of sorrow and days of crowns
There were days of losing and days of winning,
But the golden dawn of a New Year's gleam
Gives us the chance of a fresh beginning.

The book of the old year is bidden o'er.
We gaze on its leaves with heart-felt sighing.
Sadly we turn from its page once more
And think of the days now before us lying;
The days of the New Year gleaming bright,
Their lure of light and life are clinging.
Gladly we turn their dawning light
And hail the chance of a fresh beginning.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She suffers from shyness—as do thousands of others

A 16-year-old who is struggling with her acute case of the crippling complaint disease known as shyness, writes me this letter:

"My problem is that every time a boy even comes near me I freeze up and, if possible, walk away from him. Even when it's a girl who comes up and starts talking to me, if I know that's only slightly I just can't think of anything to say.

"Because I am not able to hold conversations, and because I run away from crowds, I have gained the reputation of being conceited, and so many of the people who would, otherwise have been my friends, or at least acquaintances, avoid me.

"Every time I try to do something about this myself I get nowhere, so I hope you can tell me some way I can overcome my shyness and learn to talk to boys and girls my own age without inhibitions or freezing up."

Now, first, I wonder if this girl has ever realized what I said in the beginning, that the most distressing ailment is no respecter of persons, but is one that affects any number of boys and girls, and older people as well. Sometimes I think that if shy people could just keep this fact in mind it would help them a great deal.

Be Friendly

For example, the next time someone comes up to this girl and tries to get a conversation with her, she might think to herself: "Maybe this boy (or girl) is feeling shy, too, and is trying to make her feel comfortable by being friendly and interested." Or I would like to have someone treat me! I believe she would find it much easier to forget her own feelings, and to respond naturally.

For what makes shy people the way they are? Mostly it is the fact that they are wondering how they appear to the other person. Usually, they are wondering what that other person will think them stupid or silly or conceited, or anything else except friendly, and so they can't think of things to say. Just because they do have this urge to "run away", as she puts it, instead of reaching out toward others in a warm manner. If a girl such as this one could just stop worrying about what the person she might be thinking of her, and open the conversation with a girl, perhaps, by saying something pleasant about her — "How nice you look today!" "What a pretty dress!"—the other girl would be likely to warm up to her right away, and in a few moments they would almost certainly be getting on fine together.

Forget Oneself

Almost the same technique can be used with boys—"I saw you at the skating rink the other day. You're a fine skater, aren't you?" "That was a good basketball game you played last week," and so forth.

The whole point is, I repeat, to forget oneself by concentrating on the other person. And since everybody likes to be admired, and likes the person who expresses admiration, it's an easy way to establish a comfortable beginning for a friendship. This doesn't mean, of course, that one should hurriedly "butter up" everybody they meet, nor that one should quickly think up an insincere compliment to hand out. It simply means that it is almost always possible to find something about another person which justifies a sincere word of praise, and it makes a good game to see how clever you can be in finding that justifiable compliment. It's another aid in taking your mind off yourself, too.

Again, shyness is a lack of self-confidence. Build up your self-confidence by knowing your own good points, and by making yourself as expert as possible at the activities which others normally enjoy. By doing this you will build up your ability to be at ease with them.

APPEARING with greater frequency this season especially at important evening events is the full length gala gown, although one must admit that the shorter skirt is still a great favorite, especially with young women. But when it comes to dignity and graceful beauty, then a creation such as this one by Gothe must be considered. It is veritably a portrait in lace in palest blue tones, with soft satin straplines bodice and back-sweeping skirt with a wide, fan-like flounce, creates a rich and handsome setting for this sheath which is covered with hand-run, re-embroidered Alencon lace.

Reminiscences and Resolutions

By Mary Moore

Many long years ago I was, eleven years old, and well do I remember writing a list of New Year's resolutions—not for myself —but for my beloved and gentle father.

Number One was Resolved to let us children sing and play other songs besides hymns on Sundays. Number Two was Resolved that father stop scolding Will (my brother) when he wouldn't get up in time to eat his breakfast before school.

It seems that my idea of making New Year's resolutions was to make them for someone else.

And, bless my soul, they say a leopard can't change his spots —and here the old girl sits at her desk still making resolutions for someone else. This time you are the victim.

No. 1 Resolved to serve more salads and fresh fruits. No. 2. Resolved to stop overcooking vegetables. No. 3. Resolved to reduce that oversize waistline (and live longer)! 4. Resolved to take more walks. 5. Resolved to do more for neighbors' sick.

I wonder what I would look and sound like on a soap-box in Hyde Park in London? Surely nobody would listen but dear old friends like you who are used to my sermonizing.

I know I'm an old harpie when it comes to nagging, but it isn't poverty that makes poor teeth.

Fr'instance: In the magazine store at our corner I watched three little boys along six and eight years old, select candy bars and quickly slip off the wrappers and soon as they had given the man their coins, start munching on them at once. Everyone of them had decayed front teeth.

When you feel your children deserve treats train them to buy nuts and raisins. Steer them away from pop drinks with their high sugar content and other even less desirable ingredients. Encourage them to drink milk. None of the alternates I am suggesting cost any more than the offending and often habit-forming sweets.

The Canadian service on the Canadian Council on Nutrition are highly skilled, highly trained experts. They have drawn up a set of food rules that every mother in every good, should know by heart. They should be there to these rules as closely as they do to the rules of cleanliness. For, if you do, as sure as the sun rises every morning and God is in His heaven, the health of your family will benefit from them and their health will improve, your sickness will shake and doctor bills will dwindle.

Here are the rules, one to 12 years, at least 1 pint; adolescents 1 1-2 pints to 1 quart. Adults: at least 1-2 pint."

2. Fruit—One serving of citrus fruit or tomatoes or their juices; one serving of other fresh fruit.

NEW YEAR'S TOLL?

CHICAGO (AP) — The national safety council today estimated that 410 persons in United States will die in traffic accidents during the four-day New Year holiday period.

GOOD MANNERS

Salutations to you . . . to your home . . . to the New Year!

Three endearing lines by the beloved Kate Greenaway, cherished through the years for their quaint charm and congenial simplicity, for their warm-hearted friendliness:

"Once, more, once more, I knock at your door:
I sing your bell and hope all's well;
I wish you good cheer, and a Happy New Year!"

When the wedding present is expensive, shower presents are a problem

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A very dear and close friend of mine is to be married soon, and since I happened to know about her enthusiasm for a certain article, I asked her if she would like to have me give her that as a wedding present. She was thrilled, and so I have bought it to give to her. I must admit it was very expensive, and I'll have to do things to my budget to pay for it! It hasn't helped my budget-plans that I have this week received three invitations to showers to be given for her. Must I give shower presents, too?—H. G.

You go to the showers. . . and since the guest of honor is such a favorite of young, you undoubtedly will want to. . . you should take at least "a little something" to her. Even when she unwraps her other presents. But it does not have to be just a small inexpensive present perhaps a useful gadget from the five-and-dime store!

Her said-teen-age sister, her only sister, should be maid of honor

Dear Mrs Beeckman:

I want very much indeed to have my only sister as my maid of honor. We are both thrilled, very close to each other, and I love her dearly. But she is only a few months beyond her fifteenth birthday, won't be sixteen at the time of my marriage, although she is tall for her age and mature-looking and nature-acting. Of course she dreads not being my maid of honor. But my fiance maintains that she is too young for this position. However, he promises to abide by your decision about this. Is my plan proper?—Bride-to-be.

Yes, indeed! Your "elderly" plan is proper. You should have your beloved sister in this important position—of honor in your wedding processional and recessional. To choose anyone else would be slighting her. (And the fact that she is younger than others you may be in a much higher age bracket makes no difference in your choice. I add this fact because I imagine this may be the reason for your fiance's point of view.)

Water glasses should be placed, even though milk is to be served later

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I and our two children always drink milk with our meals, and I don't bother to place water glasses on the table. But when we have guests, should I always place the water glasses (even though they may prefer milk) and fill them before asumming the guests to the dining-room? —E. L.

Yes.

Fashion Flashes

FIRST PRIZE for the most novel and prettiest evening accessory should go to a little jacket cut on boxy lines. It is boxed with ribbon, like a cardigan, but is made entirely of shiny black paillettes on double net.

ALL READY for the coming resort series are lovely clothes, nicer than ever, in fact. Hip-length white pigskin jackets, to team up with white linen or linen weave, in one and two piece or other house shows a full-length coat of luscious cream-colored corduroy, for day or evening wear.

DREAMSTUFF gowns are here for mid-winter parties. Exquisite white tulle is used for a lovely dress that has basket swags on Alencon lace embroidered in silver—joined by swags of the tulle placed on the lower portion of the full skirt. The motif is repeated in the centre of the basque bodice, which has thin shoulder straps.

STEALING THE PLAY from the stole is the triangular shawl, especially when it is gold and silver lamé or metallic cloth. While these hats are trimmed with little beaded designs, they are reminiscent of yesterday, and don't seem very flattering to the average wearer. But for many they are new, and so novel.

COVERED UP tops—rather than the deep, strapless designs—mark the latest fashionable night attire clothes for pretty young women. A typical dress of Victorian stripped taffeta—pale blue with gold and silver—has a high, snug top. Tiny turnover collar is buttoned with brilliants at the side. Sleeves are long and tight; skirt is full.

SAVES CHOKING INFANT

TORONTO (CP)—A fire captain was credited Monday by doctors with saving the life of an 11-day-old infant when he applied artificial respiration after the baby choked while feeding. Capt. Arthur Hendy said Nancy Brown was "already turning blue" when firemen arrived at her west-end home.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Brush your hair until it shines

Don't economize when buying a brush.

Never in the history of coiffures—and there are books that tell all about them—have the models been as attractive, as youthful and as varied as at the present moment. While the first bob was accepted by only a few forward-minded women, it was an emancipation from the yard-length pigtail material that was wedded into rolls and crullers on top of the head. The permanent wave came along soon after, and it was about the grandest thing that ever happened.

Shampooing long hair was an ordeal; laundering the short cut takes less time and the tresses are likely to be cleaner, freer of the shampoo agent. So, all is well, except for one small detail—the matter of keeping the growth in a healthy condition by means of brushing and scalp massage. It won't do to take it for granted that those lovely locks will remain abundant. Things can happen, and suddenly, the hair can thin at the temples, it can molt, and it can lose lustre—its chief quality of loveliness.

No head or hair will carry a well-groomed, shining look unless it is brushed regularly, once a day. Young girls never seem to have the time for this good-looks chore, but they should find the time. They favor it may cause the permanent to weaken, which doesn't happen to be true. They arrange their waves and ringlets with a comb, and that doesn't contribute to hair health.

Don't economize when buying a brush. Unless the bristles are strong, it will not perform or it should. Brushing not only removes surface dust, but it makes out dead shafts; the sooner they are out the better, so that new hairs may appear to take their place.

The brush strokes should go right through to the scalp, to remove any dead skin scales that may be present. This light frictioning will have a stimulating effect upon the circulation.

Instead of brushing away from the forehead and temples, throw the hair forward and sweep from the crown. Brush upward at the napeline.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

GOOD YEAR!

An all-Ontario championship and several eastern Ontario titles marked 1952 as one of the best sport years in the history of the city.

Top event was the winning of the junior, "A" all-Ontario softball championship by the Glen Roy team. Another outstanding sports performance was the accomplishments of the Black Hawks junior "B" hockey club which not only won its group but went to the Ontario semi-finals before bowing out to the powerful Weston Dukes.

Eastern Ontario titles were won by the CNR Diesels intermediate "A" softball team and the Northern Electric intermediate "AA" softball squad. Ted Schwab's "Little Giants" minor baseball team went to the provincial semi-finals. Don McIlvein's Glen Roys peewee softballers reached the Ontario finals.

HOCKEY

Hockey enjoyed one of the best seasons in some years with the juniors, as mentioned before, going to the provincial semi-finals and the Bonnerr senior "B" bowing out in the group playoffs but not before they gave the Kingston team a terrific semi-final series of battle. Minor hockey saw some 324 youngsters in the line action in juvenile, midget, bantam and peewee leagues.

BASEBALL

The diamond sport also enjoyed a successful year with the team being strictly "home-brews". It led the league for the major part of the season in a three-team Central Ontario Baseball Loop set-up. The league, however, ended on a sorry note when the Kingston team was tossed out because of default, and "certain" rules by the executive decision. The Peterborough Marines won the title. As in hockey, minor baseball had a good year with nearly 400 youngsters in action in the various minor classifications.

SOFTBALL

The Belleville District Softball League had the best season since its inception, with the junior "A" Glen Roys winning the all-Ontario title. Many of its entrants are now playing downtown. As in baseball and hockey, minor softball attracted a large number of youngsters thanks to Fire Chief Gerald Vance and other sponsors.

GOLF

The Bay of Quinte Golf and Country Club [illegible] the down as one of its best links season. Mike Audaskeda and Wes Smith brought "home" the Brasscombe Cup after a terrific challenge match. Ted Sparks copped the club championship with Mrs. S. E. Goodwin taking the ladies' title. Leather handicap champion was Mrs. Jean Grant.

SOCCER

Lee Digby and his merry men of the Bay of Quinte Football Association report a successful season. The Batawa club walked off with the league championship and the Trenton Challenge Cup. Northern Electric copped the Belleville Charity Cup while the Collegiate Institute bowed with the juvenile trophy. The Bill Harvey trophy went to the Wanderers bantams while the Argyles won the peewee trophy and title.

LAWN BOWLING

Keen disappointment marred the annual Corbin Gold Trophy tournament on Civic Holiday. With sixty-four rinks from all parts of the country here, Jupiter Pluvius spoiled the day's sport with a deluge of rain. As a result the trophy was not awarded, but prizes were presented after a draw system was gone through.

FOOTBALL

Albert College won its first senior COSSA gridiron title this year and first time in history. "Pete" Beach's big, powerful squad swept aside all opposition with an unbeaten-untied record. It defeated the starry Banting Institute team from Alliston for the title. "Red" Townsend's BCI squads battled pluckily but bowed out before more potent opposition from other parts of the district.

TENNIS

The Bay of Quinte Tennis League had another successful year with several teams entered from the district. The Trenton RCAF club won the senior championship with the Quinte Club intermediates winning the title of their classification. The Corby Cup was annexed by the Quinte senior club.

YACHTING

The newly-formed Bay of Quinte Yacht Club hailed 1952 as not only a successful season, but a forerunner of better ones. The Commodore's Cup, donated by Commodore J. Morch, was won by Elwood Wickerson and his "Cygnet" in her first racing season in these waters. The club staged many exciting races during the summer and plan extensive alterations to their newly-acquired property in Victoria Park near here.

WRESTLING

Known as one of the "hotbeds" of Ontario as far as the "grunt-groan-and-grimace" sport is concerned, Belleville fans established an all-time attendance record during 1952.

RECREATION COMMISSION

The Belleville Recreation Commission, according to Recreational Director "Red" Doran's report, which appears elsewhere, likewise had a successful year, thanks to an energetic committee and the support and co-operation of many outside interests. And we'll put in this note: The success of the commission this year was in no small measure due to the fine effort of Director Doran, who, in his first year of office has done an excellent job. He has worked hard, untiringly and unceasingly and his efforts are exemplified in the fine results attained by the commission in 1952.

Incidentally there will be no minor hockey games played tomorrow night. Peewee games, four in all, will be played Saturday morning, the first starting at seven o'clock.

Geo. Genereux, Lone Olympic Gold Medal Winner Stood Out; Grey Cup Greatest Spectacle

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Maybe Canada's once-proud amateur sportsmen should forget about 1952. It was the most miserable year from a national and international standpoint that most can recall.

The one big shining light in the dog-house in family was George Genereux, a 19-year-old crew-cut trapshooter from Saskatoon, who won Canada's only gold medal in the summer Olympic Games at Helsinki. He came over as another guy called Joe and returned as the singularly-praised hero of the country's team of 113 athletes and 28 officials.

On the professional level, bigtime football kept the sports scene alive with probably its best season. Newspaper ink flowed freely as both the Western and Eastern leagues reached their peak in crowd appeal and down-to-the-wire finishes, climaxed by the greatest spectacle on the calendar — the Grey Cup final.

Grey Cup Record

A crowd of 21,329, a record for a Grey Cup final, saw Toronto Argonauts defeat Winnipeg Blue Bombers 21-11 and win their 10th Canadian championship. The game was televised for the first time in history and an estimated 700,000 persons saw it from within the 150 mile range of the Toronto station. Gate receipts, not yet completely tabulated, are believed to be about $125,000, highest in history.

In the Big Four Rugby League, Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens dominated as almost generally amateur sport was in a fare-from-healthy state.

Failed to Attract

Lacrosse, tennis, track and field and swimming suffered severely at the gate. The three-day Olympic swimming trials at Toronto attracted 555 persons or fewer. Amateur hockey crowds were down in many areas with only the seven-team Quebec Major League reporting a marked increase. League games there drew more than 1,400 per game, the highest in history. Nearly all six tams in the Maritime major circuit lost money in the 30 game schedule.

Squabbles and bickerings hit some amateur sports governing bodies and heavy broadsides were fired at the Canadian Olympic Association. There was controversy over selection of the summer team and hints of bungling, incompetent handling and favoritism were tossed around.

Canada's hockey team, Edmonton Mercurys, won the winter Olympic championship at Oslo, Norway, but Canadian skiers held their record of not winning a point for Canada since the games started 28 years ago.

Canadian athletes were also-rans at Helsinki and the resultant blowoff by Canadians may end in a shake-up of the COA personnel at the annual meeting scheduled for January. President Sidney Dawes of Montreal has intimated he will resign.

Free Turn-Outs

A crowd of only 3,450 saw Peterborough Timbermen win their fourth and final game over Vancouver Flamingos to take the Canadian senior lacrosse best-of-seven title series. Again, at Toronto, the last game of the Memorial Cup junior final drew only 3,447 fans as Guelph Biltmores whipped Regina Pats.

Fort Francis Canadiens defeated Stratford Indians four games to one to win the Allan Cup and Quebec Aces, led by Jean Marc Belliveau defeated Saint John Beavers four games to one in their best-of-seven Alexander Trophy series for the Canadian major hockey championship.

Toronto Ulster won the Canadian soccer championship over Vancouver St. Andrews at Montreal before 1,200 persons.

In tennis, Tony Vincent and Lucille Davidson, both Americans, won the Canadian senior men's and women's titles. Marrielle Lafrenniere of Montreal and Stephen Gottlieb of New York won the junior singles crowns.

Other Champions

Billy Walsh of Winnipeg won the Canadian curling championship and Tillsonburg Livingstons whipped Winnipeg Varsity Grads three games to one in their best-of-five series for the Canadian basketball title. Livvies defeated the University of Western Ontario Mustangs

Foreign Athletes Under Guard

NEW YORK (AP)—About 30 European athletes are being detained by security guards in a New York hotel, not as prisoners but because "technically all of them are outside the United States."

They include 23 members of the Rapid soccer team of Vienna, en route to Bogota, Colombia, for a series of games, and five bicycle riders returning from the recent international races in Caracas, Venezuela.

An official explained:

"None of them possess have visas. Technically all of them are outside the United States. As soon as they can leave for their legal destinations, they will go."

BUSY PROGRAM FOR RANDY

LONDON (AP)—Randy Turpin, slinging at a pound of solid muscle weight title fight in the summer of 1953, has signed for two bouts in his fight-a-month training campaign.

On Jan. 19 the former world champion meets Dennis Powell, Welsh light-heavyweight champion at Birmingham, and on Feb. 16, Turpin will fight an overweight match against South Africa's Dingiz Miller at Leicester.

In the Olympic trials and an all-star team made up of Tillsonburg Mustangs, Grads and Montreal players competed for Canada in the summer Olympics. They were knocked out in the first round.

Marion Stewart, the Ontario youngster from the Lookout Point Golf Club near Welland, Ont., retained her Canadian women's closed championship. Johnny Palmer of Badin, N.C., won the Canadian open and Pat Fletcher of Saskatoon the Canadian Professional Golf Association title.

Toronto's Cliff Lumsden won the 10-mile world professional swimming championship and 16-year-old Shirley Campbell of Fergus, Ont., the women's mile at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Canada's racing classic—the $15,000-added Queen's Plate—was won in the mud and rain at Toronto's Woodbine Park by Epigram, owned by the Three V's stable of Toronto.

Americans Avert Davis Cup Rout When Seixas Defeats Ken McGregor

By GAYLE TALBOT

ADELAIDE (AP) — America's Davis Cuppers averted a complete rout at the hands of the Australians today when Vic Seixas defeated Ken McGregor 6-3, 8-6, 6-3 in the final match of the challenge round to make the score 4-1 for the record books.

In today's first match Frank Sedgman knocked off Mervyn Rose in straight sets 7-5, 6-4, 10-8 for the Aussies' first straight victory.

The score of this match was misleading. Sedgman permitted the young U. S. sailor to break through his service first in each set then rallied with what looked like effortless ease to win.

Seixas flanged his finest form in defeating McGregor although the big Aussie, with the pressure removed, played well below his great game of the last two days.

Although the Aussies had clinched the cup by winning the doubles Tuesday, another capacity crowd of 15,000 turned out for the final two matches.

The crowd got most of its thrills in the Seixas-McGregor match. Vic swept the first two sets, although he had to come from behind in the second set. He fought off set point at times before McGregor finally managed to take the third set.

After intermission Seixas swept the fourth set for the lone U. S. victory.

Indicative of Vic's keenly-placed shots, McGregor had 106 errors to Seixas' 86. Each had five aces. Two of Vic's came in the last set and helped build up a 4-1 lead that McGregor could not overcome.

It was learned that a group of wealthy Australians are offering Sedgman financial inducements not to turn pro Thursday, but it is strongly doubted they'll get anywhere.

Hardwick's Top Major B Loop

The Printers racked up a point total of 83 with the Dominion Bank a close second with 80. In order followed Champs, with 81; Post Terminal, 49; Comebacks, 25 and Ritz's 16.

The Saturday kegler Joe Legault was the top man in all phases. He rolled the high triple of 1035, high single of 395 and had the highest average, 238.

Tony DeSpirito Smashes World Mark Rides 4 Winners for Total of 389

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Apprentice jockey Tony DeSpirito smashed the world's all-time record for winners ridden when he brought in the fourth victory of the day for him on a short set by 7-year-old Tuesday at Hialeah Park.

The 18-year-old jockey from Lewiston, Mass., rode four winners on the nine-race program at Tropical Park to break the record of 388, set by Walter Miller and Sidney Hebert for Calumets and Willie Shoemaker.

The boy-wonder scored his record-shattering victory at King's Queen in the sixth and final race to climax an afternoon of excitement with apprentice Robert L. Stevenson riding a double.

Trailing skyward Marshall Cassidy piloted DeSpirito with a silver trophy.

Broke Mark

Driving hard to break racing's all-time victory record, DeSpirito was a unusual sight on Saddle Rags in the seventh, but he almost made it on the first race. He was forced to be satisfied second to Traverler by 3½ lengths.

After bringing in four winners Monday to gain his score to 388, DeSpirito went to work in the first Tuesday aboard Classic Night.

The colt failed to overtake Con Merchant in a stretch duel and was second by a head in a photo finish.

DeSpirito led all the way in the second on Petiteer to win the mile-and-a-sixteenth race by a length.

DeSpirito got his 387th winner on Dark Destroyer in the third, a victory by the fourth, a claiming race for two-year-olds.

The jockey tied the record on Jamaker in the fourth, a claiming race for two-year-olds at 1 3/16 miles.

DeSpirito rested during the fifth and sixth races, then rode again in the seventh but finished fourth on Saddle Rags, with Topside; 7/5-Jet Jr. finishing third in the event.

DeSpirito announced after the presentation that he was sending the $20,000 purse (for the record final) race to Walter Miller who is in a sanitarium in New York state.

Under the agreement between leagues and the NHL, Plante would be subject to draft at $7,500, if he played one more game with the Royals. Terms of the contract were not announced but Frank Selke, managing director of Canadiens, said both he and Plante were pleased. Plante, 22-year-old native of Shawinigan Falls, Que., is rated an outstanding prospect.

Expect 103,000 to Watch Wisconsin Battle Southern Cal. in Bowl Game

NEW YORK (AP)—If you took a poll today on the confirmance of New Year's Day football bowl games you would be certain to get a block of 400,000 "yes" votes that many tickets have been sold for tomorrow's eight games.

The bowl games have met public favor for years but have been frowned upon by many top-flight echelonists the last two seasons. The future of post-season games will be discussed by college heads in Washington next month.

New Year's top attendance, as usual, will be the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., where some 103,000 will watch Wisconsin of the Big Ten bid to continue the mid-west's dominance over the Pacific coast by whipping Southern California.

Some 82,000 will sit in at the Sugar Bowl, which pairs unbeaten Georgia Tech and unbeaten but brire tied Mississippi at New Orleans. The Cotton Bowl will have an expected 73,000 to Dallas, Tex., with its Tennessee vs Texas attraction while the Orange Bowl plans for 54,000 to see Alabama and Syracuse mix it up at Miami.

Jacksonville's 'Gator Bowl, striving to make the ranks of major bowls, hopes to entertain 37,000 with its Tulsa vs Florida battle.

Another 45,000 fans will be distributed about equally among the Salad Bowl at Phoenix, Ariz., which pairs San Diego Naval against 101st Airborne; the Sun Bowl at El Paso, Tex., where Mississippi Southern bumps into the College of the Pacific and the Tangerine at Orlando, Fla., which lists East Texas State and Tennessee Tech as its attraction.

Barons, Bears Tied for Top In American League

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The two top teams in the American Hockey League flopped Tuesday night. St. Louis Flyers defeated the slumping Cleveland Barons 4-3 and Providence Reds routed Hershey Bears 4-3 in overtime.

Cleveland and Hershey are tied for first place. Providence and St. Louis are fifth and sixth, respectively, in the seven-team loop.

At Cleveland, the Flyers scored two goals in 31 seconds late in the final period. It was the Barons' fifth straight game without a victory.

Harry Taylor gave St. Louis the leader in the first and Guyle Fielder made it 2-0 in the second. The Barons fought back in the third to tie the score on goals by Bo Hilderbrand and Steve Wochy but with less than three minutes to go, Ken Hayden and Bert Hershfield exploded the Barons' tallies past goalie John Bower.

Zellio Toppazzini's overtime marker gave the Reds the victory at Providence.

Trailing 3-1 with less than three minutes of regular time remaining, the Bears came back to force overtime.

It was the Reds' fifth straight win and the second straight game in which Toppazzini fired the deciding goal.

Hershey scorers were George Sullivan, Joe Scherrit and Ray Gariepy. Providence's other goalgetters were Johnny Denis, Ed Krynzanowski and Ray Powell.

Mercurys Down Stratford Indians To Take Over Senior League Lead

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Stratford Indians and Owen Sound Mercurys are turning the Ontario-Hockey Association Senior A series into a two-team race.

The lead changed hands for the third time in four days Tuesday night as the Mercurys downed Stratford 7-4 and took a one-point margin. Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen are third with 31 points, eight behind Stratford.

The Mercurys have had little trouble with the Indians all season. In five meetings, the Owen Sound team has scored three wins and a tie. The Stratford victory was a 5-4 affair in Stratford. Owen Sound bounced the Indians 7-3, 7-6 and 14-6.

The biggest turnout of the season, a crowd of 2,310, watched the game in Owen Sound Tuesday night.

Harry Lazarian scored twice for the winners. Other goals were by Bill Albani, Tommy Burlington, Jack Ingoldsby, Jerry Reid and Andy Grand. Mickey Roth tallied twice for Stratford. Herve Dejordy and George Aitken each counted once.

On Friday night, Stratford travels to Brantford, Hamilton is at Chatham and Kitchener is at Sarnia. There are no games tonight.

In the Northern Ontario Hockey Association the New Year's Eve contest is between Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians and Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds in the Ontario series.

New Year's Eve Marks Entry Of Rookies to National Loop

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

New Year's Eve, 1952, may be a big date in the memory book of a couple of young hockey players.

Two forwards, one for Toronto Maple Leafs and one for New York Rangers, will make their National Hockey League debut tonight in the traditional New Year's Eve game in New York.

Gordie Howarth, up from Valleyfield of the Quebec Senior Hockey League, will be a new face in the Maple Leaf line. The 21-year-old centre is up on a three-game trial basis and either that can return to the Quebec loop without losing his amateur status. He probably will play with Dick Mickell and Jack Stoddard.

Rightwinger Church Hair, who starred on the Marlboro Allan Cup championship team in 1949, will be in the Leaf uniform, but whether he plays or not depends on Howie Meeker.

The little rightwinger has been limping for the last few weeks with an injured knee. If Meeker is able to use him on playing, Hair will be sent back to the Leaf American Hockey League farm, Pittsburgh, which also is having injury troubles. Hair is up in the NHL under the emergency recall section of the NHL-AHL agreement.

The New York-Toronto game will be the seventh meeting between the two clubs so far this season. The fourth-place Leafs won the first three meetings, then lost to the tail-end Rangers. The last two clashes resulted in ties.

In the only other New Year's Eve game third-place Montreal takes on the front-running Red Wings in Detroit. A victory for Montreal would push the Canadiens past the idle Chicago Black Hawks into second place.

New Year's night Toronto moves on to fifth-place Boston and Montreal to Chicago.

Les Lear Out As Coach Of Calgary Stamps

CALGARY (CP)—Les Lear is out as coach of Calgary Stampeders.

Cec. Frederick D. McLaren announced Tuesday night, following a joint meeting of the board of governors and the Stampeder Football Club, that Lear would not be back for the 1953 season.

Lear is the second Western Interprovincial Football Union coach to be dismissed at the end of the 1952 season. Frank Selinger, who took Edmonton to the Grey Cup final, was ousted earlier in a coaching shuffle.

Lear was not available for comment on his dismissal.

McLaws said that four applications have been received to fill Lear's position. No name was given.

Lear went to Calgary as playing-coach in 1948 and promptly captured the Western championship and the Grey Cup. The following year Stamps won the Western title but missed out against Montreal Alouettes in the Grey Cup final. They hit rough going in '50 and '51 and were bounced out of the Western playoffs by Edmonton Eskimos in '52.

Lear and assistant coach Ed Champagne hit the headlines during the 1952 season when they were charged with assaulting player Art Ambrose in a dressing-room brawl in Calgary. Lear and Champagne were acquitted after Ambrose retracted part of his statement in court.

Lear was born in Grafton, N.D., but broke into football in Winnipeg. He played with the Bomber Bombers from 1937 to 1942. He took over as coach of the RCAF Bombers in 1943, then played two seasons with Cleveland Rams of the National Football League.

He moved West in 1946 and played with Los Angeles Rams. The following year he was with Detroit Lions.

At Calgary, his next stop, Lear stayed for five years. He has been part in six Grey Cup finals —four with Winnipeg Blue Bombers and two with Calgary—and has been with a winning team three times, twice with Bombers and once with the Stampeder club of 1948.

SEEK ALLAN CUP ENTRY

EDMONTON (CP)—W. G. Hardy, Canadian Amateur Hockey Association representative, says Edmonton may put on an Allan Cup entry this year. He said he and Jimmy Graham, of Edmonton are "interested" in re-forming the Edmonton Pats.

Pats, a pick-up club selected from former pros and amateurs before the season, last year reached the Western Canada senior final, losing to Fort Frances Canadians.

FRANKFORD

FRANKFORD — Division 'A' of the Frankford Bowling League saw action this week, rolling off the last night of the schedule to catch up for one or the two nights missed by Christmas and New Years both falling on a bowling night.

Ray Scott's Greeks strengthened their first-place position by trouncing Preston Chase's lowly Jets in all three games. Rose Hurlbut's Racketeers stayed right in the running by making it a clean sweep over Bob Arbuckle's Hopefulate, thus keeping an end to sustained drive of the Hopefulate, which brought them from the cellar to fifth place. Jack Fuller's Aces's Jokers took five from Gib Gilmour's Gilly Gang while Karl Austin's Curley's Crew made it five over Lloyd Hanna's Robbers, who seem to have lost their stride completely of late, after a remarkable start.

The standing is as follows: Outlaws 79; Racketeers 76; Gib's Gang 64; Robbers 61; Hopefulate 55, Jack's Jokers 54; Curley's Crew 53 and Jets 34.

If your contract is doomed to not be too fair in placing the blame on freak distribution or poor system of bidding. Stop to consider that you may not have played it correctly.

It was sent to me with comments that started "I got outbumbled on this six spade south hand after west led the king of clubs. It happened when I led two rounds of trumps after taking trick one.

"Finding the trumps off balance," he continued, "I started to establish hearts and east ruffed the first heart. So, then I went down with 'hands that should easily make a slam.'"

He finished: "Even though this drawing of trumps turned out bad I am entitled to find five trumps divided three and two. So I still think it was the correct play."

"But," my partner," he explained, "claims that my safest play was to ruff clubs before drawing trumps. Which is alright for him to say after seeing how the cards stood against me."

There was nothing wrong with the plan of play at trick one. Even up to the spot where a heart was led (providing it was the south king) that east can ruff. Because this leaves west with only one trump. Thereafter, there is no lead that east can return which could prevent declarer from taking the remaining tricks. It matters not whether east returns a trump or a diamond or a club.

Evidently, a fresh distribution in opponents' hands is likely to kill any correctly laid pair of hands. But this is not one of them. The contract can still be made.

So, it was not the plan of play that can be criticized. It was the fact that south got panicky when he got two low hearts and gave up too soon. He should have recognized this chance.

Your Individual Horoscope

By FRANCES DRAKE

Look in the section in which your birthday comes and find what your outlook according to the stars.

FOR THURSDAY, JAN. 1, 1953.

God Grant to All A Blessed New Year!

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Most of us have free time this first day of the New Year 1953. It's up to each one of us as to what our future will be. Don't make resolutions then break them.

April 21 to May 20 (Taurus)—Some of us are great at planning, at "going to do" this or that. Usually it was just "going to do that," etc. Stars highly favor gentle ways, genuine modesty.

May 21 to June 21 (Gemini)—For you this here is how do so with a prayer that you may start right—finish well. Take what difficulties confront you with a smile.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—If you are holidaying, be sure and attend church, enjoy good friendly company. Start 1953 right!

July 24 to August 22 (Leo)—Action often enter into things with much enthusiasm. Fine if not overdone, nor should you quickly lose spirit.

August 23 to September 23 (Virgo)—Sturdy, helpful day for rightful healthy interests, stressing necessary duties. Keep cautious-advised in new ventures at this time.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Your indications similar to Virgo now. Don't strain but do engage in some worthwhile extra activities, maybe a charity.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Your planet Mars in the aspect. A healthy, stimulating day on which to start the New Year.

November 22 to December 22 (Sagittarius) — Excellent vibrations. Good day to check plans for coming months. Be free from petty criticisms and find your path smoother.

December 23 to January 21 (Capricorn) — Many Firsts to consider; charity, community assistance among them. Make loved ones happy, look to God and resolve to do better in the future.

January 22 to February 20 (Aquarius)—If free from work, duties; attend first to spiritual needs; family wishes. And try also to aid others to a sunnier outlook.

February 21 to March 20 (Pisces) — Could be exciting, pleasant day. You can be a source of great encouragement, happiness to family, friends, to charity affairs.

YOU BORN TODAY: make good listeners as well as managers when living up to your best. Rightly developed you can hold a high position of trust in the business or professional world. Avoid tendency to be gabborn, too blunt. You may hurt those you really love.

Birthdate of: Paul Revere, patriot; Bert Acosta, aviator; Anthony Wayne, Amer. soldier.

BEATEN, JAW BROKEN

SARNIA (CP)—Mel Warwick, 50, of Froomfield, is in hospital unable to talk and suffering multiple head injuries received when he apparently was beaten up by an unknown assailant. Because Warwick can't talk, provincial police can't find out what happened. He suffered a broken jaw, his teeth were knocked out, and he received a severe cut at the back of the head.

Plasma Gives Way to Synthetic Sugar Formula Called Dextran; Favored by Doctors in Korea

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TH KOREA (CP)—Plasma is blood in liquid form. Dextran, a Canadian Press has learned, giving way to a synthetic sugar formula called "dextran."

Dextran is nothing more than the same synthetic sugar used in chewy candy bars but dissolved instead in salt water. The blood will accept it in solution and combine with it, keeping the lives of life potential in men who have bled enormously until whole blood can be added.

Doctors call dextran a blood volume-preserving substances, which, they say, is much superior to plasma.

Favored by Canadians

The United States Army has decided on change in its fluid plasma medical officers here have recommended to army headquarters in Tokyo that dextran be used.

Plasma, dried blood crystals dissolved in a saline solution, is administered to soldiers as soon after injury as possible to keep up body fluid content until transfusions more may be performed.

Army doctors, however, have found a fault in plasma for these reasons:

1. Jaundice is produced as a side effect among 10 per cent of patients receiving it.

2. It is expensive, costing $40 a bottle.

3. It can safely make up to only between 40 and 50 per cent of the blood stream's fluid. If the blood proportion drops much below 50 per cent it doesn't combine properly with plasma.

Far Superior

Research workers in the United States experimented with several synthetics, including dextran and the cheap candy sugar would handle down.

Dextran's medical significance first was discovered by Scandinavian researchers. It was later announced upon by British and American scientists. Now it is commercially produced both in Britain and the United States.

Its advantages are that it is easy to produce, is cheap, has the right resuscitative properties and at the same time is nutritional. Most important, it is apparently with far less real blood remaining in the stream than is plasma.

With dextran the proportion of blood can drop to 40 per cent with safety. It has succeeded with only 30-per-cent blood here. And during one night-controlled experiment 41 RCC mobile army surgical hospital a man whose blood proportion fell to 10 per cent pulled through.

Overcome Problems

An early problem with American soldier patients caused by the candy bar eaters, was the side effects caused by the same sugar when injected directly into the veins of bodies conditioned to the stuff.

One effect was to lower the body's clotting properties proportion. Another was the direct opposite. Kidneys clogged, causing stoppages.

Both effects have been caused by the way certain large molecules combined with the dextran. Other matters were devised to screen those molecules out and now medical dextran has a molecular structure to combine freely.

To the taxpayer its supreme advantage is its cost. Dextran costs less than $2 a bottle.

It already has been tested at the 25th Canadian field ambulance, commanded by Lt.-Col. J. Weedy well of Camp Borden, Ont., and Canadian officials express the same enthusiasm for it that their American colleagues do.

Hard Acres

by

Harry Meldrum Moore

But one incident occurred during the afternoon that added that air of mystery, and which, as it was by design or neglect, Curly never knew. Anyway, he was grateful since he didn't wish Hazel to know about it.

Everything from the farmers' failure to run their best horses against him, to the quality of the wine was intended to be the favorite attraction in the afternoon's program. Jules Lizgar, Curly's uncle, went to Curly in his guest seat in the stands to challenge him hotly to a race, across the dirt-track standing start against Curly's chestnut stallion.

"Pitch your mare to a beggar, Jules," Curly laughed, "and I'll take you on. Dandy may not be a runner, but he can trot."

"I'll think it over," Jules said, cooling off.

But Curly knew there and then that he had not heard the last of that. Belatedly Curly began to try to convert his runner into a trotter, and if he succeeded, he might not back down then.

At Hard Acres that evening Percy Green, after the shouting had died, the prizes they had won and lost, while Curly and Judy were recounting some of the highlights of the program. Hazel, as previously stated, was busy, but would be left to look after Heather Ann. Percy, Hazel and Curly, set to the dance in the townships hall.

It was a warm evening, the full moon had come up like a ball of fire, then it was up in the heavens. There was a big crowd at the dance despite the high fees charged.

It was nearing ten o'clock when Curly stepped out of the hall for a breath of fresh air. He heard the distant rumble of thunder in the northwest, and he hastened to Hazel, telling her what was coming and they should try to get home before it struck.

By the time they reached the bridge and could see the lights of home, and what flitting and lightning was splitting the sky. The horses, as anxious to be in the barn as they were, broke into a run that brought them into the yard, Percy and Hazel at the door and behind Hazel inside, while Peter helped his father get the horses away.

Just as Curly and Peter reached into the kitchen, the storm broke in all its fury. Curly by a terrific wind, followed by sharp lightning and deafening sudden crashes of thunder, the rain beat against the roof and the windows.

Her fears drawn with fear, Hazel stood over Heather Ann's cradle in the corner of the parlor. Curly came to her, caught her hand.

"There, there, honey, don't be scared. It's past," he quoted, "just calm yourself, it can't last long."

But the storm did not end speedily unmindful of it all, Percy and Peter were talking and laughing, and then—

There was a blinding flash, windows rattled, the floor beneath their feet trembled.

"Now, that was close!" Curly said, trying to be calm, "hope it hasn't struck the house." Heather Ann screamed, and Hazel caught her up, soothed her, put her back in the cradle, and started to rock her asleep again.

Curly left them to join Peter and Percy, who stood with noses flattened against the panes in the kitchen window.

"See anything?" he asked and they shook their heads. He marched up the lantern and lit it. Percy went to the door, opened it and slammed it shut again.

"It's not over yet," he spluttered, wiping water out of his eyes, while Peter at the window turned to laugh at him. Then he shouted suddenly:

"Dad! The stable—it's afire!"

They rushed for their coats on the wall. Hazel came into the kitchen crying, but Curly sent her away again, telling her to look after Heather Ann.

"Peter!" he commanded, "you take Barney—Percy, the mare! I'll take Dandy. If they won't come, throw your coats over their heads. Get 'em out of there! Don't let 'em back in again! Let's go!"

And then they plunged into the rain that swept all over them and lightning that blinded them. It was a race against time.

They saw flames leaping from the stable door and they were caught in the smoke that was swirling low around the building.

Even before they reached the stable door they could hear the horses coughing and they sought out themselves as they rushed into stalls to untie halter shanks and throw their coats over the heads of the trembling animals. Then they led them to safety through burning hay that was dropping well over them from the loft above.

After running the horses into the field behind the barn they rushed back to pull the wagon to safety and save the buggy, cutter and harness. But the frame stood at the end of the burning building. At that time Lige Barrier pulled into the yard to help them. Lige was soon followed by the Foster brothers and then Dummy McGowan came. They set a ladder against the harness roof and began dousing out the fire that had risen from the extreme heat. Another ladder was placed on the house roof, in case the wind changed direction.

The wind lessened, but the storm then passed on rapidly, the rain continuing on most of the afternoon.
